OFFICER WATCHED A MINE ENTRANCE

CHAS. LOWTHERS' ARREST

Watching for more than an hour like a cat after a rat, Constable Powell stood at the mouth of a mine in the hillside at the Walker sewer pipe works Saturday afternoon, anxiously awaiting the appearance of Charles Lowthers, a clay miner, who was then at work in the big yawning hole.

Armed with a warrant for Lowthers, which was issued from Justice McCarron's court at the instance of Miss Eva Reese, a blind girl who lives at Walker, and who filed an affidavit against him on a delicate charge, the constable made his way to the clay mine for the purpose of placing Lowthers under arrest.

Friends of the accused man saw the officer coming, and, suspecting his mission, hurried toward the clay mine in order to give Lowthers warning. The constable, not to be outwitted, started on a run and reached the mine ahead of the others. He made no effort to go on the inside, but patiently waited until Lowthers came out.

It was almost an hour and a half until the unsuspecting victim did show himself, and a moment later he was in the constable's grasp. Both boarded a street car and were soon before the magistrate, who is wont to deal out justice.

The plaintiff was presently in court and took a seat beside her traducer. It had been a question in the mind of the 'squire how the girl, owing to her inability to see, could identity Lowthers, but to his astonishment, the young man confessed his guilt.

It was Lowthers' desire to settle the case in the easiest manner possible and the girl also made known that she wanted to adjust matters quietly and amicably. The justice expressed a willingness to allow the couple to compromise and this tickled Lowthers. He dispelled his worried look and smiled in glee as he offered the girl a substantial sum of money to withdraw the charge.

To the extreme distress of the misled young man the girl gave him to understand that money was no inducement to her. Love was what she wanted. "Marry me or go to jail," she screamed defiantly, and Lowthers groaned with remorse.

"Take unto yourself a wife," admonished the court, "or I shall have to send you up sky high. You admit that you took advantage of this innocent girl and you should be made to suffer severely."

"I'll marry her," said Lowthers, and the ceremony was performed without delay.

Four Young Men in the Fight And One Badly Injured.

A fight that resulted seriously to one of the participants occurred in a poker room Saturday night in Diamond alley. No arrests were made, but the police are doing their utmost to learn the names of those who took part.

The trouble occurred as theresult of an argument over a "jack pot." Four young men were in the game and all became involved in the controversy. The argument waxed warm for a time until finally a blow was struck.

A small riot was immediately instituted and for a time it looked as if the poker room would be cleaned out. Spittoons were hurled, beer bottles were sent flying and even pistols were flourished. The proprietor tried every way to restore order, but not until one of the participants in the melee was lying on the floor weltering in his own blood, was the trouble stopped.

After the others had been ushered from the room the injured man was looked after. It was found that his scalp was half torn off and he was in a semi-conscious condition. He was taken to a surgeon's office, where his wounds were dressed, after which he was taken to his home, where he now lies in a serious condition.

Another serious row is said to have taken place last night in a down town saloon. It was a scrap of the free-for-all kind, and it is reported that all of the combatants were badly done up.

Died at the Infirmary.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — Robert Roberts died at the infirmary and was buried there late Saturday afternoon. He formerly lived in Lisbon.

SETTLED THE DISPUTE

CLAY HANDS AT LAUGHLIN NO. 2 WILL RESUME.

Material Now on Hand Will Be Worked Up And Better Sought.

President A. S. Hughes, with a committee from Pressers' local No. 4, settled the dispute over the bad condition of the clay at the Laughlin No. 2 this morning.

The committee consisted of President Alex Thompson, of No. 4; John Moore, Thomas Smith and James Stewart. Some time was spent in conference with Manager Harker and Secretary Ed Wells.

It was agreed finally that the men should work up the clay on hand and then an especial effort would be made on the part of the firm to improve the body. The clay hands will return to work tomorrow morning.

DIFFERENCES FIXED UP

This Is Five Cents Less Than the Rate They Asked of the Contractors.

The stone masons of the city have finally succeeded in patching up their difficulties with their employers, and for another year there will be no troubles in this trade.

Conferences were held for several days last week between a committee rpresenting the bosses and one from the ranks of the men. At the last of these, held Saturday afternoon, the men decided to make a concession in the shape of a reduction of five cents on the day from their first stand.

The proposition was accepted by the contractors and the men will in the future receive $3.82½ per day for nine hours, with an eight-hour day on Saturday.

WELLSVILLE'S VOTE

Promises to Be Large — Chances in Favor of Water Bonds.

The number of votes cast at Wellsville up to 1:30 was as follows:

First ward	146
Second ward	117
Third ward	151
Fourth ward	168
Fifth ward	110
Total	692

Indications are that there will be over 1,400 votes cast and that the water works bond proposition will carry.

LIGHT VOTE IN LISBON

Proposition to Issue Bonds for a Town Hall in Doubt.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — The prospects are that a light vote will be cast in Lisbon. The Democratic ticket is not expected to fare better than an usual, although there still remains one Republican name upon it. The vote on the $15,000 bond issue for a town hall is likely to extremely close.

State Treasurer I. B. Cameron and State Senator C. C. Connell were here today to vote.

ROAD BONDS

The Issue on Which St. Clair Township Is Voting Today.

St. Clair township is voting today on the proposition to issue bonds for the improvement of Calcutta road by paving. The chances are good in favor of the bond proposition.

Epworth League Reception.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church is arranging to give another reception in the near future. There are some 20 or 30 persons who will be taken into full membership by the league and it is the intention of that society to welcome them with a formal reception.

ELECTION IS QUIET

And a Light Vote Is Being Cast Throughout the City—Figures Showing the Vote Up to 2:45 p. m.

According to the very light vote being cast, it is evident that but little interest is being taken in the municipal election being held today.

It is expected the Prohibition candidates will run slightly ahead of their normal vote, but there is no chance of any of them winning.

The election is quiet. Up to 2:45 the following vote had been polled at the several precincts:

First ward, first precinct, 116.
Second precinct, 94.
Second ward, first precinct, 86.
Second precinct, 118.
Third ward, first precinct, 100.
Second precinct, 97.
Fourth ward, first precinct, 102.
Second precinct, 119.
Fifth ward, 135.

ANTI-SALOON MEN ARE WELL PLEASED

OLD LAWS STRENGTHENED

Amends the Dow Bill, Reaches the Saloons on Wheels And Makes Effective the Ordinances of Cities. Enforcement Made Easier.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, April 7.—The Anti-Saloon League has issued a statement defining the Beal municipal local option law and what it will accomplish. The league declares the new law is satisfactory for the following reasons:

It transfers power to prohibit saloons from the council to the people. It strengthens the weak points in ordinances that might have been passed by councilmen under the present council option law by dealing directly with the selling, furnishing and giving away of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. It effectually reaches the beer wagons or saloons on wheels. The Dow law is amended so that regulative ordinances may be passed by the council in saloon towns, controlling the selling, furnishing and giving away of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The ordinances which they had authority to pass were ineffective. The new law increases the money fine and does away with the jury trial for the first offense. It prohibits the manufacturer from selling, furnishing and giving away intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, except to bona fide retail liquor dealers and in wholesale quantities to persons residing outside of the municipality.

The enforcement of the law is made easier. It places additional restriction upon druggists who sell on prescription, prohibits express business in liquor in dry towns "C. O. D." Unless the sale is entirely completed at an outside point it cannot be sent to a prohibitory town. It does away with club rooms and bottling houses and a score of other speakeasies that were operated under the ordinance. It gives the people a uniform law for municipalities that cannot be tampered with by council.

The affidavit for the arrest of violators is made simple and clear by a special provision under the new law. Under the ordinance it was a technical and very difficult thing to draw, and very many of the affidavits prepared by the mayors were declared insufficient before the case was concluded and the officer was discouraged with

A WAY TO MAKE CAR LINE SAFE

A TRIFLING EXPENDITURE

For Posts And Guy Wire, a Prominent Citizen Argues, Would Remove All Danger of Cars Going Over the Hill.

"I ride on the street cars to Wellsville as little as possible," said a well-known professional man to a News Review reporter. "I cannot divest myself of the feeling that every time I enter a car I am taking my life in my hands. There is no question that the road is a dangerous one. Some day there will be a disaster that will plunge the people of both cities in mourning and compel the railroad managers to take action to prevent its repetition. I think the time to act is now.

"It is well known where the dangerous places are. They could be made safe against casualty by a very slight expenditure. How? Well, the danger lies in the cars getting off the track and plunging over the steep banks. That is admitted. Now, if posts were set on the lower side of the road at these danger spots, and strong wire strung from one post to the other, there would be no possibility of a car rolling over the embankment. Let them use the strong wire, known as guy wire, such as is used to hold telegraph and telephone poles in place. A few strands of such wire properly placed, would be as goo das a bank of earth in holding back a car that should roll against it, provided the posts were placed thickly enough, and the whole properly secured. An expenditure of $300 or $400 along the line would render it impossible for a car to go over the hill. Some of the way trees could be used to tie the wires on. Why, the railroad company is liable to pay more damages for one broken leg than it would cost to provide the necessary means of safety suggested.

"Another thing, the company loses business because of the public knowledge that its road is unsafe. After a recent rain, a large party of East Liverpool people had planned to go to Wellsville to some entertainment. A prominent lady announced to the others of the proposed party almost at the last moment: 'I cannot go. My husband tells me I must not. He has been acquainted with railroads all his life. He tells me the road to Wellsville is unsafe.' The lady did not go, nor did any of the party that had planned the trip to Wellsville. The railroad lost perhaps a hundred fares. That is only one instance.

"If any law could be brought to bear to make the railway company provide greater safety to its patrons, that law should be invoked. But, even without compulsion, it ought for its own interests to take steps to insure safety. The plan I have outlined would cost little and should be given a trial."

VOTERS, DO YOUR DUTY.

The polls will not close until 6:30 P. M. If you have not voted yet, hurry up and do your duty as a citizen. There are important issues involved in this election. No good Republican will stay at home and give the enemy a chance to have something to crow over. The vote is reported light thus far. There is still time to remedy this. East Liverpool is a Republican city and proposes to remain so. Let every Republican show himself alive and alert and determined to work for the good of his city and his party. Vote!

A BOY'S SUICIDE

Lived In Syracuse, O., and Had Relatives Here—No Cause Known.

Gould McBride, an employe at Mrs. A. V. Thompson's grocery, and Lawrence McBride, employed in a local pottery, have received the shocking news of the suicide of their cousin, Dow McBride, at Syracuse, O., which occurred last week.

The suicide was but 17 years of age and no cause for the act can even be conjectured. He had just eaten his breakfast and repaired to an adjoining room, ostensibly to don his new clothes, preparatory to making a visit in a neighboring town, when the report of a revolver was heard by his parents. They rushed into the room and were horrified to find their boy struggling in the throes of death.

A smoking revolver in his hand told the tale. He had placed the deadly weapon against his neck and fired, the bullet penetrating his brain.

NON-SUPPORT CHARGED

On Which a Hanoverton Wife Had Her Husband Arrested Saturday.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — Deputy Sheriff Allison went to Hanoverton yesterday and arrested Herbert L. Milburn. His wife Emma had secured a warrant for him on the charge of non-support of a minor child. Brought to Lisbon, Milburn gave bond for his appearance and returned home last evening.

FRIENDS AND VISITORS

M. E. Golding was a Beaver visitor today.

Mrs. John W. Patterson is visiting friends at Findlay for several days.

George Mayhew has returned from Toronto, where he spent Sunday with friends.

J. M. Buckle, of Pittsburg, visited G. R. Pattison and other friends here on Saturday.

Miss Margaret Bridge is very ill at her home on Third street, suffering from catarrh of the stomach.

Mrs. D. A. Devine will leave this evening for Atlantic City, where she will remain several days for the benefit of her health.

Mrs. George Dunn, of Akron, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks for several days, returned to her home today.

George Hamilton, of Fifth street, who has been spending several months in Florida and other southern states, returned home Saturday evening.

Rev. D. Lloyd and wife, of Cleveland, who have been visiting at the home of Rev. Edwin Weary for several days, returned to their home this morning.

Successful Operation—Mrs. Emerson Bowman, of Calcutta avenue, underwent a surgical operation Saturday afternoon which was a perfect success. From birth she had a growth upon her forehead just at the upper end of the nose which medical men called a dermoid cyst. It had grown and of late had given her considerable trouble. Drs. Hobbs and Bailey removed the growth, and there is no likelihood of it returning.

Will Stand Trial.

William Gillespie, who was caught in the raid at Walters' saloon last Sunday night, proposes to fight his case, and trial is set for Tuesday afternoon. Gillespie claims he was tending bar for Walters, and for that reason refuses to plead guilty to the charge against him.

Keenan May Quit.

Frank Keenan has had a disagreement with his financial backers and has announced his intetnion of quitting the "Hon. John Grigsby" company.

A Daughter—A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Porter, Pleasant Heights.

PRISONER GETS INJURED

With whisky under their belts and money in their pockets several victims were taken into the police fold Saturday night and Sunday. With one exception all paid their assessments this morning and the city's coffers thus enjoyed a substantial replenishment.

Among the unfortunates was Mrs. "Chip" Gamble, who was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen Woods and Bryan. While hilarious from a gigantic load of "canned booze" she raised a disturbance on College street and kept up her boisterous conduct until the officers took charge of her. When placed in a cell the woman raved like a demon and cursed the officers until she fell on her cot from exhaustion. The mayor fined her $3 and costs this morning, which she paid.

John Brighouse was again arrested Saturday night on the charge of disorderly conduct. Officer Saulsberry came upon "Jack" on lower Franklin street and arrested him at the instance of one of the man's sons, who claimed that he had been making threats and acting ugly.

Just as the officer was placing the prisoner in jail an accident happened which resulted in a severe injury to Brighouse. He objected to being searched, and while the policeman was holding his left wrist Brighouse gave a lunge and by so doing broke the wrist bone. Dr. Ogden reduced the fracture and the prisoner was allowed to go home.

Brighouse denied that he was disorderly and declared that he was only following his wife and son to keep them from going to a house of ill-repute.

William Henry was arrested last night for intoxication and taken to jail in the patrol by Woods and Betteridge. He paid $5.60 this morning and was released.

Woody Orr, while laboring under a tremendous load of amber stuff, fell into the hands of Officer Saulsberry, who locked him up. Woody donated $5.60 to the cause of justice.

Patrolmen Woods and Rhue arrested a stranger yesterday afternoon on the charge of vagrancy. He was accused of begging about the streets. Before the mayor this morning the man gave the name of William Damit. He said his home was at McKeesport and that he was on his way to Mingo, where a situation awaited him. He was released on his promise to get out of the city.

FOUGHT OVER A GIRL

Local Clerk And Potter Engage in a Fierce And Bloody Combat.

A fight occurred last night on Lincoln avenue between a well known young potter and and a clerk, which is said to have been much on the order of a prize fight and extremely bloody. The clerk was badly worsted, though neither of the combatants was able to work this morning.

The fight was the result of a rivalry, both of the young men being infatuated with the same girl. The clerk took her to church last evening and had just left her at her home when he encountered the potter. The fight began forthwith.

With whisky under their belts and money in their pockets several victims were taken into the police fold Saturday night and Sunday. With one exception all paid their assessments this morning and the city's coffers thus enjoyed a substantial replenishment.

Among the unfortunates was Mrs. "Chip" Gamble, who was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen Woods and Bryan. While hilarious from a gigantic load of "canned booze" she raised a disturbance on College street and kept up her boisterous conduct until the officers took charge of her. When placed in a cell the woman raved like a demon and cursed the officers until she fell on her cot from exhaustion. The mayor fined her $3 and costs this morning, which she paid.

John Brighouse was again arrested Saturday night on the charge of disorderly conduct. Officer Saulsberry came upon "Jack" on lower Franklin street and arrested him at the instance of one of the man's sons, who claimed that he had been making threats and acting ugly.

Just as the officer was placing the prisoner in jail an accident happened which resulted in a severe injury to Brighouse. He objected to being searched, and while the policeman was holding his left wrist Brighouse gave a lunge and by so doing broke the wrist bone. Dr. Ogden reduced the fracture and the prisoner was allowed to go home.

Brighouse denied that he was disorderly and declared that he was only following his wife and son to keep them from going to a house of ill-repute.

William Henry was arrested last night for intoxication and taken to jail in the patrol by Woods and Betteridge. He paid $5.60 this morning and was released.

Woody Orr, while laboring under a tremendous load of amber stuff, fell into the hands of Officer Saulsberry, who locked him up. Woody donated $5.60 to the cause of justice.

Patrolmen Woods and Rhue arrested a stranger yesterday afternoon on the charge of vagrancy. He was accused of begging about the streets. Before the mayor this morning the man gave the name of William Daffit. He said his home was at McKeesport and that he was on his way to Mingo, where a situation awaited him. He was released on his promise to get out of the city.

FOUGHT OVER A GIRL

A fight occurred last night on Lincoln avenue between a well known young potter and and a clerk, which is said to have been much on the order of a prize fight and extremely bloody. The clerk was badly worsted, though neither of the combatants was able to work this morning.

The fight was the result of a rivalry, both of the young men being infatuated with the same girl. The clerk took her to church last evening and had just left her at her home when he encountered the potter. The fight began forthwith.

EAST END

SELECTION OF A PASTOR

By the Second U. P. Congregation May Be Made Very Soon.

It may be that a new pastor for the Second U. P. church will be selected sooner than many supposed. At the evening service at this congregation last evening an announcement was made that a meeting of the congregation would be held on the evening of April 16 for the purpose of issuing a call for a permanent pastor. Although a sufficient number of supplies had been looked after to fill the pulpit of this church for several months, it is the general opinion in the East End that it is now time to make a selection, and from those who have preached at the church since Rev. J. R. Greene resigned. It is quite certain that the congregation is now ready to make a selection, but who it will call has not been given out.

At both services yesterday Rev. L. L. Grey, of Knoxville, preached two interesting sermons. It may be that Rev. Mr. Grey will be asked to preach at this church very soon again.

HASTY DEPARTURE

Made By a Young Man Against Whom a Charge Was Entered.

In the court of Justice L. W. Carman a serious charge has been filed by Sallie Rector, aged 22 years, against David S. Gorrell, aged 24 years, formerly of Jackson county, W. Va. A constable went to the East End Saturday afternoon to arrest Gorrell, but he was advised of the charge by his friends and left for West Virginia.

He is supposed to have left for southern parts on a boat Saturday evening and it is said that Miss Rector will go to Jackson county this evening, where Gorrell is now supposed to be located. The parties have been residing in Dixonville.

LOST HIS SKIFF

But Followed Down the River Till He Found And Recovered It.

George McKinnon, of the East End, had a valuable skiff stolen between Friday evening and early Saturday morning by a supposed "river rat." As soon as the theft was discovered McKinnon decided to locate the skiff at all cost.

Saturday afternoon he left for a short trip down the river, and while passing between Mingo and Steubenville the skiff was located. Yesterday it was placed on a boat and brought to this city. Who took the skiff is not known.

Bricklaying Finished.

The bricklayers who have been constructing a brick enclosure about the new boiler at the power house have completed their task and have left for their homes. All the outside conenctions have been made with the boiler and it will not be many days now until steam will be raised for the first time. When the boiler has been found to be in good working order the use of some of the smaller boilers will be discontinued.

Prohibition Alliance Meeting.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a branch of the Prohibition Alliance in the East End will be held next Thursday evening at the residence of Dr. William M. Calhoun, Virginia avenue. It is thought at this session permanent officers will be elected.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

A social will be given in the Ferguson & Larkins hall tomorrow evening by the Ladies' Aid society of the Erie street M. E. church.

Next Sunday at the Second U. P. church the morning and evening services will be in charge of Rev. R. W. Thompson, of Mays, Ind.

A two-barrel well was brought in last Friday in the vicinity of the Ohioville, which proves there is still oil in that section, which has not been worked extensively of late.

Attachment Proceedings.

Before Justice L. W. Carman Saturday afternoon W. B. Azdell entered attachment proceedings against J. M. Shingleton, for $20.50, claimed due for produce and rental.

Application has been made for the appointment of a guardian for Uriah B. Royer, of Perry township, an alleged imbecile.

The sale of realty as ordered by John H. Mick, administrator of John Mick, of Madison township, has been approved and confirmed.

J. F. Johnston, guardian of Mary Thomas, of New Waterford, has been ordered to sell his ward's interest in the realty.

THE MAYORALITY FIGHT

Is the Principal One at the Salem Election—Baker the Winner.

Salem, April 7.— (Special) — The main interest in the election here centers on the mayoralty fight, between Al Carlisle, Democrat, and J. B. Baker, Republican. Baker is a justice of the peace. Strenuous efforts have been made by the Democracy to make it appear that he is not a friend of union labor, and voted and worked for Noragon for sheriff.

A committee of trades and labor council investigated the charges and found them baseless, and has published its findings. Baker will be elected.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

Toronto, April 7.—While walking on the C. & P. railroad tracks below the American China company's plant Saturday morning, Alexander Fullen, a laborer, was struck by eastbound passenger train No. 336 and seriously injured.

Fullen's escape from instant death was miraculous, his head being wedged in between the front wheels and pilot of the locomotive. He was placed in the baggage car and brought to the C. & P. station, where doctors temporarily relieved his pain. He was then taken to his home near Costonia.

The injured man's jaw was broken in two places, all his teeth were knocked out and he sustained several cuts about the head. It is also thought he is hurt internally.

KRAENZLEIN TELLS HOW TO BE A HURDLER.

Says a Man Must Be Both a Fast Sprinter and a Heady Jumper.

Since the national championships of the year 1897 A. C. Kraenzlein of the University of Pennsylvania has been the king of the hurdlers. He has won American, Canadian, English, intercollegiate, metropolitan and world's championships and holds the present world's records for both high and low hurdle events over the regulation obstacles.

His record for running 120 yards over ten hurdles 3 feet 6 inches in height is 15 1-5 seconds and for running 220 yards over obstacles 2 feet 6 inches in height 23 3-5 seconds.

After Kraenzlein won his first championship over the sticks he was never beaten in a scratch race and retired, as all champions should retire, an unbeaten man in his specialty. He was also famous as a broad jumper and held the world's record of 24 feet 6½ inches until it was eclipsed by Meyer Prinstein of Syracuse university, who established the present record of 24 feet 7¼ inches.

"Perhaps my exceptional ability as a hurdler and broad jumper is due to my height, combined with the unusual power in the thighs with which nature has endowed me. Good hurdlers, especially over the high obstacles, are generally tall men. In support of this statement I might mention the former champions, S. Chase and the late F. C. Puffer. So it therefore is apparent that physical conformation has a great deal to do with the success of a hurdler.

"Hurdling undoubtedly requires good eyesight and a little nerve. I fortunately possessed both, and to this fact as much as to my speed and strength I attribute my success.

"It is difficult for a man with poor sight to cut the hurdles close, and an athlete a bit timid in a race is sure to waste time by clearing the obstacles too high. In fact, style counts for a great deal in hurdling.

"As soon as I had learned to run the hurdles properly, through the excellent coaching of Trainer Mike Murphy, I simply knocked seconds off my time. Without the benefit of his thorough teaching I doubt whether I would have ever made the present records. Before I put myself under the tutelage of Trainer Murphy I would clear the bars in any old way.

A. C. KRAENZLEIN HURDLING.

"A first class hurdler is essentially an excellent sprinter and jumper. A man who cannot run the hundred in 10 1-5 seconds will seldom beat 16 seconds for the high hurdles. A hurdler should practice sprinting 'starts' the same as a sprinter, and a little high and broad jumping will develop his spring and make the obstacles easier to clear.

"Running over the hurdles should be practiced until a man takes unconsciously the right number of steps between the obstacles. So long as he has to count the steps he will be handicapped in a race, and he should do no racing at all until he takes the proper number of steps naturally. The slightest uncertainty is liable to cause hesitation and the loss of the race.

"Some athletes can hurdle with either leg, and this is often a big advantage, especially when the path is wet and you slip or trip. I can hurdle with both legs, but I only practice clearing the bars with the left leg. It is only when a man is thrown out of his stride that ability to hurdle with either leg is useful, and its use is generally confined to the low hurdles. Men who can hurdle with but one leg are generally just as successful as the man with the ability of using either leg.

"The start is even more important in hurdling than in sprinting. In both the high and low events the distance to the first obstacle is fifteen yards, and the number of steps taken is invariably nine. Hurdlers get off the mark as fast as sprinters and clear the first obstacle at their greatest possible speed. It is only after the first two obstacles are cleared that style begins to count. A man who can just shave the top of the bars in a neat way will gain at least a foot on an awkward hurdler at each obstacle.

Spiders and Alcohol.

A student of natural history had been in the habit of immersing for preservation his different specimens of spiders and ants in bottles of alcohol. He saw that they struggled for a few minutes, but he thought that sensation was soon extinguished and that they were soon free from suffering.

On one occasion he wished to preserve a large female spider and twenty-four of her young ones that he had captured. He put the mother into a bottle of alcohol and saw that after a few moments she folded up her legs upon her body and was at rest. He then put into the bottle the young ones, who, of course, manifested acute pain.

What was his surprise to see the mother arouse herself from her lethargy, dart around and gather her young ones to her bosom, fold her legs over them, again relapse into insensibility until at last death came to her relief and the limbs, no longer controlled by this maternal instinct, released their grasp and became dead! He has never since repeated the experiment, but has applied chloroform before immersion.

The Parsees.

The Parsees are sun worshipers, and it is an interesting sight to see throngs of them on the shore of the bay as the sun rises, apparently from the sea, performing the simple rites of their religion, the fluttering robes showing their fine figures to the best advantage as the day begins. Their religious practices are simple in the extreme, consisting mainly in strict dietary rules and personal cleanliness.

The rigid observance of sanitary laws produces the natural result of perfect health among the adults—large families of active, healthy children and immense numbers of old men, gray bearded, white haired, but erect and princely in their gait and attitude despite the naturally enervating character of the tropical climate.

Safeguarding Himself.

"Are you a detective?" asked Mr. Meekton.

"I am," answered the man with the turndown collar and the white necktie.

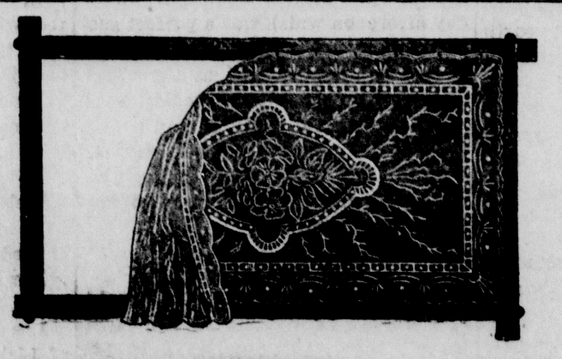

"Well, I want to employ you. I want you to get out your false whiskers and your dark lantern and dog my footsteps night and day. Henrietta's gone out of town to visit some relatives, and I don't want her to be obliged to take my word for anything."—Washington Star.

KRAENZLEIN TELLS HOW TO BE A HURDLER.

Says a Man Must Be Both a Fast Sprinter and a Heady Jumper.

Since the national championships of the year 1897 A. C. Kraenzlein of the University of Pennsylvania has been the king of the hurdlers. He has won American, Canadian, English, intercollegiate, metropolitan and world's championships and holds the present world's records for both high and low hurdle events over the regulation obstacles.

His record for running 120 yards over ten hurdles 3 feet 6 inches in height is 15 1-5 seconds and for running 220 yards over obstacles 2 feet 6 inches in height 23 3-5 seconds.

After Kraenzlein won his first championship over the sticks he was never beaten in a scratch race and retired, as all champions should retire, an unbeaten man in his specialty. He was also famous as a broad jumper and held the world's record of 24 feet 6½ inches until it was eclipsed by Meyer Prinstein of Syracuse university, who established the present record of 24 feet 7¼ inches.

"Perhaps my exceptional ability as a hurdler and broad jumper is due to my height, combined with the unusual power in the thighs with which nature has endowed me. Good hurdlers, especially over the high obstacles, are generally tall men. In support of this statement I might mention the former champions, S. Chase and the late F. C. Puffer. So it therefore is apparent that physical conformation has a great deal to do with the success of a hurdler.

"Hurdling undoubtedly requires good eyesight and a little nerve. I fortunately possessed both, and to this fact as much as to my speed and strength I attribute my success.

"It is difficult for a man with poor sight to cut the hurdles close, and an athlete a bit timid in a race is sure to waste time by clearing the obstacles too high. In fact, style counts for a great deal in hurdling.

"As soon as I had learned to run the hurdles properly, through the excellent coaching of Trainer Mike Murphy, I simply knocked seconds off my time. Without the benefit of his thorough teaching I doubt whether I would have ever made the present records. Before I put myself under the tutelage of Trainer Murphy I would clear the bars in any old way.

A. C. KRAENZLEIN HURDLING.

"A first class hurdler is essentially an excellent sprinter and jumper. A man who cannot run the hundred in 10 1-5 seconds will seldom beat 16 seconds for the high hurdles. A hurdler should practice sprinting 'starts' the same as a sprinter, and a little high and broad jumping will develop his spring and make the obstacles easier to clear.

"Running over the hurdles should be practiced until a man takes unconsciously the right number of steps between the obstacles. So long as he has to count the steps he will be handicapped in a race, and he should do no racing at all until he takes the proper number of steps naturally. The slightest uncertainty is liable to cause hesitation and the loss of the race.

"Some athletes can hurdle with either leg, and this is often a big advantage, especially when the path is wet and you slip or trip. I can hurdle with both legs, but I only practice clearing the bars with the left leg. It is only when a man is thrown out of his stride that ability to hurdle with either leg is useful, and its use is generally confined to the low hurdles. Men who can hurdle with but one leg are generally just as successful as the man with the ability of using either leg.

"The start is even more important in hurdling than in sprinting. In both the high and low events the distance to the first obstacle is fifteen yards, and the number of steps taken is invariably nine. Hurdlers get off the mark as fast as sprinters and clear the first obstacle at their greatest possible speed. It is only after the first two obstacles are cleared that style begins to count. A man who can just shave the top of the bars in a neat way will gain at least a foot on an awkward hurdler at each obstacle.

Spiders and Alcohol.

A student of natural history had been in the habit of immersing for preservation his different specimens of spiders and ants in bottles of alcohol. He saw that they struggled for a few minutes, but he thought that sensation was soon extinguished and that they were soon free from suffering.

On one occasion he wished to preserve a large female spider and twenty-four of her young ones that he had captured. He put the mother into a bottle of alcohol and saw that after a few moments she folded up her legs upon her body and was at rest. He then put into the bottle the young ones, who, of course, manifested acute pain.

What was his surprise to see the mother arouse herself from her lethargy, dart around and gather her young ones to her bosom, fold her legs over them, again relapse into insensibility until at last death came to her relief and the limbs, no longer controlled by this maternal instinct, released their grasp and became dead! He has never since repeated the experiment, but has applied chloroform before immersion.

The Parsees.

The Parsees are sun worshipers, and it is an interesting sight to see throngs of them on the shore of the bay as the sun rises, apparently from the sea, performing the simple rites of their religion, the fluttering robes showing their fine figures to the best advantage as the day begins. Their religious practices are simple in the extreme, consisting mainly in strict dietary rules and personal cleanliness.

The rigid observance of sanitary laws produces the natural result of perfect health among the adults—large families of active, healthy children and immense numbers of old men, gray bearded, white haired, but erect and princely in their gait and attitude despite the naturally enervating character of the tropical climate.

Safeguarding Himself.

"I am." answered the man with the turndown collar and the white necktie.

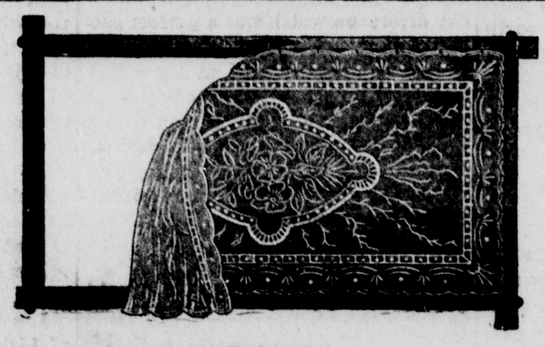

"Well, I want to employ you. I want you to get out your false whiskers and your dark lantern and dog my footsteps night and day. Henrietta's gone out of town to visit some relatives, and I don't want her to be obliged to take my word for anything."—Washington Star.

Sentiment as to Re-districting—Legislators Get Letters From Congressmen Opposing Any Change In the Present Districts.

Columbus, April 7.—(Special)—"Out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh." It is no doubt in this that the reason for the earnest protests being filed by members of congress against a change of any character being made in the present congressional districts, can be found. Almost without exception the congressmen have either by person or by letter sent in these protests during the past week and the burden of all has been the same, "don't make any changes, but if you do, don't change me." If a caucus had been held and this sentiment agreed upon it could not have been more unanimous. Now the result of all this has been just what might be expected—a stregthening of the forces in favor of the Patterson bill and against a revision of districts. Last week there seemed no chance of changing any but the Twelfth (Columbus) district, and but little chance of changing that. This week hope of doing anything has slipped away. Unless there be a revulsion of sentiment within the next few days the congressional districts will remain as they are. The friends of a change in the Twelfth still remain unshaken in allegiance to the justice of their demands, however, and under the guidance of Representative Pamita of Wood, are not disposed to hang their harps on a willow tree and cry quits so long as there is a fighting chance. The measure comes up as a special order of business next Wernesday morning and the final vote will undoubtedly be taken on it at that time. When the result is announced the longest and perhaps the bitterest contest of the present session will have ended. It will probably leave its scars behind. Such fights always do. As the last effort of those who favor a change and are against the Patterson bill, a conference was held at the Neil House, and the matter was discussed long and somewhat loud. It was attended by Speaker McKinnon, Representatives Painter, Guerin and others. The matter was gone over in detail and discussed in all its phases past, present and future. As the result of this a petition is now being circulated to which it is hoped signers representing a majority of the house, will have been obtained by next Wednesday pledging themselves to a vote for such changes as may be proposed. This represents the last hope of those who are opposed to leaving things as they are. It is a desperate chance holding out but little of promise. Yet it's worth the taking.

Governor Nash and all those forces known as administrative are urgently pressing upon the legislature the need of a change in the primary election laws of the state and that a change is needed Republicans and Democrats alike agree. The only difference is the method by which the end sought to be attained can best be brought about. Out of the discussion attending the matter a bill has come drafted by Allen W. Thurman and Judge Okey, both of Columbus, which seems to solve the difficulty and staggers one by its simplicity and plainness. In short the bill provides that all nominations for office shall be made by primary system and that conventions except for state offices be done away with. The selection of men to stand as nominees is to be brought as closely to the people as possible. But the bill does more than this. It says that the primaries of the different parties shall be held on the same day and at the same hour, and that none but qualified electors shall be allowed to take part. The natural outcome of this measure, if adopted, will be an abolition of conventions entirely and the nomination of all officials by the primary plan. This is but the first step in the evolution which is certain to bring that about.

Governor Nash is a man much freer from care than he was a week ago. Every one of his tax bills, about which he has talked by day and dreamed at night, has been reported back favorably with minor amendments attached, and on Thursday of next week they will be enacted into laws. There are seven of these measures fitting into one another as neatly as the cogs of a wheel. The first of these is the Willis bill placing a tax of one-tenth of one-per cent. upon the issued and paid up capital stock of domestic corporations. A slight amendment to this excludes from its provisions Ohio corporations that are now out of business but have not surrendered their charters. The next is the second Willis bill, another much discussed measure, putting a tax of one-tenth of one per cent. upon such proportion of the authorized capital stock of foreign corporations as is represented in Ohio. Then comes the Cole bill extending the provisions of the present excise law so as to include telephone, telegraph, express and interurban railway companies and assessing all 1 per cent of their gross earnings. To this a very humble amendment has been added simply making the secretary of state a member of the board to receive the returns from these institutions. The board now consists of the auditor of state, treasurer of state and attorney general. Next in turn is the Harding measure which permits the holders of stock in an Ohio corporation to purchase stock in another state concern providing it is not that of the same character nor in similar kind of business. There are two by Senator Longworth. One removes from the stockholder of an incorporation who sells his holdings the unpleasant thought that he may thereafter be held for debts owed by the concern at the time of his retirement. His liability ceases with his going out. The other Longworth measure makes of the governor and secretary of state a board to remit penalties assessed against foreign corporations for failure to pay the initial fee required before being admitted to do business in the state. They are authorized to hear arguments and decide cases. The last of these is a resolution by Senator Wirt proposing a constitutional amendment classifying all taxable property and assessing a uniform tax upon all property in a certain class These in the main make up the elaborate taxation scheme of the governor. A few minor bills supplementing them are being drafted but they constitute only the stray straws which are needed to make the stack complete. With the passage of the main seven the governor will feel his task done. How they are to work in effect remains to be seen.

Elated by their victory in the house—their rather easy victory in fact—the advocates of canal retention thought to win spurs so easily in the senate. Wherein they were fooled. Immediately after the Seiber bill had been adopted in the lower branch declaring it to be the policy of the state to keep the canals in use the measure was messaged over to the senate. Noses had been counted and it was thought there were sufficient votes to duplicate the action of the house. "But the best laid plans of men oft go wrong and this was an instance. When the measure came up for first reading a motion was made that the rules be suspended and it be given a second reading. This was to be followed by a motion that it be read the third time and put on its immediate passage. The vote on the motion to read the second time was a distinct shock to its supporters. Instead of going through it was defeated and substantially defeated to. Now the backers are wondering whether their carefully laid plans are to be defeated and the senate refuse to concur with the house. While they are kept busy watching this the opponents of the canals are busy working with the finance committee urging that a limited—and a very limited—appropriation be allowed for the maintenance of these waterways. If the canals are maintained and given sufficient money to keep up anything fordering on a respectable appearance they will owe a debt of gratitude which can hardly be repaid.

Much complaint has been received from members of the fire and police departments in those cities where they have pension funds against the manner in which it has been proposed to raise money for the maintenance of these most worthy adjuncts. The first suggestion was that a portion of the Dow tax be converted into the fund, but both the police and firemen strenuously objection to this. In response to that the plan of using of a part of the money coming in from the tax placed upon insurance companies was urged as the proper method. But there was objection to this. An entirely agreeable method has, however, now suggested itself. A bill will be prepared levying a tax of four-tenths mills in all muncipalities where these funds now exist and authorizing such a tax in municipalities where they may later be created. This will raise an amount sufficient to meet every demand and be entirely agreeable to the members of both of these departments.

There was a somewhat unexpected action in the house Thursday when the Harding bill establishing a state board for the study of tuberculosis and the care of afflicted patients was defeated in the house. It was done probably because of a failure of the members to appreciate the gravity of the situation or the importance of the measure. Indeed until one sees the statistics and knows the story it is hard to realize the number of people who yearly die from this disease, and who by proper care and treatment might be saved. The ultimate object of the bill is to establish a state sanitarium, where patients may receive the most proper care. An effort will be made to reconsider the measure, and it will undoubtedly be taken up again and this time passed and made into a law.

The effort to extend the term of Mr. Blackburn, state dairy and food commissioner, for eleven months, which received ready endorsement in the senate, is likely to fail in the house. There is a story undercurrent opposition to it, not because of feeling against the official, but through the dislike to establish a new custom and set the precedent of giving men more office than that for which the people elected them. As a straw to show how the wind blows, the bill came up in the lower branch for its first reading and an effort was made to advance it on the calendar. It failed completely, and went down under a protest of emphatic "noes." This does not, of couse, presage with certainty the ultimate defeat of the bill, but it indicates the sentiment of the members, and shows how out of sympathy they are with such a move.

WILL CONSIDER VITAL TOPICS.

Newly Constituted National Executive Board of Miners Meets in Indianapolis Today.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 7.—The meeting of the newly constituted national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America will begin in this city today to consider questions of vital importance to the largest labor organization in the world, and to interests in which millions of dollars are invested. None of the officials or members of the board who arrived yesterday would state what is to be considered.

In a general way it is admitted that the situation in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions and in the bituminous coal fields of Virginia and West Virginia is to be laid before the board. Each of the 23 sub-districts has one representative. The organization is scattered through 24 states.

The powers of the board relating to the affairs of the organization are practically unlimited, although it is subject to the dictation of the national conventions. Nearly all the members of the national executive board are here.

HAIL TWO INCHES DEEP.

Destructive Storm Makes Clean Sweep Over Eight-Mile Tract in Texas.

Paris, Tex., April 7.—A special from Prattville, Tex., says a destructive storm swept over that place last night between 8 and 9 o'clock. For 20 minutes there was a perfect flood of rain and hail. It extended only between Prattville and Pacio, eight miles apart. Along the path of the storm, which resembles a railroad track, not a leaf nor a particle of fruit is left. Hail fully two inches deep is still lying on the ground. The Methodist church at Prattville was blown from its foundation, and a dwelling house was lifted up and carried into an adjacent field. Two stores at Pacio and a farm house were blown down. A store at Pacio was completely wrecked, and the goods scattered for miles.

Mr. Arthur Chapman, writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

Peculiarities of the Opossum.

The American opossum is one of the most curious animals living in the United States. It is the only one that carries its young in a pouch like the kangaroo. It is the only animal that can feign death perfectly. It is remarkable for hanging by its tail like a monkey. It has hands resembling those of a human being. Its snout is like a hog's, while its mouth is liberally furnished with teeth. Its eyes are like a rat's, and it hisses like a snake.

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

The eye and the ear have long been regarded as marvels of mechanism, quite the most wonderful things in the world. But compared with the implements of a present day laboratory the sensitiveness of all human organs seems gross enough. A photographic plate, coupled with a telescope, will reveal the presence of millions of stars whose light does not affect the retina in the least. The microscope, too, with its revelations of the world of the infinitely small, tells us how crude, after all, is this most delicate of the senses. Indeed, we may liken it to a piano where only a single octave, toward the middle, sounds. From the ultra violet to the lowest reaches of the spectrum is a range of some nine octaves of light vibrations, of which, save for our new mechanical senses, we should never have been conscious of but one.

The ear hears little of what is going on around us. By means of a microphone the tread of a fly sounds like the tramp of cavalry. Our heat sense is very vague. We need a variation of at least one-fifth of a degree on a thermometer to realize any difference in temperature. Professor Langley's little bolometer will note the difference of a millionth of a degree. It is two hundred thousand times as sensitive as our skin.—Carl Snyder in Harper's Magazine.

Falling From a Great Height.

It will be remembered that Mr. Whymper, who had a severe succession of falls once in the Alps, without losing his consciousness, declares emphatically that as he bounded from one rock to another he felt absolutely no pain. The same thing happens on the battlefield. The entrance of the bullet into the body is not felt, and it is not till he feels the blood flowing or a limb paralyzed that the soldier knows he is wounded.

Persons who have had several limbs broken by a fall do not know which limb is broken till they try to rise. At the moment of a fall the whole intellectual activity is increased to an extraordinary degree. There is not a trace of anxiety. One considers quickly what will happen. This is by no means the consequence of "presence of mind." It is rather the product of absolute necessity. A solemn composure takes possession of the victim. Death by fall is a beautiful one. Great thoughts fill the victim's soul. They fall painlessly into a great blue sky.

Drugstore Humor.

A Philadelphia druggist has made the following collection of amusing missives that have been sent to him from time to time:

"I have a cute pain in my baby's stummick. Please give bearer something to cure it."

"My little girl has eat up a lot of buttons. Please send a nemetic by the enclosed boy."

"Dear doctor a dog bit my child on the leg please send some cork plaster and cutter eyes."

"Pleas send by bearer one postal card. Also kindly give bearer, my son, some licorice root."

Deer doctor wot is good for tirefoy fever send some quick I got it."

"Let my Johny have a glas of sody watter. I wud come myself but I am washing. P. S. the 5 cents is for the sody watter."

"If you can fill the enclosed prescription for 25 cents do so. If not return by bearer."

Ants That Strike.

Certain kinds of black ants have little yellow ants which do most of their work for them. Once in awhile these little yellow fellows will go on strike, and the "blacks" try to force them back to work by cutting off their food supply. If that does not succeed, they will attack the strikers in force or make a raid and get another gang of "yellows" into the colony. But the newcomers, as a rule, join the strikers. The strike ends by the "yellows" escaping and founding a colony for themselves, or they give in and settle down to work again.

The measure comes up as a special order of business next Wernesday morning and the final vote will undoubtedly be taken on it at that time. When the result is announced the longest and perhaps the bitterest contest of the present session will have ended. It will probably leave its scars behind. Such fights always do. As the last effort of those who favor a change and are against the Patterson bill, a conference was held at the Neil House, and the matter was discussed long and somewhat loud. It was attended by Speaker McKinnon, Representatives Painter, Guerin and others. The matter was gone over in detail and discussed in all its phases past, present and future. As the result of this a petition is now being circulated to which it is hoped signers representing a majority of the house, will have been obtained by next Wednesday pledging themselves to a vote for such changes as may be proposed. This represents the last hope of those who are opposed to leaving things as they are. It is a desperate chance holding out but little of promise. Yet it's worth the taking.

Governor Nash and all those forces known as administrative are urgently pressing upon the legislature the need of a change in the primary election laws of the state and that a change is needed Republicans and Democrats alike agree. The only difference is the method by which the end sought to be attained can best be brought about. Out of the discussion attending the matter a bill has come drafted by Allen W. Thurman and Judge Okey, both of Columbus, which seems to solve the difficulty and staggers one by its simplicity and plainness. In short the bill provides that all nominations for office shall be made by primary system and that conventions except for state offices be done away with. The selection of men to stand as nominees is to be brought as closely to the people as possible. But the bill does more than this. It says that the primaries of the different parties shall be held on the same day and at the same hour, and that none but qualified electors shall be allowed to take part. The natural outcome of this measure. If adopted, will be an abolition of conventions entirely and the nomination of all officials by the primary plan. This is but the first step in the evolution which is certain to bring that about.

Governor Nash is a man much freer from care than he was a week ago. Every one of his tax bills, about which he has talked by day and dreamed at night, has been reported back favorably with minor amendments attached, and on Thursday of next week they will be enacted into laws. There are seven of these measures fitting into one another as neatly as the cogs of a wheel. The first of these is the Willis bill placing a tax of one-tenth of one-per cent. upon the issued and paid up capital stock of domestic corporations. A slight amendment to this excludes from its provisions Ohio corporations that are now out of business but have not surrendered their charters. The next is the second Willis bill, another much discussed measure, putting a tax of one-tenth of one per cent. upon such proportion of the authorized capital stock of foreign corporations as is represented in Ohio. Then comes the Cole bill extending the provisions of the present excise law so as to include telephone, telegraph, express and interurban railway companies and assessing all 1 per cent of their gross earnings. To this a very humble amendment has been added simply making the secretary of state a member of the board to receive the returns from these institutions. The board now consists of the auditor of state, treasurer of state and attorney general. Next in turn is the Harding measure which permits the holders of stock in an Ohio corporation to purchase stock in another state concern providing it is not that of the same character nor in similar kind of business. There are two by Senator Longworth. One removes from the stockholder of an incorporation who sells his holdings the unpleasant thought that he may thereafter be held for debts owed by the concern at the time of his retirement. His liability ceases with his going out. The other Longworth measure makes of the governor and secretary of state a board to remit penalties assessed against foreign corporations for failure to pay the initial fee required before being admitted to do business in the state. They are authorized to hear arguments and decide cases. The last of these is a resolution by Senator Wirt proposing a constitutional amendment classifying all taxable property and assessing a uniform tax upon all property in a certain class These in the main make up the elaborate taxation scheme of the governor. A few minor bills supplementing them are being drafted but they constitute only the stray straws which are needed to make the stack complete. With the passage of the main seven the governor will feel his task done. How they are to work in effect remains to be seen.

Elated by their victory in the house—their rather easy victory in fact—the advocates of canal retention thought to win spurs so easily in the senate. Wherein they were fooled. Immediately after the Seiber bill had been adopted in the lower branch declaring it to be the policy of the state to keep the canals in use the measure was messaged over to the senate. Noses had been counted and it was thought there were sufficient votes to duplicate the action of the house. "But the best laid plans of men oft go wrong and this was an instance. When the measure came up for first reading a motion was made that the rules be suspended and it be given a second reading. This was to be followed by a motion that it be read the third time and put on its immediate passage. The vote on the motion to read the second time was a distinct shock to its supporters. Instead of going through it was defeated and substantially defeated to. Now the backers are wondering whether their carefully laid plans are to be defeated and the senate refuse to concur with the house. While they are kept busy watching this the opponents of the canals are busy working with the finance committee urging that a limited—and a very limited—appropriation be allowed for the maintenance of these waterways. If the canals are maintained and given sufficient money to keep up anything fordering on a respectable appearance they will owe a debt of gratitude which can hardly be repaid.

Much complaint has been received from members of the fire and police departments in those cities where they have pension funds against the manner in which it has been proposed to raise money for the maintenance of these most worthy adjuncts. The first suggestion was that a portion of the Dow tax be converted into the fund, but both the police and firemen strenuously objection to this. In response to that the plan of using of a part of the money coming in from the tax placed upon insurance companies was urged as the proper method. But there was objection to this. An entirely agreeable method has, however, now suggested itself. A bill will be prepared levying a tax of four-tenths mills in all muncipalities where these funds now exist and authorizing such a tax in municipalities where they may later be created. This will raise an amount sufficient to meet every demand and be entirely agreeable to the members of both of these departments.

There was a somewhat unexpected action in the house Thursday when the Harding bill establishing a state board for the study of tuberculosis and the care of afflicted patients was defeated in the house. It was done probably because of a failure of the members to appreciate the gravity of the situation or the importance of the measure. Indeed until one sees the statistics and knows the story it is hard to realize the number of people who yearly die from this disease, and who by proper care and treatment might be saved. The ultimate object of the bill is to establish a state sanitarium, where patients may receive the most proper care. An effort will be made to reconsider the measure, and it will undoubtedly be taken up again and this time passed and made into a law.

The effort to extend the term of Mr. Blackburn, state dairy and food commissioner, for eleven months, which received ready endorsement in the senate, is likely to fail in the house. There is a story undercurrent opposition to it, not because of feeling against the official, but through the dislike to establish a new custom and set the precedent of giving men more office than that for which the people elected them. As a straw to show how the wind blows, the bill came up in the lower branch for its first reading and an effort was made to advance it on the calendar. It failed completely, and went down under a protest of emphatic "noes." This does not, of couse, presage with certainty the ultimate defeat of the bill, but it indicates the sentiment of the members, and shows how out of sympathy they are with such a move.

WILL CONSIDER VITAL TOPICS.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 7.—The meeting of the newly constituted national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America will begin in this city today to consider questions of vital importance to the largest labor organization in the world, and to interests in which millions of dollars are invested. None of the officials or members of the board who arrived yesterday would state what is to be considered.

In a general way it is admitted that the situation in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions and in the bituminous coal fields of Virginia and West Virginia is to be laid before the board. Each of the 23 sub-districts has one representative. The organization is scattered through 24 states.

The powers of the board relating to the affairs of the organization are practically unlimited, although it is subject to the dictation of the national conventions. Nearly all the members of the national executive board are here.

HAIL TWO INCHES DEEP.

Destructive Storm Makes Clean Sweep Over Eight-Mile Tract in Texas.

Paris, Tex., April 7.—A special from Prattville, Tex., says a destructive storm swept over that place last night between 8 and 9 o'clock. For 20 minutes there was a perfect flood of rain and hail. It extended only between Prattville and Pacio, eight miles apart. Along the path of the storm, which resembles a railroad track, not a leaf nor a particle of fruit is left. Hail fully two inches deep is still lying on the ground. The Methodist church at Prattville was blown from its foundation, and a dwelling house was lifted up and carried into an adjacent field. Two stores at Pacio and a farm house were blown down. A store at Pacio was completely wrecked, and the goods scattered for miles.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman, writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

Peculiarities of the Opossum.

The American opossum is one of the most curious animals living in the United States. It is the only one that carries its young in a pouch like the kangaroo. It is the only animal that can feign death perfectly. It is remarkable for hanging by its tail like a monkey. It has hands resembling those of a human being. Its snout is like a hog's, while its mouth is liberally furnished with teeth. Its eyes are like a rat's, and it hisses like a snake.

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

The eye and the ear have long been regarded as marvels of mechanism, quite the most wonderful things in the world. But compared with the implements of a present day laboratory the sensitiveness of all human organs seems gross enough. A photographic plate, coupled with a telescope, will reveal the presence of millions of stars whose light does not affect the retina in the least. The microscope, too, with its revelations of the world of the infinitely small, tells us how crude, after all, is this most delicate of the senses. Indeed, we may liken it to a piano where only a single octave, toward the middle, sounds. From the ultra violet to the lowest reaches of the spectrum is a range of some nine octaves of light vibrations, of which, save for our new mechanical senses, we should never have been conscious of but one.

The ear hears little of what is going on around us. By means of a microphone the tread of a fly sounds like the tramp of cavalry. Our heat sense is very vague. We need a variation of at least one-fifth of a degree on a thermometer to realize any difference in temperature. Professor Langley's little bolometer will note the difference of a millionth of a degree. It is two hundred thousand times as sensitive as our skin.—Carl Snyder in Harper's Magazine.

Falling From a Great Height.

It will be remembered that Mr. Whymper, who had a severe succession of falls once in the Alps, without losing his consciousness, declares emphatically that as he bounded from one rock to another he felt absolutely no pain. The same thing happens on the battlefield. The entrance of the bullet into the body is not felt, and it is not till he feels the blood flowing or a limb paralyzed that the soldier knows he is wounded.

Persons who have had several limbs broken by a fall do not know which limb is broken till they try to rise. At the moment of a fall the whole intellectual activity is increased to an extraordinary degree. There is not a trace of anxiety. One considers quickly what will happen. This is by no means the consequence of "presence of mind." It is rather the product of absolute necessity. A solemn composure takes possession of the victim. Death by fall is a beautiful one. Great thoughts fill the victim's soul. They fall painlessly into a great blue sky.

Drugstore Humor.

A Philadelphia druggist has made the following collection of amusing missives that have been sent to him from time to time:

"I have a cute pain in my baby's stummick. Please give bearer something to cure it."

"My little girl has eat up a lot of buttons. Please send a nemetic by the enclosed boy."

"Dear doctor a dog bit my child on the leg please send some cork plaster and cutter eyes."

"Pleas send by bearer one postal card. Also kindly give bearer, my son, some licorice root."

Deer doctor wot is good for tirefoy fever send some quick I got it."

"Let my Johny have a glas of sody watter. I wud come myself but I am washing. P. S. the 5 cents is for the sody watter."

"If you can fill the enclosed prescription for 25 cents do so. If not return by bearer."

Ants That Strike.

Certain kinds of black ants have little yellow ants which do most of their work for them. Once in awhile these little yellow fellows will go on strike, and the "blacks" try to force them back to work by cutting off their food supply. If that does not succeed, they will attack the strikers in force or make a raid and get another gang of "yellows" into the colony. But the newcomers, as a rule, join the strikers. The strike ends by the "yellows" escaping and founding a colony for themselves, or they give in and settle down to work again.

American farm products to the value of $952,000,000 were exported during 1901, an increase of over $100,000,000 compared with 1900. Agricultural imports are falling off. In other words, the American farmers are not only supplying the large and constantly growing home market, but they are doing more and more each year toward supplying the world with food products. The outlook for the agriculturist is steadily growing brighter, and he is deriving benefit from the high prices for provisions which the city people grumble at.

Philadelphia may be slow in some things, but Philadelphia justice does not always travel on leaden heel. A negro brute in that city shot and killed a woman and three children. In less than 90 hours after the crime he was under sentence of death, with the chances in favor of being speedily executed. Swift justice of this sort enforced in the southern states would speedily reduce the number of lynchings if it did not abolish that barbaric practice altogether.

The Democratic Philippine policy has at last been formulated. It is that the Filipinos shall govern themselves and that the United States shall govern their government. Almost as sensible as would be the plan of compelling an engineer to stand by the roadside and shout while an inexperienced hand ran away with his engine.

Fresh vegetables are coming into the market along with abundance of fresh eggs. An eastern paper notes a growing fondness for a vegetable diet and a disposition to bid defiance to the meat trust. Perhaps the most men can be made in time to see the folly of prohibitive prices.

There is good sense and practical wisdom in the suggestions made in an interview presented in another column to the need of making the street railway to Wellsville safer for its thousands of patrons. The time for action is now, before an accident occurs.

At last the population statistics of 1900 census are completed and Uncle Sam figures out that his children, including Filipinos and other adopted sons, exceed 84,000,000. Only three other nations, China, Russia and Great Britain, have a greater total.

The ambition of the Wabash railroad to have a trunk line to the seaboard promises to bear fruit. West Virginia will be greatly benefited, as the main line of the new route will pass directly through the state. East Liverpool will be satisfied to get a branch line.

Another Democratic effort to make something out of nothing has failed. The investigation of the charges of alleged bribery in connection with the Danish islands' sale shows not the slightest foundation for them.

The proposition to make Bryan the Populist candidate for president is most appropriate. Bryan and the Populist party are in the same class—both politically dead.

POTTERY NEWS

The members of local union No. 10 are making strenuous efforts to get out a large vote at their meeting this week. The organization has three resolution under consideration at present, which it is proposed to bring before the next national convention. All of the resolutions are of great importance to that branch of the pottery industry, and it is the desire of the more active members to have an expression from the entire membership of No. 10. When the discussion comes up it is possible other resolutions will be suggested.

The kilndrawing crew at the Edwin M. Knowles China company's plant in Chester are out for a concession in the shape of street car fare in addition to the regular pay for that class of work. The crew finished up the work in hand last Friday, and state they will not return unless the fare is paid. The regular wages for drawing kiln has been $1.50 per day, and the men claim they are, under the present management, making actually but $1.40.

A New York trade paper remarks: The great increase of pottery capacity has made an abnormal demand for pottery operatives, and in any other country than ours it would have been impracticable to have reasonably supplied them. The ready adaptability of Americans to quickly learn has given practically the increased labor desired, but it has required considerable strain to accomplish it. It seems advisable now to go slow in pottery building.

Notices have been received in this city during the past week announcing the fact that a meeting of the American Potteries company would be held at Jersey City next Saturday for the purpose of electing a board of directors, which would be followed by the naming of permanent officers. While it is thought that persons interested in the company in this city will not be present, they will be represented by proxies. These have been forwarded to the officials of the company at Pittsburg.

Mrs. Mary, widow of the late Henry Speeler, died at Trenton after a lingering illness. Mrs. Speeler was born in Germany 63 years ago, but she has been in America and in Trenton since she was about 15 years old. Her late husband was a pottery manufacturer and widely known. One son survives Mrs. Speeler, John F., one of the managers of the Glasglow pottery.

The report was in circulation Saturday afternoon that Robert Hawkins, formerly connected with the Union Potteries company, had disposed of 21 shares of stock in that company at 70. When seen Mr. Hawkins denied the report, and said while he admitted he had an offer of that kind he had not accepted it.

David Crea, slipmaker at Laughlin No. 2, is working day and night to fill the clay cellar, lately enlarged at that place. This plant has a cellar that will hold clay enough to run the clay hands for two months without any new clay being used.

Harry Allison, formerly clay maker at Knowles', left on Saturday for New Castle, where he expects to take charge of the clay making of hat plant. He said that some changes would have to be made in the presses before he would accept the position.

Local No. 6, of Wheeling, elected the following delegates and alternates to the Trenton convention: Fred Golner, Jr., George Hopwood and Frank Hathaways. Alternates, John Schreoder, A. J. Habig and George La Flam.

It is officially announced that the recent dispute of the packers at the Union will be settled before Wednesday. A committee representing the local and representatives of the company will confer probably tomorrow.

It is said that last week was the first for some time that the Chelsea had been able to keep clay enough ahead to let all the jiggermen work steady. Sixteen jiggers are now working at this pottery.

William Swindles, boss packer at Thompson's, who recently returned from Cambridge Springs, where he had been spending several weeks for the benefit of his health, is still unable to be at the factory.

At the last meeting of local No. 51, Canonsburg, delegates to the convention were nominated. The successful ones were Messrs. Elliott and Hays. Alternates, Miller and York.

Oak Edgill, an apprentice at the biscuit end at Vodrey's, has been transferred to the glost end. Gene Carroll, of the glost end, has been transferred to the biscuit end.

At a recent meeting of Clay Workers' local No. 21, Secretary Allison resigned his position. It will be filled at the meeting to be held this week.

Roy Wycoff, a packer at the West End, who has been seriously ill at his home at Chestr for several weeks, is rapidly recovering.

George Mayer, a handler at Harker's, has resigned his position at that plant and hereafter will be located at the Union.

Alfred C. Root, of the Mercer pottery, Trenton, has accepted the foremanship at the John Moses pottery.

B. L. Reddick is working out his notice at the Dresden.

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited.

Few are entirely free from it.

Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Common indications are bunches in the neck, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting, and general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." MRS. J. H. JONES, Parker City, Ind.

AT THE THEATER

The "Katzenjammer Kids" have all the latest vaudeville hits. They have combined with it the essence of bright comedy music boiling around with a constant intelligent story which is developed by a company of stars of the first magnitude.

Denman Thompson's "Our New Minister" will be seen in a return engagement at the Grand tomorrow night. There is only one opinion of its merits. It is the best rural drama ever given to the stage, and admitted by press and public alike to the only legitimate successor to Thompson's first effort, "The Old Homestead."

English Names For Towns.

Many names of towns in England have been appropriated for a similar use in this country. These names frequently indicate in themselves the origin of the towns. For instance, names ending in "chester" or "cester" or "caster," such as Dorchester, Worcester and Lancaster, undoubtedly apply to sites of old military settlements or camps, and the termination is derived from "castra," the Latin word for camp. If the name of a place ends in "coln," like Lincoln, then it, too, is of Roman origin, because the Latin word for colony is colonia. When the syllable "by" ends the word, like Rugby, we then know that the Danes are responsible for the name, for the Danish word for town is by.

Where Theft Is Not Robbery.

In China theft is so common that nobody notices it. A young Chinaman once slipped three oranges up his sleeve at a party. While making his bow at parting the oranges slipped out and rolled on to the floor. He accounted for the awkward event by saying that his mother was very fond of oranges. His fault was straightway overlooked, and he was afterward held up as an instance of filial piety. There are several proverbs which go to show that the folk think lightly of stealing. One says that "when tailors cease to pilfer cloth their children will have to go without food," and another declares, "When silversmiths do not steal, they will certainly starve."

The Trifling Brother.

"Br'er Jenkins, you so triflin' dat I ve'y believes ef you wuz 'pinted ter be watchman at de pearly gates de fust t'ing you'd do would be ter let down en go fas' asleep."

"Br'er Thomas, you may well say dat, kaze I'd sho' feel so good over de 'p'intment I'd des nachully hatter go ter sleep ter dream ef it wuz true."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Ready Reply.

Foote's ready reply to the caution, "Your handkerchief, sir, is hanging out of your pocket," was of high merit, both from the surprise and for the cordial way in which the caution was accepted—"Thank you, sir; you know the company better than I do."—Gentleman's Magazine.

ST. PETER'S IN ROME.

It Takes Many Visits to Realize Its Vastness and Splendor.

It is curious to watch the faces of people as they enter the great doors of St. Peter's at Rome and push back the heavy leathern curtains that keep out the noise and the air and find themselves in the presence of the most impressive spectacle on earth, as Byron said:

Majesty,
Power, glory, strength and beauty—all are aisled
In this eternal ark of worship.

It is easy to detect those who have never been there before and those who have become accustomed to its magnitude and gorgeousness. It requires several visits to adjust the vision and the mind to its colossal proportions and brilliant decorations and enable them to realize the vastness and the beauty of the scene. The more frequently you visit St. Peter's cathedral the greater and the more beautiful it becomes, and after a time you are enabled to drink in with complete satisfaction the fullness of its area, its altitude and its magnificence.

The cost of the building up to date has been more than $55,000,000, and the annual expense of maintaining it is about $35,000. An architect and a gang of workmen are always employed.—Rome Letter in Chicago Record-Herald.

Hard to Get an Opinion.

I have always wanted to know what disorder the medical world considers most painful, so I asked a prominent physician in Fourteenth street about it.

"Without doubt," said he, "an abscess of the ear inflicts the most excruciating agony a human being is ever compelled to endure."

I went over to Thirteenth street and asked a physician there the same question, telling him what the Fourteenth street man had said. Two other doctors happened to be in the room. The Thirteenth street man grinned.

"Did Dr. G. say that?" said he. "Well, I dare say he thinks he's right. I remember he had an abscess in his own ear once. From experience in my own practice, however, I should say that, while other things may last longer, the most intense pain any one ever endures is caused by an attack of acute indigestion."

He looked at the other medical men for confirmation of his opinion. One of them leaned forward earnestly.

"What did you take for it?" he asked, and the Thirteenth street man merely blushed.—Washington Post.

American farm products to the value of $952,000,000 were exported during 1901, an increase of over $100,000,000 compared with 1900. Agricultural imports are falling off. In other words, the American farmers are not only supplying the large and constantly growing home market, but they are doing more and more each year toward supplying the world with food products. The outlook for the agriculturist is steadily growing brighter, and he is deriving benefit from the high prices for provisions which the city people grumble at.

Philadelphia may be slow in some things, but Philadelphia justice does not always travel on leaden heel. A negro brute in that city shot and killed a woman and three children. In less than 90 hours after the crime he was under sentence of death, with the chances in favor of being speedily executed. Swift justice of this sort enforced in the southern states would speedily reduce the number of lynchings if it did not abolish that barbaric practice altogether.

The Democratic Philippine policy has at last been formulated. It is that the Filipinos shall govern themselves and that the United States shall govern their government. Almost as sensible as would be the plan of compelling an engineer to stand by the roadside and shout while an inexperienced hand ran away with his engine.

Fresh vegetables are coming into the market along with abundance of fresh eggs. An eastern paper notes a growing fondness for a vegetable diet and a disposition to bid defiance to the meat trust. Perhaps the most men can be made in time to see the folly of prohibitive prices.

There is good sense and practical wisdom in the suggestions made in an interview presented in another column to the need of making the street railway to Wellsville safer for its thousands of patrons. The time for action is now, before an accident occurs.

At last the population statistics of 1900 census are completed and Uncle Sam figures out that his children, including Filipinos and other adopted sons, exceed 84,000,000. Only three other nations, China, Russia and Great Britain, have a greater total.

The ambition of the Wabash railroad to have a trunk line to the seaboard promises to bear fruit. West Virginia will be greatly benefited, as the main line of the new route will pass directly through the state. East Liverpool will be satisfied to get a branch line.

Another Democratic effort to make something out of nothing has failed. The investigation of the charges of alleged bribery in connection with the Danish islands' sale shows not the slightest foundation for them.

The proposition to make Bryan the Populist candidate for president is most appropriate. Bryan and the Populist party are in the same class—both politically dead.

President Roosevelt will doubtless find on his visit to the south that southern courtesy and southern hospitality have not died out, except in the Tillman family.

The Prince of Wales, it is now reported, proposes to come to America, to see what the kaiser's brother saw. It is all on exhibition all the time and all interesting.

The duck snooting season in Ohio expires April 15. Meantime the sportsman who has even seen a duck this spring remains to be heard from.

There will be time to vote after you read this paragraph. Don't let it be said that East Liverpool Republicans show no interest in the election.

Vote for registration and pure elections. No valid objection has been or can be raised against the proposition.

Every stay-at-home Republican helps the opposition. If you don't want to assist the Democracy, vote!

However Cecil Rhodes' millions were accumulated, he decided to put them to good use.

Though a few Boers are talking peace, all keep on fighting.

POTTERY NEWS

The members of local union No. 10 are making strenuous efforts to get out a large vote at their meeting this week. The organization has three resolution under consideration at present, which it is proposed to bring before the next national convention. All of the resolutions are of great importance to that branch of the pottery industry, and it is the desire of the more active members to have an expression from the entire membership of No. 10. When the discussion comes up it is possible other resolutions will be suggested.

The kilndrawing crew at the Edwin M. Knowles China company's plant in Chester are out for a concession in the shape of street car fare in addition to the regular pay for that class of work. The crew finished up the work in hand last Friday, and state they will not return unless the fare is paid. The regular wages for drawing kiln has been $1.50 per day, and the men claim they are, under the present management, making actually but $1.40.

A New York trade paper remarks: The great increase of pottery capacity has made an abnormal demand for pottery operatives, and in any other country than ours it would have been impracticable to have reasonably supplied them. The ready adaptability of Americans to quickly learn has given practically the increased labor desired, but it has required considerable strain to accomplish it. It seems advisable now to go slow in pottery building.

Notices have been received in this city during the past week announcing the fact that a meeting of the American Potteries company would be held at Jersey City next Saturday for the purpose of electing a board of directors, which would be followed by the naming of permanent officers. While it is thought that persons interested in the company in this city will not be present, they will be represented by proxies. These have been forwarded to the officials of the company at Pittsburg.

Mrs. Mary, widow of the late Henry Speeler, died at Trenton after a lingering illness. Mrs. Speeler was born in Germany 63 years ago, but she has been in America and in Trenton since she was about 15 years old. Her late husband was a pottery manufacturer and widely known. One son survives Mrs. Speeler, John F., one of the managers of the Glasglow pottery.

The report was in circulation Saturday afternoon that Robert Hawkins, formerly connected with the Union Potteries company, had disposed of 21 shares of stock in that company at 70. When seen Mr. Hawkins denied the report, and said while he admitted he had an offer of that kind he had not accepted it.

David Crea, slipmaker at Laughlin No. 2, is working day and night to fill the clay cellar, lately enlarged at that place. This plant has a cellar that will hold clay enough to run the clay hands for two months without any new clay being used.

Harry Allison, formerly clay maker at Knowles', left on Saturday for New Castle, where he expects to take charge of the clay making of hat plant. He said that some changes would have to be made in the presses before he would accept the position.

Local No. 6, of Wheeling, elected the following delegates and alternates to the Trenton convention: Fred Golner, Jr., George Hopwood and Frank Hathaways. Alternates, John Schreoder, A. J. Habig and George La Flam.

It is officially announced that the recent dispute of the packers at the Union will be settled before Wednesday. A committee representing the local and representatives of the company will confer probably tomorrow.

It is said that last week was the first for some time that the Chelsea had been able to keep clay enough ahead to let all the jiggermen work steady. Sixteen jiggers are now working at this pottery.

William Swindles, boss packer at Thompson's, who recently returned from Cambridge Springs, where he had been spending several weeks for the benefit of his health, is still unable to be at the factory.

At the last meeting of local No. 51, Canonsburg, delegates to the convention were nominated. The successful ones were Messrs. Elliott and Hays. Alternates, Miller and York.

Oak Edgill, an apprentice at the biscuit end at Vodrey's, has been transferred to the glost end. Gene Carroll, of the glost end, has been transferred to the biscuit end.

At a recent meeting of Clay Workers' local No. 21, Secretary Allison resigned his position. It will be filled at the meeting to be held this week.

Roy Wycoff, a packer at the West End, who has been seriously ill at his home at Chestr for several weeks, is rapidly recovering.

George Mayer, a handler at Harker's, has resigned his position at that plant and hereafter will be located at the Union.

Alfred C. Root, of the Mercer pottery, Trenton, has accepted the foremanship at the John Moses pottery.

B. L. Reddick is working out his notice at the Dresden.

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited.

Few are entirely free from it.

Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Common indications are bunches in the neck, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting, and general debility.

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." MRS. J. H. JONES, Parker City, Ind.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

WELLSVILLE

STRIKE SETTLED

WELLSVILLE SHOP MEN WILL CONTINUE TO WORK.

Three Thirteen-Hour Days Instead of Four Per Week the New Rule.

The strike in the boiler department of the C. & P. shops has at last been settled. The matter has also been settled in the machine shop, the employes of which were about to go out, demanding a 10 hour day. Master Mechanic Bishop returned from Philadelphia Saturday and held a conference with a committee from both departments and decided that the men must continue to work for 13 hours, but that they should work only three days in the week instead of four, as heretofore.

The men were satisfied with this and returned to work under this agreement.

HOMES FOR ORPHANS

Field Secretary Rev. E. H. Caylor, of the Children's Home Society of Ohio, with headquarters at Columbus, made the announcement in several of the city churches Sunday that the society was about to begin the work of finding suitable homes for orphan and dependent children in Wellsville.

The society is supported by the donations of the people and has the remarkable record of having placed over 15,000 children in good families during the past 17 years.

President William McKinley was elected president of the society at the time when he was governor of Ohio and has held the office from that time until his recent death.

Mr. Caylor expects to spend at least two weeks in this city with the work and wishes the general public to help him as much as possible.

A GRAND SUCCESS

Was the Ball Given Saturday Evening By Loyal Union No. 24, N. B. of O. P.

Regardless of the fact that the second annual ball of local union No. 24, N. B. of O. P., which was to have been given on last Tuesday evening in the city hall, had to be postponed until Saturday eveninig on account of the electric lights having given out, the affair proved a grand success in both a social and financial way. Over 300 were present, most of whom were from East Liverpool.

Members of the committee on arrangements state that a ball will be held on the Monday night following Easter Sunday each year hereafter.

QUIET HOME WEDDING

Charles Carpenter And Hannah Aughinbaugh Married at the Bride's Residence.

A very quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Auginbaugh, on Seventh street. The contracting parties were Charles Carpenter and Miss Hannah Aughinbaugh, of this city. Rev. W. M. Glasgow, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, performed the wedding ceremony.

Miss Aughinbaugh recently resigned from a position as operator in the Bell telephone office, and is very well known throughout the city. The groom holds the responsible position of manager in the Pittsburg office of the American Sheet Steel company, and is also well known in the city, having formerly lived here.

The happy couple departed for Pittsburg on the evening train Saturday, where they will make their home.

Man Wanted in Chester Held for a Similar Crime in Canton.

A communication was received this morning by Mayor Davidson from Mayor Robertson at Canton and telephoned to O. O. Allison in Chester, stating that John Lewis, alias Harry Phillips, has been arrested in Canton, charged with forging the name of George D. Evans to a check amounting to $22.50. The man is identified as the one who recently passed a check on Mr. Allison, of the same amount, having forged the name of William Banfield, superintendent of the tin mill.

Phillips, it is said, has also forged checks in Scottdale and Monessen, Pa., and from all appearances is an old one in the business.

He was given a hearing before the mayor in Canton and plead guilty. He was bound over to the grand jury.

After his case has been disposed of at Canton he will be brought to Chester.

STRIKE SETTLED

Three Thirteen-Hour Days Instead of Four Per Week the New Rule.

The strike in the boiler department of the C. & P. shops has at last been settled. The matter has also been settled in the machine shop, the employes of which were about to go out, demanding a 10 hour day. Master Mechanic Bishop returned from Philadelphia Saturday and held a conference with a committee from both departments and decided that the men must continue to work for 13 hours, but that they should work only three days in the week instead of four, as heretofore.

The men were satisfied with this and returned to work under this agreement.

HOMES FOR ORPHANS

Field Secretary Rev. E. H. Caylor of the Children's Home Society of Ohio, with headquarters at Columbus, made the announcement in several of the city churches Sunday that the society was about to begin the work of finding suitable homes for orphan and dependent children in Wellsville.

The society is supported by the donations of the people and has the remarkable record of having placed over 15,000 children in good families during the past 17 years.

President William McKinley was elected president of the society at the time when he was governor of Ohio and has held the office from that time until his recent death.

Mr. Caylor expects to spend at least two weeks in this city with the work and wishes the general public to help him as much as possible.

A GRAND SUCCESS

Was the Ball Given Saturday Evening By Loyal Union No. 24, N. B. of O. P.

Regardless of the fact that the second annual ball of local union No. 24, N. B. of O. P., which was to have been given on last Tuesday evening in the city hall, had to be postponed until Saturday eveninig on account of the electric lights having given out, the affair proved a grand success in both a social and financial way. Over 300 were present, most of whom were from East Liverpool.

Members of the committee on arrangements state that a ball will be held on the Monday night following Easter Sunday each year hereafter.

OLD LANCASTER

Lancaster, April 7.—(Special)—Lancaster, the birthplace of William Tecumseh Sherman, will entertain May 5, 6, 7, and 8, the thirty-sixth department encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the old town is working early and late to give the old veterans a royal and pleasant reception.

The town, of the old historic character, is particularly fitted for an event of this kind and has much to offer the visitors in the way interesting and entertaining sights. The boys' industrial school of Ohio is located on a beautiful farm six miles south of the city, which is reached by a traction line. Here are quartered and schooled over eight hundred wards of the state.

Lansaster is a city of over eight thousand inhabitants, with miles of paved streets and owning its own water works system and natural gas plant. While the hotel facilities are excellent for a town of this size, the citizens have agreed to open their houses. Already the town has commenced to decorate for the vent.

SURVEYORS AT WORK

Much Interest Aroused By Their Operations About Franklin Square.

Salem, April 7.—The work of a party of railroad surveyors in Franklin Square and vicinity is causing much speculation here. The party, six in number, struck out from Franklin Square toward Hart's Church. They refuse to tell their purpose. The line which they are pursuing would take them to Winona.

It is said to be the object of the surveyors to pass through North Georgetown and then reach Alliance. It may be possible that the road will strike and run a branch to Hanoverton. Some think that a branch will be run to Salem, as the line as it is surveyed at present will come within three miles of this city.

It will be remembered that some time ago there was talk of a steam railroad crossing the county and that it would pass through Winona and then to Alliance. The Baltimore & Ohio was behind the project at the time.

INNOCENT OF CRIME

Saloon Keeper Declares That Others Confessed the Murder to Him.

John Mooney and Frank Friday, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of James Hervey, near Wheeling, in 1901, have presented sensational evidence before the pardon board, substantiating their prayer for unconditional pardon.

Owen Friday, a saloon keeper of Martin's Ferry, swore that he was told by Richard Shanley that he (Shanley) and James Sweeney went to the Hervey home to commit robbery, and that in a scuffle with old Hervey, Sweeney fired a bullet through the aged landowner's breast. Shanley has left the state and Sweeney has been missing from his home for many months.

BURNED TO DEATH

Steubenville, April 7.—Mrs. Fannie Abrams, wife of Albert Sherman Abrams, of this city, was fatally burned Friday evening. The accident occurred while the woman was alone in the house and her dead and charred body was found by the horrified husband when he returned home for supper. Beside the woman lay her six-weeks-old baby asleep in a crib and partly covered by a blanket.

Mrs. Abrams had been ironing and it is thought her dress caught fire from an open grate. She was 26 years of age and had only been married one year.

OLD LANCASTER

Lancaster, April 7.—(Special)—Lancaster, the birthplace of William Tecumseh Sherman, will entertain May 5, 6, 7, and 8, the thirty-sixth department encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the old town is working early and late to give the old veterans a royal and pleasant reception.

The town, of the old historic character, is particularly fitted for an event of this kind and has much to offer the visitors in the way interesting and entertaining sights. The boys' industrial school of Ohio is located on a beautiful farm six miles south of the city, which is reached by a traction line. Here are quartered and schooled over eight hundred wards of the state.

Lansaster is a city of over eight thousand inhabitants, with miles of paved streets and owning its own water works system and natural gas plant. While the hotel facilities are excellent for a town of this size, the citizens have agreed to open their houses. Already the town has commenced to decorate for the vent.

SURVEYORS AT WORK

Much Interest Aroused By Their Operations About Franklin Square.

Salem, April 7.—The work of a party of railroad surveyors in Franklin Square and vicinity is causing much speculation here. The party, six in number, struck out from Franklin Square toward Hart's Church. They refuse to tell their purpose. The line which they are pursuing would take them to Winona.

It is said to be the object of the surveyors to pass through North Georgetown and then reach Alliance. It may be possible that the road will strike and run a branch to Hanoverton. Some think that a branch will be run to Salem, as the line as it is surveyed at present will come within three miles of this city.

It will be remembered that some time ago there was talk of a steam railroad crossing the county and that it would pass through Winona and then to Alliance. The Baltimore & Ohio was behind the project at the time.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Funeral services over the body of the late Lieutenant Commander William H. Schueteze, U. S. N., were held at St. John's church, Washington, D. C., yesterday afternoon. The remains were taken to St. Louis for interment.

Carriage Makers' union No. 72, of Washington, D. C., will go on strike today for an eight-hour workday at a minimum scale of $2.50 per day. About 160 men will be affected. Three of the 39 employing firms have granted the men's demands.

Fire yesterday at Le Mars, Ia., destroyed the grocery and dry goods stores of Baron Bros., the building and printing plant of the Le Mars Post and the furniture store of the Grand Rapids Furniture Company. Loss, $50,000, with $31,000 insurance.

Among the postmasters confirmed by the senate on Saturday were the following: Ohio—J. O. Converse, Chardon; C. M. Crane, Garrettsville; F. Fortune, Jefferson; C. A. L. Purmort, Van Wert. Pennsylvania—D. P. Higgins, Lewisburg; G. W. Schoch, Mifflinburg; F. C. Burns, Reynoldsville.

Sensational charges are made by the St. Louis grand jury, which has been investigating bribery and official corruption in the municipal assembly. The following indictments were returned: Bribery—Robert N. Snyder; attempted bribery, Edward Butler, John H. Becker, George J. Kebusch.

LEO'S SILVER JUBILEE

TWO CARDINALS WERE PRESENT

Baltimore, April 7.—The silver jubilee of Pope Leo XIII. was observed with solemn and unusually elaborate services at the Cathedral yesterday. The ceremony was marked by the presence of two cardinals. Cardinal Martinelli, the apostolic delegate, who came over from Washington to take part in the services, pontificated, and Cardinal Gibbons preached the sermon.

At the conclusion of the pontifical mass, Rev. Father O'Donovan of Cardinal Gibbons' household read a papal brief extending special plenary indulgences to all Catholics of the archdiocese who attended the triduum.

In his sermon Cardinal Gibbons referred to the good accomplished by Pope Leo through his important encyclicals, especially those relating to "Christian Marriage," the "Condition of the Workmen" and the "Constitution of Christian States." Reminiscentically, he also adverted modestly but affectionately to the personal honors paid him by the pope.

Washington, April 7.—The Catholic university was the scene yesterday of a particularly brilliant ceremony in honor of the jubilee of his holiness, Pope Leo XIII. Pope Leo is the founder of the university. The right reverend rector, Bishop Conaty, officiated in a pontifical mass. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Edmund T. Shanahan, dean of the faculty of theology. The sermon was an analysis of the contributions of Leo XIII. to the solution of the great intellectual, moral, social, domestic, industrial and religious problems of the past century. The students of Georgetown college adopted resolutions of joy on the event celebrated by Catholics yesterday, and sent a congratulatory message to the pope.

CANADIANS FOUGHT VALIANTLY.

Further Details of the British Victory at Doornbalt Farm.

Klerksdorp, Transvaal Colony, April 7.—Details received of the battle at Doornbalt farm, March 31, in which the British had 3 officers and 24 men killed and 16 officers and 131 men wounded, while the Boers had 137 men killed or wounded, show that quite 2,000 Boers opened a strong attack from different points with three guns and a pompom.

The Canadians' front was attacked in strong numbers, but they gallantly repelled every attempt made by the Boers to break through. One party of the Canadians fought until all were killed or wounded, and the last man of this party, although mortally wounded, emptied two bandoliers of cartridges at the enemy and then broke his rifle.

The fighting was severe and general for fully three hours, but after the British had entrenched, and the guns got into action, the forces repelled numerous and determined attacks made under the personal exhortations of the Boer leaders.

Careful computation gives the total strength of the scattered Boer commandoes at between 8,000 and 9,000 men.

Hounds Lost Bandits' Trail.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 7.—The Ruskin (Neb.) bank robbers, four in number, who secured $15,000 Saturday morning, were chased yesterday by a posse of farmers for 30 miles, until the robbers crossed into Kansas and separated near Belleville. A running fire was kept up for several miles. Bloodhounds were put on the trail of the bandits, but lost it near Scandia.

Ohio Municipal Elections Today.

Cincinnati, April 7.—Municipal and township elections will be held throughout Ohio today. In this city the contest between W. H. Jackson, Democrat, and Howard Ferris, Republican, for the superior judgeship is the only issue. In other cities of this section the election is for mayor and other city offices, as well as the usual local positions.

Four Persons Burned to Death.

Boyne City, Mich., April 7.—The frame dwelling of Dr. Boyne, occupied by two families, was totally destroyed last evening and four persons were burned to death. The dead are Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. Frank Littlefield, 6-year-old girl and 8-year-old boy. At the time the fire broke out all the persons in the house were up stairs asleep.

Voted Against Impeachment.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—The body of former United States Senator Joseph Fowler, who died in Washington, aged 82 years, was buried here yesterday. In the famous impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson, Senator Fowler voted against impeachment, and for this he was afterward received with some disfavor by his party.

FIND A DOG IN THE PICTURE.

WANT THE FAIR POSTPONED.

Foreign Governments May Not Be Creditably Represented.

Chicago, April 7.—John Barrett commissioner general to Asia for the Louisiana Purchase exposition, made the following significant statement last night:

"The world's fair management in St. Louis has been bending every energy to have the exposition open promptly in 1903, but nearly all of the foreign governments have unofficially notified the United States government or the world's fair management that it is a physical impossibility for them to be creditably represented at St. Louis in 1903. They have informally intimated that if the exposition shall be postponed they will endeavor to surpass even what they did at Chicago and Paris. As the success of the world's fair must depend largely on foreign participation, it can be seen that this is a most serious consideration which neither congress nor the exposition officials can overlook."

Kaiser's Comment on Rhodes' Will.

Berlin, April 7.—"This bequest shows the wide reach of Cecil Rhodes' mind, and his vision of the future," said Emperor William, alluding to the will of Mr. Rhodes. The bequests of Mr. Rhodes are regarded at court as constituting an enduring impulse to good feeling between Germany, Great Britain and the United States and the colonies of these countries, and as giving more substance to the grouping of the Teutonic powers. "Why have not I such a minister?" Emperor William is said to have exclaimed after an interview with Cecil Rhodes in 1889. This remark is now widely reproduced, and it enables the opposition paragraphists to revile the present ministry.

Illinois Money for Boer Sufferers.

Chicago, April 7.—Peter Van Vlissingen, secretary of the Illinois committee appointed by Gov. Yates to raise funds for the relief of Boer women and children in the South African concentration camps, has received from Secretary of State Hay acknowledgment of the receipt of a $5,000 check forwarded to President Roosevelt by the committee to be transmitted to South Africa. Secretary Hay says the money has been forwarded to the United States consul general at Cape Town, to be distributed in the manner intended by the donors. The committee now will undertake the collection of a larger sum.

President Goes to Charleston.

Washington, April 7.—This afternoon at 3 o'clock the president and a party of friends will leave Washington for a visit to the Charleston exposition, going via the Southern railway. The personnel of the party is as follows: The President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Attorney General and Mrs. Knox, Secretary Wilson, Secretary Cortelyou, Assistant Secretary Loeb and Mrs. Loeb, Commander W. S. Cowles of the navy and Mrs. Cowles.

Couple Attacked by Dog.

Greensburg, Pa., April 7.—A supposedly mad dog attacked Mrs. John Linoski at her home, near Latrobe, fearfully lacerating her arm. Linoski, coming to his wife's aid, fired a pistol at the dog, but the bullet seriously wounded his wife in the groin. The dog then turned upon Linoski, tearing the flesh from his right arm. The dog finally was driven away. Husband and wife are in a critical condition.

Switch Was Tampered With.

Lansing, Mich., April 7.—A coach and Pullman sleeper on the Grand Trunk line were thrown from the track seven miles west of here yesterday. Abbe Brunstine, of Chicago, was killed. C. Minnehan, of Providence, R. I., sustained a compound fracture of the skull and a fractured leg; Rev. M. J. Ozshoski, of Chicago, a Jesuit priest, two bad scalp wounds; J. L. Gordon, of Rochester, N. Y.; Frank Thomas, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., and J. L. Zeigler, of Detroit, brakeman, were badly bruised. It is said the switch had been tampered with.

From Baiminess to Blizzard.

Marquette, Mich., April 7.—Northern Michigan was in the grip of a blizzard last night. Heavy snow fell and a gale lashed the lake to fury. The weather Sunday was balmy and warm.

TWENTY-ONE KILLED.

Casualties Caused by Crush at a Football Game in Glasgow, Scotland.

OVERCROWDED STAND GAVE WAY

Police Charged and Drove Back the People, Who Were Then Piled in Heaps—Two Hundred and Fifty Injured.

Glasgow, April 7.—The casualty lists of the Ibrox park disaster, when a number of persons were killed or injured by the collapsing of a spectators' stand during the international football match Saturday afternoon between England and Scotland, were completed yesterday.

The disaster has resulted in the death of 21 persons and the injury of 250. Nearly 200 of the latter were so seriously hurt that they were taken to infirmaries for operations and treatment. One hundred and fifty of them still remain in the infirmaries. A large proportion of the injured had limbs broken, bodies crushed and mangled, and heads and faces gashed. Several more deaths undoubtedly will result from the most critical cases of fractured skulls.

Yesterday the infirmaries were besieged by friends and relatives of the victims of the disaster, and heart-rending scenes were witnessed when the names of those who died were posted outside the buildings.

The action of the authorities at Ibrox park in averting a more general panic by permitting the game to proceed while they encouraged the impression of the crowd within the enclosure that the accident was not so direful, is generally commended. The incongruity of the yells of applause mingling with the groans of the struggling sufferers will never be forgotten by those who witnessed the scene.

There were fully 70,000 spectators at the game, while an immense crowd outside clamored for admittance. Being unable to obtain this, the crowd broke some of the barriers and swarmed upon the field, whereupon the police charged and drove the intruders back upon the terraces and seats, with the result that the railings dividing the crowds were broken and the people were thrown over each other.

In the frantic struggle toward the exits the pressure toward the upper portion of the westerly terrace was so great that 100 feet of the highest part of the structure collapsed under the weight of the crowd driven upon it, precipitating the mass of people to the ground 60 feet below. The injured were piled in heaps, wedged in with broken wood. A few persons were thrown down and trampled upon in trying to escape from the crush when the police charged, but most of the victims sustained their injuries in the fall of the terrace.

Traveling Men Organize.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—The organization of the National Commercial Travelers' association was completed at the traveling men's convention yesterday. The association eventually will embrace the entire country. The objects of the association are the securing of better railroad rates hotel accommodations and other conveniences for traveling men.

Church People Fight Burlesque Show.

Washington, Pa., April 7.—As the result of the intention of Manager F. B. Hallam, of the Lyric theater here, to present a burlesque company to a Washington audience tonight, the clergymen and church people of Washington have been thrown into a state of excitement. Rev. J. H. Snowden, of the Second Presbyterian church, sought to have Burgess Frank Judson revoke the license for the show, but the burgess declined to take this action. The church people say they will ask court today to grant an injunction against the show.

Coal Land Deal Closed.

Steubenville, O., April 7.—C. J. Davis, of Steubenville, has closed out 1,000 acres of coal land situated midway between Bergholz and Amsterdam to the Ohio and Pennsylvania Coal Company. This property is penetrated by the Lake Erie, Alliance & Western railway, which will reach the Ohio river by July.

CHEMISTRY OF TEARS.

Weeping Improves the Sight Instead of Weakening It.

Tears have their functional duty to accomplish, like every other fluid of the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion, says an exchange.

The chemical properties of tears consist of phosphate of lime and soda, making them very salty, but never bitter. Their action on the eye is very beneficial, and here consists their prescribed duty of the body, washing thoroughly that sensitive organ, which allows no foreign fluid to do the same work. Nothing cleanses the eye like a good salty shower bath, and medical art has followed nature's law in this respect, advocating the invigorating solution for any distressed condition of the optics.

Tears do not weaken the sight, but improve it. They act as a tonic on the muscular vision, keeping the eye soft and limpid, and it will be noticed that women in whose eyes sympathetic tears gather quickly have brighter, tenderer orbs than others. When the pupils are hard and cold, the world attributes it to one's disposition, which is a mere figure of speech, implying the lack of balmy tears that are to the cornea what salve is to the skin or nourishment to the blood.

Savage Legends.

The savage islanders of the south Pacific believe that the world is a cocoanut shell of enormous dimensions, at the top of which is a single aperture communicating with the upper air, where human beings dwell. At the very bottom of this imaginary shell is a stem gradually tapering to a point which represents the beginning of all things. This point is a spirit or demon without human form, whose name is Root of All Existence. By him the entire fabric of creation is sustained.

In the interior of the cocoanut shell, at its very bottom, lives a female demon. So narrow is the space into which she is crowded that she is obliged to sit forever with knee and chin touching. Her name is The Very Beginning, and from her are sprung numerous spirits. They inhabit five different floors, into which the great cocoanut is divided. From certain of these spirits mankind is descended. The islanders, regarding themselves as the only real men and women, were formerly accustomed to regard strangers as evil spirits in the guise of humanity, whom they killed when they could, offering them as sacrifices.

The Growth of Seaweed.

Seaweeds vary surprisingly in their habits of life. Some species grow altogether beneath the water, attaching themselves below the lowest tide level, other frequent heights where they are left dry at every retreating tide, while others, yet are found in situations where they are scarcely ever covered by water. Whereas most of them attach themselves to rocks or solid bottom, keeping to the shallows, there are exceptions to the rule, among which the most remarkable is the sargasso or gulf weed, which floats on the surface of the ocean. Immense fields of it are seen by the navigator, extending as far as the eye can reach. It is sometimes so abundant as seriously to interfere with the progress of ships, and it was this which so alarmed the crew of Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.

Wrath Disarmed.

A little Cambridge girl was discovered whispering in school, and the teacher asked:

"What were you saying to the girl next to you when I caught you whispering?"

The little culprit hung her head for a moment and then replied:

"I was only telling her how nice you looked in your new dress."

"Well, that—yes—I know—but we must— The class in spelling will please stand up."—Christian Register.

A Skinning Process.

"This," said the fond father to the dermatological expert, "seems to be a pretty big bill for the treatment you have given my daughter."

"It was a difficult treatment," explained the skin doctor. "You see, we had to remove all the cuticle from her cheeks and graft a new epidermis upon them."

"Well," said the father, reaching for his checkbook, "I don't know which one of us you skinned the most."—Baltimore American.

The Only Chances They Have.

"All Joshua wants," said Farmer Corntossel's wife, "is a chance to show what he can do."

"Yes," said the farmer; "I s'pose so. Josh is one of those people who never seem to get a chance to do anything except something they can't do."—Washington Star.

Afraid.

"I would marry that girl but for one thing."

"What's that—afraid to pop the question?"

TWO CARDINALS WERE PRESENT

Baltimore, April 7.—The silver jubilee of Pope Leo XIII. was observed with solemn and unusually elaborate services at the Cathedral yesterday. The ceremony was marked by the presence of two cardinals. Cardinal Martinelli, the apostolic delegate, who came over from Washington to take part in the services, pontificated, and Cardinal Gibbons preached the sermon.

At the conclusion of the pontifical mass, Rev. Father O'Donovan of Cardinal Gibbons' household read a papal brief extending special plenary indulgences to all Catholics of the archdiocese who attended the triduum.

In his sermon Cardinal Gibbons referred to the good accomplished by Pope Leo through his important encyclicals, especially those relating to "Christian Marriage," the "Condition of the Workmen" and the "Constitution of Christian States." Reminiscentically, he also adverted modestly but affectionately to the personal honors paid him by the pope.

Washington, April 7.—The Catholic university was the scene yesterday of a particularly brilliant ceremony in honor of the jubilee of his holiness, Pope Leo XIII. Pope Leo is the founder of the university. The right reverend rector, Bishop Conaty, officiated in a pontifical mass. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Edmund T. Shanahan, dean of the faculty of theology. The sermon was an analysis of the contributions of Leo XIII. to the solution of the great intellectual, moral, social, domestic, industrial and religious problems of the past century. The students of Georgetown college adopted resolutions of joy on the event celebrated by Catholics yesterday, and sent a congratulatory message to the pope.

CANADIANS FOUGHT VALIANTLY.

Further Details of the British Victory at Doornbalt Farm.

Klerksdorp, Transvaal Colony, April 7.—Details received of the battle at Doornbalt farm, March 31, in which the British had 3 officers and 24 men killed and 16 officers and 131 men wounded, while the Boers had 137 men killed or wounded, show that quite 2,000 Boers opened a strong attack from different points with three guns and a pompom.

The Canadians' front was attacked in strong numbers, but they gallantly repelled every attempt made by the Boers to break through. One party of the Canadians fought until all were killed or wounded, and the last man of this party, although mortally wounded, emptied two bandoliers of cartridges at the enemy and then broke his rifle.

The fighting was severe and general for fully three hours, but after the British had entrenched, and the guns got into action, the forces repelled numerous and determined attacks made under the personal exhortations of the Boer leaders.

Careful computation gives the total strength of the scattered Boer commandoes at between 8,000 and 9,000 men.

Hounds Lost Bandits' Trail.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 7.—The Ruskin (Neb.) bank robbers, four in number, who secured $15,000 Saturday morning, were chased yesterday by a posse of farmers for 30 miles, until the robbers crossed into Kansas and separated near Belleville. A running fire was kept up for several miles. Bloodhounds were put on the trail of the bandits, but lost it near Scandia.

Ohio Municipal Elections Today.

Cincinnati, April 7.—Municipal and township elections will be held throughout Ohio today. In this city the contest between W. H. Jackson, Democrat, and Howard Ferris, Republican, for the superior judgeship is the only issue. In other cities of this section the election is for mayor and other city offices, as well as the usual local positions.

Four Persons Burned to Death.

Boyne City, Mich., April 7.—The frame dwelling of Dr. Boyne, occupied by two families, was totally destroyed last evening and four persons were burned to death. The dead are Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. Frank Littlefield, 6-year-old girl and 8-year-old boy. At the time the fire broke out all the persons in the house were up stairs asleep.

Voted Against Impeachment.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—The body of former United States Senator Joseph Fowler, who died in Washington, aged 82 years, was buried here yesterday. In the famous impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson, Senator Fowler voted against impeachment, and for this he was afterward received with some disfavor by his party.

FIND A DOG IN THE PICTURE.

Foreign Governments May Not Be Creditably Represented.

Chicago, April 7.—John Barrett commissioner general to Asia for the Louisiana Purchase exposition, made the following significant statement last night:

"The world's fair management in St. Louis has been bending every energy to have the exposition open promptly in 1903, but nearly all of the foreign governments have unofficially notified the United States government or the world's fair management that it is a physical impossibility for them to be creditably represented at St. Louis in 1903. They have informally intimated that if the exposition shall be postponed they will endeavor to surpass even what they did at Chicago and Paris. As the success of the world's fair must depend largely on foreign participation, it can be seen that this is a most serious consideration which neither congress nor the exposition officials can overlook."

Kaiser's Comment on Rhodes' Will.

Berlin, April 7.—"This bequest shows the wide reach of Cecil Rhodes' mind, and his vision of the future," said Emperor William, alluding to the will of Mr. Rhodes. The bequests of Mr. Rhodes are regarded at court as constituting an enduring impulse to good feeling between Germany, Great Britain and the United States and the colonies of these countries, and as giving more substance to the grouping of the Teutonic powers. "Why have not I such a minister?" Emperor William is said to have exclaimed after an interview with Cecil Rhodes in 1889. This remark is now widely reproduced, and it enables the opposition paragraphists to revile the present ministry.

Illinois Money for Boer Sufferers.

Chicago, April 7.—Peter Van Vlissingen, secretary of the Illinois committee appointed by Gov. Yates to raise funds for the relief of Boer women and children in the South African concentration camps, has received from Secretary of State Hay acknowledgment of the receipt of a $5,000 check forwarded to President Roosevelt by the committee to be transmitted to South Africa. Secretary Hay says the money has been forwarded to the United States consul general at Cape Town, to be distributed in the manner intended by the donors. The committee now will undertake the collection of a larger sum.

President Goes to Charleston.

Washington, April 7.—This afternoon at 3 o'clock the president and a party of friends will leave Washington for a visit to the Charleston exposition, going via the Southern railway. The personnel of the party is as follows: The President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Attorney General and Mrs. Knox, Secretary Wilson, Secretary Cortelyou, Assistant Secretary Loeb and Mrs. Loeb, Commander W. S. Cowles of the navy and Mrs. Cowles.

Couple Attacked by Dog.

Switch Was Tampered With.

Lansing, Mich., April 7.—A coach and Pullman sleeper on the Grand Trunk line were thrown from the track seven miles west of here yesterday. Abbe Brunstine, of Chicago, was killed. C. Minnehan, of Providence, R. I., sustained a compound fracture of the skull and a fractured leg; Rev. M. J. Ozshoski, of Chicago, a Jesuit priest, two bad scalp wounds; J. L. Gordon, of Rochester, N. Y.; Frank Thomas, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., and J. L. Zeigler, of Detroit, brakeman, were badly bruised. It is said the switch had been tampered with.

From Baiminess to Blizzard.

Marquette, Mich., April 7.—Northern Michigan was in the grip of a blizzard last night. Heavy snow fell and a gale lashed the lake to fury. The weather Sunday was balmy and warm.

TWENTY-ONE KILLED.

Casualties Caused by Crush at a Football Game in Glasgow, Scotland.

OVERCROWDED STAND GAVE WAY

Police Charged and Drove Back the People, Who Were Then Piled in Heaps—Two Hundred and Fifty Injured.

Glasgow, April 7.—The casualty lists of the Ibrox park disaster, when a number of persons were killed or injured by the collapsing of a spectators' stand during the international football match Saturday afternoon between England and Scotland, were completed yesterday.

The disaster has resulted in the death of 21 persons and the injury of 250. Nearly 200 of the latter were so seriously hurt that they were taken to infirmaries for operations and treatment. One hundred and fifty of them still remain in the infirmaries. A large proportion of the injured had limbs broken, bodies crushed and mangled, and heads and faces gashed. Several more deaths undoubtedly will result from the most critical cases of fractured skulls.

Yesterday the infirmaries were besieged by friends and relatives of the victims of the disaster, and heartrending scenes were witnessed when the names of those who died were posted outside the buildings.

The action of the authorities at Ibrox park in averting a more general panic by permitting the game to proceed while they encouraged the impression of the crowd within the enclosure that the accident was not so direful, is generally commended. The incongruity of the yells of applause mingling with the groans of the struggling sufferers will never be forgotten by those who witnessed the scene.

There were fully 70,000 spectators at the game, while an immense crowd outside clamored for admittance. Being unable to obtain this, the crowd broke some of the barriers and swarmed upon the field, whereupon the police charged and drove the intruders back upon the terraces and seats, with the result that the railings dividing the crowds were broken and the people were thrown over each other.

In the frantic struggle toward the exits the pressure toward the upper portion of the westerly terrace was so great that 100 feet of the highest part of the structure collapsed under the weight of the crowd driven upon it, precipitating the mass of people to the ground 60 feet below. The injured were piled in heaps, wedged in with broken wood. A few persons were thrown down and trampled upon in trying to escape from the crush when the police charged, but most of the victims sustained their injuries in the fall of the terrace.

Traveling Men Organize.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—The organization of the National Commercial Travelers' association was completed at the traveling men's convention yesterday. The association eventually will embrace the entire country. The objects of the association are the securing of better railroad rates hotel accommodations and other conveniences for traveling men.

Church People Fight Burlesque Show.

Washington, Pa., April 7.—As the result of the intention of Manager F. B. Hallam, of the Lyric theater here, to present a burlesque company to a Washington audience tonight, the clergymen and church people of Washington have been thrown into a state of excitement. Rev. J. H. Snowden, of the Second Presbyterian church, sought to have Burgess Frank Judson revoke the license for the show, but the burgess declined to take this action. The church people say they will ask court today to grant an injunction against the show.

Coal Land Deal Closed.

Steubenville, O., April 7.—C. J. Davis, of Steubenville, has closed out 1,000 acres of coal land situated midway between Bergholz and Amsterdam to the Ohio and Pennsylvania Coal Company. This property is penetrated by the Lake Erie, Alliance & Western railway, which will reach the Ohio river by July.

Was a Native of Mercer, Pa.

St. Louis, April 7.—Judge Carman A. Newcomb, 78 years old, a veteran of the civil war, and an ex-member of congress from Missouri, died at his home in this city yesterday. Judge Newcomb was born in Mercer, Pa.

H. J. Heinz's Sister-in-Law Dead.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 7.—Mrs. J. H. Heinz, wife of the brother of H. J. Heinz, of Pittsburg, died yesterday after an operation. The remains will be taken to Marion today, where the funeral services will be held, and then will be taken to Pittsburg for interment.

CHEMISTRY OF TEARS.

Weeping Improves the Sight Instead of Weakening It.

Tears have their functional duty to accomplish, like every other fluid of the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion, says an exchange.

The chemical properties of tears consist of phosphate of lime and soda, making them very salty, but never bitter. Their action on the eye is very beneficial, and here consists their prescribed duty of the body, washing thoroughly that sensitive organ, which allows no foreign fluid to do the same work. Nothing cleanses the eye like a good salty shower bath, and medical art has followed nature's law in this respect, advocating the invigorating solution for any distressed condition of the optics.

Tears do not weaken the sight, but improve it. They act as a tonic on the muscular vision, keeping the eye soft and limpid, and it will be noticed that women in whose eyes sympathetic tears gather quickly have brighter, tenderer orbs than others. When the pupils are hard and cold, the world attributes it to one's disposition, which is a mere figure of speech, implying the lack of balmy tears that are to the cornea what salve is to the skin or nourishment to the blood.

Savage Legends.

The savage islanders of the south Pacific believe that the world is a cocoanut shell of enormous dimensions, at the top of which is a single aperture communicating with the upper air, where human beings dwell. At the very bottom of this imaginary shell is a stem gradually tapering to a point which represents the beginning of all things. This point is a spirit or demon without human form, whose name is Root of All Existence. By him the entire fabric of creation is sustained.

In the interior of the cocoanut shell, at its very bottom, lives a female demon. So narrow is the space into which she is crowded that she is obliged to sit forever with knee and chin touching. Her name is The Very Beginning, and from her are sprung numerous spirits. They inhabit five different floors, into which the great cocoanut is divided. From certain of these spirits mankind is descended. The islanders, regarding themselves as the only real men and women, were formerly accustomed to regard strangers as evil spirits in the guise of humanity, whom they killed when they could, offering them as sacrifices.

The Growth of Seaweed.

Seaweeds vary surprisingly in their habits of life. Some species grow altogether beneath the water, attaching themselves below the lowest tide level, other frequent heights where they are left dry at every retreating tide, while others, yet are found in situations where they are scarcely ever covered by water. Whereas most of them attach themselves to rocks or solid bottom, keeping to the shallows, there are exceptions to the rule, among which the most remarkable is the sargasso or gulf weed, which floats on the surface of the ocean. Immense fields of it are seen by the navigator, extending as far as the eye can reach. It is sometimes so abundant as seriously to interfere with the progress of ships, and it was this which so alarmed the crew of Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.

Wrath Disarmed.

A little Cambridge girl was discovered whispering in school, and the teacher asked:

"What were you saying to the girl next to you when I caught you whispering?"

The little culprit hung her head for a moment and then replied:

"I was only telling her how nice you looked in your new dress."

"Well, that—yes—I know—but we must— The class in spelling will please stand up."—Christian Register.

A Skinning Process.

"This," said the fond father to the dermatological expert, "seems to be a pretty big bill for the treatment you have given my daughter."

"It was a difficult treatment," explained the skin doctor. "You see, we had to remove all the cuticle from her cheeks and graft a new epidermis upon them."

"Well," said the father, reaching for his checkbook, "I don't know which one of us you skinned the most."—Baltimore American.

The Only Chances They Have.

"All Joshua wants," said Farmer Corntossel's wife, "is a chance to show what he can do."

"Yes," said the farmer; "I s'pose so. Josh is one of those people who never seem to get a chance to do anything except something they can't do."—Washington Star.

Afraid.

"I would marry that girl but for one thing."

"What's that—afraid to pop the question?"

"No; afraid to question pop."—New York Herald.

Sherwood Allotment.

(These lots were omitted in our vacant lot list of March 29, 1902.)

This allotment is situated on the Lisbon Road, beyond Pleasant Heights and Belmar Place, where Connell's Road leaves off. A very nice location for a suburban home. Lots are 30x100. Prices $65, $75, $85, $100 and $110 each. Terms, $10 down and $5 monthly.

To get location of the properties see our map of East Liverpool. Get one at our office if you haven't a copy.

Not All We Have for Sale is Herein Advertised.

The intent of this list is only to give you an idea of the scope of our business. Many properties the owners do not permit us to advertise. Consult with us about these and we'll tell you of the others.

We'll save you money, give you perfect titles, make financial arrangements, and in many ways serve you.

This List Will not Appear Again.

Credit to Whom Credit is Due.

John A. George, Civil Engineer, office in First National Bank Building, prepared the map of East Liverpool, given by us as a supplement to this paper March 29, 1902. Our engravers omitted this fact from plate, hence this mention of it.

ELIJAH W. HILL,

DEALER IN REAL ESTATE. Office Corner Sixth and Washington Sts., East Liverpool, O.

For particulars concerning these properties come to our office. Business hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. every week day.

Few "For Sale" cards on these properties—we don't believe very much in taem, so you'll not know just where and what they are unless you see us. Be free to come—our time is at your service. As for terms of sale, consult us whether you have much or little money.

The properties are classified under additions. The numbers refer to the location of the addition on the map of East Liverpool issued by us March 29, 1902, as a supplement to this paper. If you have not one, we have copies at our office free for the asking. Get one and you can tell from it the relative location of each property herein advertised.

Owners of property desiring to sell, can do well by placing it with us.

NEGRO'S DEADLY FIRE

HELD CROWD OF 1,000 AT BAY.

Dynamite Thrown Into Desperado's Refuge, but He Continued to Slay and Wound Until Riddled by the Militiamen.

Tuscumbia, Ala., April 7.—Three men are dead, three mortally wounded and four seriously wounded as the result of Sheriff Charles Gassaway's attempting yesterday to arrest Will Reynolds, a desperate negro.

The dead are: Hugh Jones, shot through the head; Bob Wallace and Will Reynolds. The fatally wounded are Sheriff Charles Gassaway, shot through the arm and abdomen; Will Gassaway, shot through the abdomen, and P. A. Prout, shot through the stomach. Those seriously wounded are ——— Payne, shot through the chest; Jim Finney, shot through the right shoulder; Robert Patterson, shot through the leg, and Jesse Davis, shot through the jaw.

All the foregoing casualties, except the death of Reynolds himself, are the result of the deadly fire of Reynolds with a 45-caliber Winchester. The negro was in his turn riddled and thrown into a fire.

Sheriff Gassaway went to a negro settlement, "Knardtown," to arrest Will Reynolds for obtaining goods under false pretense. The officer was met by the negro, who opened fire with his rifle, wounding the sheriff and immediately firing upon the deputy, Will Gassaway, who was some 300 yards away, mortally wounding him.

As soon as possible every man in town who could procure a gun was in the neighborhood, but owing to the location none dared to venture within the open space. Dynamite was procured, and the house in which the negro was barricaded was fired upon, but to no effect. At 1 o'clock Captain Simpson, of the Wheeler Rifles, arrived with 12 guns and 1,000 cartridges, which were distributed among 12 picked men. This company was stationed around the house and riddled it, but the negro had taken refuge in the cellar and returned the fire, killing Jones and wounding Finney. Coal oil was then procured, and after four hours of hard work the house adjoining that in which the negro was located was fired. About 8 o'clock the house in which the negro was located was fired by the Wheeler Rifles, who had arrived on the scene. The negro took refuge in a shed and opened fire, killing Wallace and wounding Davis, but the people and some militiamen riddled the negro, and the crowd, numbering 1,000, grabbed the body and threw it into the burning building. Wallace, who was killed, was closing in on the negro, who shot him through the body. His body fell into the burning debris, but was recovered. Davis and Wallace were the men who fired the building.

Relic-seekers cut off the negro's fingers and such parts of the body as could be procured.

Last night it was reported that the sheriff and his brother have no chance to live. So deadly was the negro's aim that it was possibly an hour before the body of Prout could be recovered. Fully 2,000 people from Florence and Sheffield were here, and every surgeon in the two towns was pressed into service.

INCENDIARIES AT COLUMBUS.

Two Lumber Yards Destroyed, and Men Discovered Firing a Plaster Plant—Suspects Arrested.

Columbus, O., April 7.—Fire last evening caused a loss of $20,000 at the lumber yard of Smith & Sowers, on the West Side. A few hours later fire destroyed $15,000 worth of lumber at Conee & Menefee's yard, in the same vicinity. The fires were of incendiary origin. While the fire was in progress at the latter place Secretary Bingham, of the Columbus Rock Plaster Company, discovered two men setting fire to a shed at the company's plant, which is but a short distance from the lumber yard. Mr. Bingham struck one of the men, but was promptly knocked down, and the incendiaries escaped. Later five men, suspected of being incendiaries, were placed under arrest.

Peru Seeks Reciprocity.

Lima, Peru, April 7.—Senor Garland, in a recently published article, advocates strenuous efforts on the part of Peru to secure a reciprocity treaty with the United States similar to the one projected between the United States and Cuba, in order to save the sugar industry of Peru.

It will do you more good to acknowledge your faults than it will do your enemies.—Atchison Globe.

CUBAN RECIPROCITY BATTLE.

Struggle Over This Measure Will Be Transferred to Floor of the House This Week.

Washington, April 7.—The great battle over Cuban reciprocity, which created such a protracted struggle among the Republicans, both in caucus and in the committee on ways and means, will be fought out on the floor of the house this week. The ultimate passage of the Payne bill, providing for a 20 per cent reduction on the products of Cuba after the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty and the enactment of our immigration laws by the republic of Cuba, is regarded as a foregone conclusion, but the situation is a complicated one owing to the divisions among the Democrats as well as the Republicans. The bill will be brought up on Tuesday as a revenue bill. The leaders on both sides estimate that not more than three days will be consumed in general debate.

The Chinese exclusion bill, which will come to a final vote today, will command practically every vote in the house.

The expectations of the friends of the Chinese exclusion bill is that its consideration by the senate will be concluded by the middle of the present week, if not before. The Philippine government bill will be taken up immediately afterward. The Democratic members of the committee on the Philippines charge that the bill's purpose is to permit the granting of franchises. They also object to the continuance of the administration of affairs of the archipelago without making any provision looking to a form of self-government for the Philippine people.

The Sun Is Seldom on Time.

The sun does not keep good time. He is almost always too fast or too slow. Once about the middle of April he is just on time, then not again before the middle of June. At the beginning of September he joins the clock a third time, and lastly once more late in December. Now, it would seem as if he were startled at the way he had neglected us. In February he fell back until he was fifteen minutes late. By the beginning of March he had made up five minutes of his loss, and before the month is over he will have caught up to within five minutes of the schedule. Meanwhile the days have been growing longer very rapidly. We begin March with our nights longer than our days. We end it with our days longer than our nights. In the one month we have added to the length of our day an hour and twenty minutes, a bigger gain than any other month can show.—Professor S. C. Schmucker in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Going to Theater Face.

Will some one please explain the "going to the theater face" of the average New Yorker? The question is suggested by a long experience in lobbies while the auditors are passing into the houses for the evening performances. The writer stood for nearly an hour engaged in the seemingly hopeless task of discovering "the cheerful theater goer." But in they poured, men and women, each and every one with firm set jaw, gloomy brow and the look of despair. Perhaps it is because the long distances traveled on crowded cars and the thought of an equally uncomfortable homegoing make a night at the theater seem just a bit like work to the residents of this narrow isle.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Turnip.

The seed of the globe turnip is about the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months this seed will be enlarged by the soil and the air into 27,000,000 times its original bulk, and this in addition to a bunch of leaves. It has been found by experiment that a turnip seed will under fair conditions increase its own weight fifteen times in a minute. Turnips growing in peat ground have been found to increase more than 15,000 times the weight of their seeds in a day.

Alcohol and Tobacco.

According to the London Lancet, when evil effects ensue from smoking tobacco they are very much intensified by indulgence in alcohol. Pyridine, the chief poisonous constituent of tobacco smoke, is not so easily soluble in water as in alcohol. Pyridine bases can be easily traced in the mouth of an immoderate smoker and especially the smoker of cigars. An alcoholic drink is, therefore, calculated quickly to wash out this poisonous oil and to carry it into the stomach.

There Is a Difference.

City Editor—Why do you say, "He ran into the police station puffing and blowing?" "Puffing" and "blowing" are synonymous.

Reporter—Not at all. There's a vast difference, for instance, between puffing a man up and blowing him up.—Catholic Standard and Times.

An Intense Adaptation.

"Thinnerton represented an Indian brave at the masked ball."

"Oh, was that it? I have been laboring under the impression that he went as a feather duster."—Washington Times.

NEW YORK WENT DRY.

LIQUOR MEN TOOK NO CHANCES.

The Thirsty in the Tenderloin Obtained Drinks Only Under the Most Aggravating Conditions — Small Shopkeepers Compelled to Close.

New York, April 7.—The police and the liquor dealers gave Greater New York a "dry" Sunday yesterday. The day had no equal in the suspension of the liquor traffic since five years ago, when Superintendent Thomas F. Byrnes tightly closed the saloons one memorable Sunday. Few liquor dealers yesterday had the temerity to keep open and serve drinks alone, and of those who did the majority were invited to visit the nearest police station, there to remain until bondsmen appeared.

In the "Tenderloin," now known as the "White Light" district, liquor was sold, but only under conditions which proved drawbacks to many of the thirsty. In many of the saloons the shades were drawn in the bar-rooms, but it is said improvised bars were established in upstairs rooms. In a few places the proprietors are alleged to have established what is known as the "Kansas speak-easy," or "blind pig," consisting of a circular opening in a wooden partition, into which was fitted a round board arranged so as to swing about. On each side of the round door was a shelf, on which the bartender could serve drinks to the waiter without being seen, and even if the police had succeeded in getting in they could not have arrested the bartender, as no one could see him.

Drinks were served all day in the dining rooms of the big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels, and although they were sold within the proscribed hours, no attempt at interference was made. No one, however, was permitted to sit down and order a drink, even though he ordered a sandwich at the same time. The hotel folk insisted that something akin to a substantial meal at least be ordered.

For the first time in many years the saloons in the residence section in upper Harlem were all closed. Despite the excise excitement in the city from time to time, the liquor dealers in that section have kept open. On the Bowery it was exceedingly hard to get a drink. The saloonkeepers were not ready to take chances of arrest, and for the most part kept their doors locked.

The police also compelled the small shopkeepers throughout the city to close, except that the grocers and delicatessen shops were permitted to keep open until 10 o'clock, as provided by law.

Seventy-nine arrests for violations of the excise law were made in Manhattan and the Bronx between the hours of midnight Saturday and 11 o'clock last night. There were in these two boroughs 14 arrests for violations of other Sunday closing laws. In Brooklyn the police reported 27 arrests for violation of the excise laws; there was one in Richmond and none in Queens. This is a total of 121, as against 64 on Sunday, March 30.

Fairmont Had a Dry Sunday.

Fairmont, W. Va., April 7.—"Nothing doing today," was the sign displayed in front of all of the saloons here yesterday. It was the first Sunday since the new mayor went into office, and the sign signifies that dry Sundays are to be observed.

LAWLESS ACTION EXPECTED.

Negroes Ordered From an Oklahoma Town and Threaten Resistance.

Guthrie, Okla, April 7.—April 6, the last day set for negroes to remain in Lawton, Okla., passed with no direct attacks on the colored people, but today is awaited with ominous silence. Many of the negroes have left, stating that they will not receive protection. Others, however, are determined to remain. The county officials have organized matters as well as possible to preserve order. One hundred deputies have been sworn in. The governor stated yesterday that if necessary he will use extreme means to thwart any lawless action, and he has the proffered assistance of the federal authorities.

Three Millionaires in Race.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 7.—The opening gun will be fired this week in the forthcoming fight between three millionaires in this state for a seat in the United States senate. The term of Senator Nathan B. Scott will expire in 1905, and the state senators elected this year will vote for his successor. Senator Scott will be opposed by Henry Schmulbach, a millionaire brewer of Wheeling, and James L. Caldwell, of Huntington, a millionaire barker.

SCRANTON'S STRIKE IS ENDED.

All the Men Are to Be Taken Back at Wages and Terms in Their Favor.

Scranton, Pa., April 7.—Scranton's six months' street car strike is at an end, and the men returned to work this morning. An agreement, secured through the work of various intermediaries, was signed last night by General Manager Silliman and the executive board of the strikers.

All the men are to be taken back at the small advance in wages recently announced by the company. Any man for whom the company cannot find a place immediately will be given a bonus equal to one-half the difference between $32.50 (a common laborer's pay) and the amount he was earning at the time of the strike. Many of the strikers have secured other employment temporarily. The idea is to have these continue at their temporary work, and allow the idle ones to have the places the company can immediately provide.

The barn men are given a flat increase of 7 per cent. The new schedule of the car men changes the minimum from 14 to 17 cents an hour, the maximum from 19 to 19½ cents an hour, and makes three years instead of five years the period in which the maximum rate can be earned.

Altoona, Pa., April 7.—The strike situation in this region remains unsettled, but the probability is a satisfactory decision may be reached today. All the unions in the field where the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal and Iron Company is interested held meetings yesterday, and delegates, one from each mine, were elected to act as a committee to meet Manager L. W. Robinson this afternoon at Punxsutawney.

A Funny Language.

The native dictionary of Samoa is interesting in the light it casts upon the Samoan character. I find "an impossibility, such as an old man getting a young wife." Another word means "to beg deliriously for fishhooks." "Unwelcome" is given, "such as a visiting party that is accompanied by neither a handsome man nor a pretty maid." The definition of "widow" or "widower" is synonymous with detached shellfish.

There are also definitions that show considerable thought and irony. "Meanness," for instance, can go no further than "to climb out on your own breadfruit tree to steal your neighbor's breadfruit." Faapuatama, like a trumpet blown by wild lads, blown anyhow and all times; so conduct without consideration. Popoga, to look owl eyed, as a person staring when food or property is being divided. "Good brown earth" describes an honest, unpretending man. To show how difficult the language is for the stranger I may say that the little word ta means I, we two, to beat with a stick, to play on a musical instrument, to reprove, to tattoo, to open a vein, to bail a cannon, to wash clothing by beating and to turn a somersault.—Century.

Her Vanity.

Some years ago a marble sculptor had his place of business on Penn avenue near Ninth street. A business man lost his wife, and he ordered a tombstone for her grave from the sculptor. It was to be a life size study of her. The figure was finished in due time and placed in the cemetery.

Several years passed, and the figure had not been paid for. NEGRO'S DEADLY FIRE

HELD CROWD OF 1,000 AT BAY.

Dynamite Thrown Into Desperado's Refuge, but He Continued to Slay and Wound Until Riddled by the Militiamen.

Tuscumbia, Ala., April 7.—Three men are dead, three mortally wounded and four seriously wounded as the result of Sheriff Charles Gassaway's attempting yesterday to arrest Will Reynolds, a desperate negro.

The dead are: Hugh Jones, shot through the head; Bob Wallace and Will Reynolds. The fatally wounded are Sheriff Charles Gassaway, shot through the arm and abdomen; Will Gassaway, shot through the abdomen, and P. A. Prout, shot through the stomach. Those seriously wounded are ——— Payne, shot through the chest; Jim Finney, shot through the right shoulder; Robert Patterson, shot through the leg, and Jesse Davis, shot through the jaw.

All the foregoing casualties, except the death of Reynolds himself, are the result of the deadly fire of Reynolds with a 45-caliber Winchester. The negro was in his turn riddled and thrown into a fire.

Sheriff Gassaway went to a negro settlement, "Knardtown," to arrest Will Reynolds for obtaining goods under false pretense. The officer was met by the negro, who opened fire with his rifle, wounding the sheriff and immediately firing upon the deputy, Will Gassaway, who was some 200 yards away, mortally wounding him.

As soon as possible every man in town who could procure a gun was in the neighborhood, but owing to the location none dared to venture within the open space. Dynamite was procured, and the house in which the negro was barricaded was fired upon, but to no effect. At 1 o'clock Captain Simpson, of the Wheeler Rifles, arrived with 12 guns and 1,000 cartridges, which were distributed among 12 picked men. This company was stationed around the house and riddled it, but the negro had taken refuge in the cellar and returned the fire, killing Jones and wounding Finney. Coal oil was then procured, and after four hours of hard work the house adjoining that in which the negro was located was fired. About 8 o'clock the house in which the negro was located was fired by the Wheeler Rifles, who had arrived on the scene. The negro took refuge in a shed and opened fire, killing Wallace and wounding Davis, but the people and some militiamen riddled the negro, and the crowd, numbering 1,000, grabbed the body and threw it into the burning building. Wallace, who was killed, was closing in on the negro, who shot him through the body. His body fell into the burning debris, but was recovered. Davis and Wallace were the men who fired the building.

Relic-seekers cut off the negro's fingers and such parts of the body as could be procured.

Last night it was reported that the sheriff and his brother have no chance to live. So deadly was the negro's aim that it was possibly an hour before the body of Prout could be recovered. Fully 2,000 people from Florence and Sheffield were here, and every surgeon in the two towns was pressed into service.

INCENDIARIES AT COLUMBUS.

Two Lumber Yards Destroyed, and Men Discovered Firing a Plaster Plant—Suspects Arrested.

Columbus, O., April 7.—Fire last evening caused a loss of $20,000 at the lumber yard of Smith & Sowers, on the West Side. A few hours later fire destroyed $15,000 worth of lumber at Conee & Menefee's yard, in the same vicinity. The fires were of incendiary origin. While the fire was in progress at the latter place Secretary Bingham, of the Columbus Rock Plaster Company, discovered two men setting fire to a shed at the company's plant, which is but a short distance from the lumber yard. Mr. Bingham struck one of the men, but was promptly knocked down, and the incendiaries escaped. Later five men, suspected of being incendiaries, were placed under arrest.

Peru Seeks Reciprocity.

Lima, Peru, April 7.—Senor Garland, in a recently published article, advocates strenuous efforts on the part of Peru to secure a reciprocity treaty with the United States similar to the one projected between the United States and Cuba, in order to save the sugar industry of Peru.

It will do you more good to acknowledge your faults than it will do your enemies.—Atchison Globe.

CUBAN RECIPROCITY BATTLE.

Struggle Over This Measure Will Be Transferred to Floor of the House This Week.

Washington, April 7.—The great battle over Cuban reciprocity, which created such a protracted struggle among the Republicans, both in caucus and in the committee on ways and means, will be fought out on the floor of the house this week. The ultimate passage of the Payne bill, providing for a 20 per cent reduction on the products of Cuba after the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty and the enactment of our immigration laws by the republic of Cuba, is regarded as a foregone conclusion, but the situation is a complicated one owing to the divisions among the Democrats as well as the Republicans. The bill will be brought up on Tuesday as a revenue bill. The leaders on both sides estimate that not more than three days will be consumed in general debate.

The Chinese exclusion bill, which will come to a final vote today, will command practically every vote in the house.

The expectations of the friends of the Chinese exclusion bill is that its consideration by the senate will be concluded by the middle of the present week, if not before. The Philippine government bill will be taken up immediately afterward. The Democratic members of the committee on the Philippines charge that the bill's purpose is to permit the granting of franchises. They also object to the continuance of the administration of affairs of the archipelago without making any provision looking to a form of self-government for the Philippine people.

The Sun Is Seldom on Time.

The sun does not keep good time. He is almost always too fast or too slow. Once about the middle of April he is just on time, then not again before the middle of June. At the beginning of September he joins the clock a third time, and lastly once more late in December. Now, it would seem as if he were startled at the way he had neglected us. In February he fell back until he was fifteen minutes late. By the beginning of March he had made up five minutes of his loss, and before the month is over he will have caught up to within five minutes of the schedule. Meanwhile the days have been growing longer very rapidly. We begin March with our nights longer than our days. We end it with our days longer than our nights. In the one month we have added to the length of our day an hour and twenty minutes, a bigger gain than any other month can show.—Professor S. C. Schmucker in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Going to Theater Face.

Will some one please explain the "going to the theater face" of the average New Yorker? The question is suggested by a long experience in lobbies while the auditors are passing into the houses for the evening performances. The writer stood for nearly an hour engaged in the seemingly hopeless task of discovering "the cheerful theater goer." But in they poured, men and women, each and every one with firm set jaw, gloomy brow and the look of despair. Perhaps it is because the long distances traveled on crowded cars and the thought of an equally uncomfortable homegoing make a night at the theater seem just a bit like work to the residents of this narrow isle.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Turnip.

The seed of the globe turnip is about the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months this seed will be enlarged by the soil and the air into 27,000,000 times its original bulk, and this in addition to a bunch of leaves. It has been found by experiment that a turnip seed will under fair conditions increase its own weight fifteen times in a minute. Turnips growing in peat ground have been found to increase more than 15,000 times the weight of their seeds in a day.

Alcohol and Tobacco.

According to the London Lancet, when evil effects ensue from smoking tobacco they are very much intensified by indulgence in alcohol. Pyridine, the chief poisonous constituent of tobacco smoke, is not so easily soluble in water as in alcohol. Pyridine bases can be easily traced in the mouth of an immoderate smoker and especially the smoker of cigars. An alcoholic drink is, therefore, calculated quickly to wash out this poisonous oil and to carry it into the stomach.

NEW YORK WENT DRY.

LIQUOR MEN TOOK NO CHANCES.

New York, April 7.—The police and the liquor dealers gave Greater New York a "dry" Sunday yesterday. The day had no equal in the suspension of the liquor traffic since five years ago, when Superintendent Thomas F. Byrnes tightly closed the saloons one memorable Sunday. Few liquor dealers yesterday had the temerity to keep open and serve drinks alone, and of those who did the majority were invited to visit the nearest police station, there to remain until bondsmen appeared.

In the "Tenderloin," now known as the "White Light" district, liquor was sold, but only under conditions which proved drawbacks to many of the thirsty. In many of the saloons the shades were drawn in the bar-rooms, but it is said improvised bars were established in upstairs rooms. In a few places the proprietors are alleged to have established what is known as the "Kansas speak-easy," or "blind pig," consisting of a circular opening in a wooden partition, into which was fitted a round board arranged so as to swing about. On each side of the round door was a shelf, on which the bartender could serve drinks to the waiter without being seen, and even if the police had succeeded in getting in they could not have arrested the bartender, as no one could see him.

Drinks were served all day in the dining rooms of the big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels, and although they were sold within the proscribed hours, no attempt at interference was made. No one, however, was permitted to sit down and order a drink, even though he ordered a sandwich at the same time. The hotel folk insisted that something akin to a substantial meal at least be ordered.

For the first time in many years the saloons in the residence section in upper Harlem were all closed. Despite the excise excitement in the city from time to time, the liquor dealers in that section have kept open. On the Bowery it was exceedingly hard to get a drink. The saloonkeepers were not ready to take chances of arrest, and for the most part kept their doors locked.

The police also compelled the small shopkeepers throughout the city to close, except that the grocers and delicatessen shops were permitted to keep open until 10 o'clock, as provided by law.

Seventy-nine arrests for violations of the excise law were made in Manhattan and the Bronx between the hours of midnight Saturday and 11 o'clock last night. There were in these two boroughs 14 arrests for violations of other Sunday closing laws. In Brooklyn the police reported 27 arrests for violation of the excise laws; there was one in Richmond and none in Queens. This is a total of 121, as against 64 on Sunday, March 30.

Fairmont Had a Dry Sunday.

Fairmont, W. Va., April 7.—"Nothing doing today," was the sign displayed in front of all of the saloons here yesterday. It was the first Sunday since the new mayor went into office, and the sign signifies that dry Sundays are to be observed.

LAWLESS ACTION EXPECTED.

Negroes Ordered From an Oklahoma Town and Threaten Resistance.

Guthrie, Okla, April 7.—April 6, the last day set for negroes to remain in Lawton, Okla., passed with no direct attacks on the colored people, but today is awaited with ominous silence. Many of the negroes have left, stating that they will not receive protection. Others, however, are determined to remain. The county officials have organized matters as well as possible to preserve order. One hundred deputies have been sworn in. The governor stated yesterday that if necessary he will use extreme means to thwart any lawless action, and he has the proffered assistance of the federal authorities.

Three Millionaires in Race.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 7.—The opening gun will be fired this week in the forthcoming fight between three millionaires in this state for a seat in the United States senate. The term of Senator Nathan B. Scott will expire in 1905, and the state senators elected this year will vote for his successor. Senator Scott will be opposed by Henry Schmulbach, a millionaire brewer of Wheeling, and James L. Caldwell, of Huntington, a millionaire barker.

SCRANTON'S STRIKE IS ENDED.

Scranton, Pa., April 7.—Scranton's six months' street car strike is at an end, and the men returned to work this morning. An agreement, secured through the work of various intermediaries, was signed last night by General Manager Silliman and the executive board of the strikers.

All the men are to be taken back at the small advance in wages recently announced by the company. Any man for whom the company cannot find a place immediately will be given a bonus equal to one-half the difference between $32.50 (a common laborer's pay) and the amount he was earning at the time of the strike. Many of the strikers have secured other employment temporarily. The idea is to have these continue at their temporary work, and allow the idle ones to have the places the company can immediately provide.

The barn men are given a flat increase of 7 per cent. The new schedule of the car men changes the minimum from 14 to 17 cents an hour, the maximum from 19 to 19½ cents an hour, and makes three years instead of five years the period in which the maximum rate can be earned.

Altoona, Pa., April 7.—The strike situation in this region remains unsettled, but the probability is a satisfactory decision may be reached today. All the unions in the field where the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal and Iron Company is interested held meetings yesterday, and delegates, one from each mine, were elected to act as a committee to meet Manager L. W. Robinson this afternoon at Punxsutawney.

A Funny Language.

The native dictionary of Samoa is interesting in the light it casts upon the Samoan character. I find "an impossibility, such as an old man getting a young wife." Another word means "to beg deliriously for fishhooks." "Unwelcome" is given, "such as a visiting party that is accompanied by neither a handsome man nor a pretty maid." The definition of "widow" or "widower" is synonymous with detached shellfish.

There are also definitions that show considerable thought and irony. "Meanness," for instance, can go no further than "to climb out on your own breadfruit tree to steal your neighbor's breadfruit." Faapuatama, like a trumpet blown by wild lads, blown anyhow and all times; so conduct without consideration. Popoga, to look owl eyed, as a person staring when food or property is being divided. "Good brown earth" describes an honest, unpretending man. To show how difficult the language is for the stranger I may say that the little word ta means I, we two, to beat with a stick, to play on a musical instrument, to reprove, to tattoo, to open a vein, to bail a cannon, to wash clothing by beating and to turn a somersault.—Century.

PORT OF MISSING MEN

MANY SAIL FROM GLOUCESTER NEVER TO RETURN.

Solemn Service Held Annually In Quaint Old Town In Memory of Lost Fishermen—Sad Ceremony of Calling the Roll of the Dead.

Spring's advent brings more sadness than joy to the quaint old Massachusetts town of Gloucester. It is then that the havoc wrought by wintry seas must be reckoned, and it is always great. While much of the wealth of the old fishing town is drawn from the ocean, it pays heavy toll. Out of a population of less than 30,000 more than a hundred men are drowned every year on the fishing banks—more than two a week.

Rudyard Kipling in his story "Captains Courageous" describes a curious custom of the old fishing town. It is an annual memorial service for the fishermen lost at sea. Early in spring a day is set for this sad ceremony. Families and friends of the lost ones and many leading citizens assemble to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the dead. The services are simple—a prayer, a hymn, perhaps an appropriate poem is read; then, saddest of all, comes the calling the roll of the dead. Each name is read out, the silence broken only by the voice of the reader and the sobs of the bereft. So the dread record of the year is chronicled, month by month, the date and manner of each disaster detailed, so far as known. Thus Gloucester remembers its dead "toilers of the sea."

Although great improvements have been made in the last forty years in vessels and gear, the death rate has not been reduced. The vessels carry larger crews, make longer voyages, and the men take greater chances.

The Georges banks take the heaviest tribute. After them follow the banks of Newfoundland. But Gloucester's dead lie in the cold seas of many other places. The fisheries of Greenland, Labrador and even Ireland and Norway have exacted toll from Gloucester's hardy fishermen.

The fishing schooners carry crews of from six to sixteen men, besides the captain and cook, according to the size of the craft. On the deck of the vessel abaft the mainmast are the dories. These typical New England deep sea fishing boats look clumsy, but are light to pull and excellent in a sea way. They have flaring bows and sterns and are sharp at each end.

In trawl fishing, which is the method most commonly employed, hand lines being too slow and tedious, the dories are used for laying and taking up the trawl lines. These run from 1,500 to 3,000 feet in length, with hooks tied a few feet apart. These lines are kept coiled in a tub and are paid out as the dory is rowed along. One end is fastened to a keg to serve as a buoy, so that it may be found again. An anchor is also attached that it may not drift away.

When the trawls are to be lifted, two men attend to them. The line is hauled over the side by one and the fish taken off. The other rebaits the hooks and drops them over again. In a rough sea this operation becomes very dangerous, for the weight of the sagging line is great, and many dories have been drawn completely under as a big swell struck them.

Every dory carries a tin horn for the purpose of signaling in case of fog. The banks are directly in the steamer track, and when the fog shuts down some one must keep constantly at the horn. Too often they are unheard by the men on the steamships, and the towering prow smashes a fishing schooner or dory to bits and continues on its way, while the passengers on board are not conscious that anything has happened.

One of the first smacks to be cut down by a steamship was the Gloucester schooner Sevo. It was run into by the steamer Huntress in 1839 and sank at once. All were lost except the captain and a boy. Since then there has been an appalling record of similar catastrophes.

The worst disaster that has happened to the Gloucester fishing fleet in recent years was caused by the great gale of Aug. 24, 1873, when nine vessels and 128 men were lost.

A Christian Nation Must Imitate Christ

By LOCK WING, Chinese Vice Consul at New York

I HAVE no sympathy with the Boxer movement. I have no sympathy with ignorance of any kind. But THE BOXER MOVEMENT IN CHINA IS NO WORSE THAN THOSE MOVEMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES WHERE IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE MAKE LOWER THE MORAL STATUS OF THOSE WHO COME FROM DISTANT LANDS. The United States is not free from oppression, as you undoubtedly know if you have read of recent occurrences.

The exclusion act which bars my countrymen from coming to your shores is as barbarous a measure as one could conceive of and totally at variance with your ideals and, above all, your Christianity. What is Christianity if it does not Christianize?

I HAVE BEEN TAUGHT TO BELIEVE THAT THIS IS A CHRISTIAN NATION, AND I HOPE IT'S SO, BUT THE CHRISTIAN ELEMENT IN THIS COUNTRY IN ORDER TO SHOW CHINA THAT IT NEEDS CHRISTIANITY MUST FIRST OF ALL BE ITS EXPONENT AND LIVE UP TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GREAT MASTER.

RISTORI AS A DIPLOMAT.

How the Great Actress Won Gortchakof to Her Cause.

Ristori was charged with the mission of bringing round Prince Gortchakof to the side of Italian unity when she went in 1860 to a play at St. Petersburg. As the court was in mourning she was commanded to come and recite "Maria Stuarda" at the Winter palace. Mme. Ristori recited her great part and electrified the court. The czar shed tears.

After she retired from the room where the imperial party was to a salon filled with courtiers, the czarowitz brought up Prince Gortchakof and presented him. He had something to say about the emotional character of Ristori's recitation. He wondered how she could have been so deeply stirred by the sufferings of one who had perished so many centuries ago.

"I was not thinking of her," cried Ristori. "I was thinking of a living and discrowned martyr, supposed to be dead, but living. I was thinking of my beloved Italy. I wanted, under the image of Maria Stuarda, to represent to the minds of their imperial majesties the cause of Italian independence and unity, and I think they vibrated in unison with my patriotic efforts. I now want to convert you, prince, for I am afraid you think that Italy must not be resuscitated, though she has risen as if from the dead and is full of life, energy, hope."

Gortchakof answered in diplomatic commonplaces. At length he appeared moved by Ristori's eloquence and said: "I promise to refer the matter to his imperial majesty. You have not pleaded in vain."

Ralph Waldo Emerson's Spree.

There is an old tradition that tells how Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Sage of Concord, once went on a wild, reckless spree. Weary of Marcus Aurelius, Alcott and the serene heights of Concord, he resolved to make a plunge into the vortex of crime and folly in a great city to see vice and the vicious at close range and thus learn by experience of the underworld.

He went straight to the saloon of one Brigham in Boston, in those days far-famed among Harvard students as the aboriginal inventor of more "fancy drinks" than any one since the days of Father Bacchus. Bewildered by the festive scene and the endless list of beverages he had never heard of, he asked Brigham which one of the whole bibulous catalogue might be relied on to impart the largest sum total of experience in the shortest possible time, to which devout inquiry genial Brigham, who at once took in the situation, is said to have replied, "Oh, I guess a glass of lemonade would be the right thing for you!"—Boston Herald.

Supplied the Want.

A certain writer while in San Francisco visited the new house of an old friend, a gentleman of Irish extraction. The hostess evidently took great pride in the house, the furnishings of which were new and beautiful and gave every evidence of taste and refinement. The writer, who has an eye for the beautiful, gave unstinted praise to everything he saw.

"But," he said, "I am sorry to see that your house, beautiful as it is, lacks one ornament which no Irish house should be without."

"What is that?" she asked unsuspiciously.

The hostess' eyes sparkled.

"It did," she said indignantly, "but you have supplied the want."—New York Times.

Goldfish.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of goldfish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about and go round and round until fairly worn out.

LORD ROBERTS' SUCCESSOR

King Edward's Brother to Become Head of the British Army.

Queen Victoria's long cherished wish that her son be made commander in chief of the British army is about to be fulfilled, although she was unable to bring it about during her lifetime. For some time there have been rumors that Lord Roberts wished to retire. Now it is announced that the rumor is correct and that the hero of Kandahar is to retire in April and that he will be succeeded by the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's only remaining brother.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

Cambridge, the late Queen Victoria was anxious that her son, the Duke of Connaught, should succeed to the command of the army. When her plans were defeated and the appointment of Lord Wolseley became necessary, she contented herself with the thought that at least her son could succeed Lord Wolseley. But Lord Roberts' capture of Cronje and the resulting wave of popular enthusiasm and the equally strong conviction that the war office must be reformed again defeated the queen's wishes, and Lord Roberts was made commander in chief.

But the abrupt removal of General Buller by Lord Roberts caused a revolution in feeling, and for the first time in his life the beloved "Bobs" heard hisses mingled with the cheers sent up in his honor whenever he appeared in public.

That was a bitter experience to a man so fond of popularity and is said to be one of the causes of his intention to resign. Another is his discovery that he is quite unable to cut the red tape that is bound so tightly around the war office by its civilian force.

And so at last the Duke of Connaught is to have his long looked for chance. He is a clever, kindly and popular man, who has the reputation of being a really good soldier, quite aside from his royal prestige.

The duke's personality is thought to be great enough to overcome any popular feeling that a more brilliant, energetic and forceful man should be placed at the head of the army.

Brains Make Soldiers.

A discussion recently took place in the smoking room of a Swiss hotel between a German and an American as to the merits of their respective armies. The former believed in discipline and trained troops. The American believed in training, too, but held that a lot depended upon the material trained. "Given," quoth he, "that brains are lacking, no amount of physical training will make up for them. Take the American troops, comparatively untrained, and see how well they fight. It's because of their brains."

"Nonsense," rejoined the aroused German. "Untrained troops can never stand against well drilled ones. Take your country, for example, with practically no drilled army. What would you do"— He paused impressively and then said, "What would you do if Germany landed an army of 250,000 perfectly drilled and perfectly equipped men on your shores?"

"Bury them," was the quiet but complete rejoinder.—Detroit Free Press.

FEED BABY SLOWLY.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTORS IN CHILD REARING.

Reasons Why Food Should Not Be Tumbled Rapidly Into the Little Stomach—Advice Which Applies to Grown Folks as Well as Babes.

In the proper bringing up of a child there is nothing absolutely more important than this one thing—to teach it to eat slowly.

Every groom knows and observes the rule in the care of a horse that rapid eating is fatal to digestion. There are all sorts of patent mangers to prevent the horse swallowing his oats too quickly. The man who has no patent manger knows enough, when necessary, to put a stone in the manger, scattering the oats around it, so that the horse may be compelled to eat slowly. If the horse's inclination is to gulp down water too fast, the careful man will put a big sponge in the water, compelling slow drinking.

A child's appetite, when he is allowed to eat rapidly, is always in excess of his actual needs unless the child is in bad health. The reason for this is extremely simple. The child craves food because his body requires to manufacture new tissue. He is growing, and he must not only replace the used up tissues that his daily life destroys, but he must make new flesh, new muscles, new bone and new blood every day, adding weight and size.

The sensation of hunger is not the craving of an empty stomach, satisfied as soon as the stomach is filled; it is a craving that is felt by the nerves all over the body. This craving cannot possibly be satisfied until the stomach has begun the work of transforming the food into blood, flesh, muscles, etc.; consequently the sensation which we call hunger persists long after the child or grown person has rapidly absorbed as much food as it really needs.

A million foolish parents urge their children to eat a great deal and always let them eat as much as they want to. Yet all of these know that a famished man taken off a wreck will eat himself to death if allowed to do so. The very hungry child goes to the same excess, only in a lesser degree. The great safeguard against that excess in eating, which kills 90 per cent of men before their time and which accounts for 99 per cent of children's diseases, is slow eating.

Nearly all children eat too rapidly. They do so by nature. Slow eating is a matter of education. But too often the mother or the nurse teaches the child the habit of eating fast. When the baby is little, it is fed one spoonful at a time. Before it has time to half chew or even gulp down the first teaspoonful of food another is held to its lips. Of course it swallows what it has in its mouth and seizes upon the next mouthful. The habit thus inculcated by foolish adults often ruins the child permanently.

Four factors count in the healthy assimilation of food, factors which parents and nurses should remember. Assuming the food to be properly prepared, thoroughly cooked and wisely selected, there comes, first, the work of the teeth, which prepare the food for easy digestion; second, the action of the saliva; with which the food must be thoroughly mixed in order to minimize the necessary work of the gastric juices in the stomach; third, the work of the stomach itself; fourth, and most important, a proper supply of blood and of heat.

Force your child to chew slowly and thoroughly every mouthful. If nothing else will do, compel him at frequent intervals to lay down his knife and fork that the importance of prolonged chewing may be impressed upon him. Don't allow your child to gulp down water or any other liquid with his solid food. If you allow him to drink while he eats, the salivary glands will not act. They will not need to act, for he will be able to swallow his food easily when it is made moist by water.

You can't do anything to help along the unconscious process which goes on in the stomach, but you can do everything to help that process by attending to the fourth necessity, which demands blood and the heat of the blood in the stomach. Allow no child after eating to take violent exercise, to study or even to read an exciting book. The brain has first call upon the service of the heart, and as soon as the brain is excited the blood leaves the stomach and goes to the head. The muscles also when too violently exerted draw the blood away from the stomach.

It is absolutely impossible for a child or a grown person to digest properly or to get strength and vitality from what he eats unless for at least a half hour after eating the stomach be allowed to monopolize the blood supply.

Children should be kept quiet in some way, especially very young children, after they have eaten. In the case of very young babies nature attends to this mercifully by making them go to sleep as soon as they have absorbed their milk. Older children ought not to go to sleep directly after eating for physiological reasons which may be explained at some other time; but they ought to be quiet and calm. Tens of thousands of children in homes where this newspaper is read are ruined in health by studying right after meals. The public school system which gives children too short a resting period in the middle of the day is responsible partly for this, and the home studies at night are also responsible.

Every word that is said here applies to grownup people, of whom not one in a hundred has ever been taught to apply to himself such common sense care as is bestowed on a second class horse.—New York Journal.

SCHOOL BOND ISSUE NOTICE

Notice is hereby given by the Board of Education of East Liverpool City School District that:

Whereas, The Board of Education of the City of East Liverpool, city district of the first class, has determined that it is necessary for the proper accommodation of the schools of said district to erect an eight room school building on lots numbers 3141, 3142 and 3143 in Bradshaw's addition to the city of East Liverpool, and

Whereas, The erecting and furnishing of said school building will require a greater tax upon the property of said district than the Board is authorized to levy, and

Whereas, In order to provide means therefor, it will be necessary to issue bonds; and

Whereas, The Board has estimated that the probable cost of erecting and furnishing said school building will be $20,000.00;

Now therefore, at the general election to be held in the city of East Liverpool on the 7th day of April, 1902, the following questions shall be submitted to the electors of the said school district:

QUESTION ONE.

Shall taxes be levied for the purpose of erecting and furnishing a school house upon lots numbers 3141, 3142 and 3143, Bradshaw's addition to the city of East Liverpool, the probable cost thereof being $20,000.00?

QUESTION TWO.

Shall bonds be issued and a levy be made from year to year, after eight years from the date of the bonds sufficient to provide for the payment of $1,000 per year of the principal thereof?

PORT OF MISSING MEN

Spring's advent brings more sadness than joy to the quaint old Massachusetts town of Gloucester. It is then that the havoc wrought by wintry seas must be reckoned, and it is always great. While much of the wealth of the old fishing town is drawn from the ocean, it pays heavy toll. Out of a population of less than 30,000 more than a hundred men are drowned every year on the fishing banks—more than two a week.

Rudyard Kipling in his story "Captains Courageous" describes a curious custom of the old fishing town. It is an annual memorial service for the fishermen lost at sea. Early in spring a day is set for this sad ceremony. Families and friends of the lost ones and many leading citizens assemble to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the dead. The services are simple—a prayer, a hymn, perhaps an appropriate poem is read; then, saddest of all, comes the calling the roll of the dead. Each name is read out, the silence broken only by the voice of the reader and the sobs of the bereft. So the dread record of the year is chronicled, month by month, the date and manner of each disaster detailed, so far as known. Thus Gloucester remembers its dead "toilers of the sea."

Although great improvements have been made in the last forty years in vessels and gear, the death rate has not been reduced. The vessels carry larger crews, make longer voyages, and the men take greater chances.

The Georges banks take the heaviest tribute. After them follow the banks of Newfoundland. But Gloucester's dead lie in the cold seas of many other places. The fisheries of Greenland, Labrador ,and even Ireland and Norway have exacted toll from Gloucester's hardy fishermen.

captain and cook, according to the size of the craft. On the deck of the vessel abaft the mainmast are the dories. These typical New England deep sea fishing boats look clumsy, but are light to pull and excellent in a sea way. They have flaring bows and sterns and are sharp at each end.

In trawl fishing, which is the method most commonly employed, hand lines being too slow and tedious, the dories are used for laying and taking up the trawl lines. These run from 1,500 to 3,000 feet in length, with hooks tied a few feet apart. These lines are kept coiled in a tub and are paid out as the dory is rowed along. One end is fastened to a keg to serve as a buoy, so that it may be found again. An anchor is also attached that it may not drift away.

When the trawls are to be lifted, two men attend to them. The line is hauled over the side by one and the fish taken off. The other rebaits the hooks and drops them over again. In a rough sea this operation becomes very dangerous, for the weight of the sagging line is great, and many dories have been drawn completely under as a big swell struck them.

Every dory carries a tin horn for the purpose of signaling in case of fog. The banks are directly in the steamer track, and when the fog shuts down some one must keep constantly at the horn. Too often they are unheard by the men on the steamships, and the towering prow smashes a fishing schooner or dory to bits and continues on its way, while the passengers on board are not conscious that anything has happened.

One of the first smacks to be cut down by a steamship was the Gloucester schooner Sevo. It was run into by the steamer Huntress in 1839 and sank at once. All were lost except the captain and a boy. Since then there has been an appalling record of similar catastrophes.

The worst disaster that has happened to the Gloucester fishing fleet in recent years was caused by the great gale of Aug. 24, 1873, when nine vessels and 128 men were lost.

A Christian Nation Must Imitate Christ

I HAVE no sympathy with the Boxer movement. I have no sympathy with ignorance of any kind. But THE BOXER MOVEMENT IN CHINA IS NO WORSE THAN THOSE MOVEMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES WHERE IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE MAKE LOWER THE MORAL STATUS OF THOSE WHO COME FROM DISTANT LANDS. The United States is not free from oppression, as you undoubtedly know if you have read of recent occurrences.

RISTORI AS A DIPLOMAT.

How the Great Actress Won Gortchakof to Her Cause.

Ristori was charged with the mission of bringing round Prince Gortchakof to the side of Italian unity when she went in 1860 to a play at St. Petersburg. As the court was in mourning she was commanded to come and recite "Maria Stuarda" at the Winter palace. Mme. Ristori recited her great part and electrified the court. The czar shed tears.

After she retired from the room where the imperial party was to a salon filled with courtiers, the czarowitz brought up Prince Gortchakof and presented him. He had something to say about the emotional character of Ristori's recitation. He wondered how she could have been so deeply stirred by the sufferings of one who had perished so many centuries ago.

"I was not thinking of her," cried Ristori. "I was thinking of a living and discrowned martyr, supposed to be dead, but living. I was thinking of my beloved Italy. I wanted, under the image of Maria Stuarda, to represent to the minds of their imperial majesties the cause of Italian independence and unity, and I think they vibrated in unison with my patriotic efforts. I now want to convert you, prince, for I am afraid you think that Italy must not be resuscitated, though she has risen as if from the dead and is full of life, energy, hope."

Gortchakof answered in diplomatic commonplaces. At length he appeared moved by Ristori's eloquence and said: "I promise to refer the matter to his imperial majesty. You have not pleaded in vain."

Ralph Waldo Emerson's Spree.

There is an old tradition that tells how Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Sage of Concord, once went on a wild, reckless spree. Weary of Marcus Aurelius, Alcott and the serene heights of Concord, he resolved to make a plunge into the vortex of crime and folly in a great city to see vice and the vicious at close range and thus learn by experience of the underworld.

He went straight to the saloon of one Brigham in Boston, in those days farfamed among Harvard students as the aboriginal inventor of more "fancy drinks" than any one since the days of Father Bacchus. Bewildered by the festive scene and the endless list of beverages he had never heard of, he asked Brigham which one of the whole bibulous catalogue might be relied on to impart the largest sum total of experience in the shortest possible time, to which devout inquiry genial Brigham, who at once took in the situation, is said to have replied, "Oh, I guess a glass of lemonade would be the right thing for you!"—Boston Herald.

Supplied the Want.

A certain writer while in San Francisco visited the new house of an old friend, a gentleman of Irish extraction. The hostess evidently took great pride in the house, the furnishings of which were new and beautiful and gave every evidence of taste and refinement. The writer, who has an eye for the beautiful, gave unstinted praise to everything he saw.

"But," he said, "I am sorry to see that your house, beautiful as it is, lacks one ornament which no Irish house should be without."

"What is that?" she asked unsuspiciously.

The hostess' eyes sparkled.

"It did," she said indignantly, "but you have supplied the want."—New York Times.

Goldfish.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of goldfish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about and go round and round until fairly worn out.

LORD ROBERTS' SUCCESSOR

King Edward's Brother to Become Head of the British Army.

Queen Victoria's long cherished wish that her son be made commander in chief of the British army is about to be fulfilled, although she was unable to bring it about during her lifetime. For some time there have been rumors that Lord Roberts wished to retire. Now it is announced that the rumor is correct and that the hero of Kandahar is to retire in April and that he will be succeeded by the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's only remaining brother.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

Cambridge, the late Queen Victoria was anxious that her son, the Duke of Connaught, should succeed to the command of the army. When her plans were defeated and the appointment of Lord Wolseley became necessary, she contented herself with the thought that at least her son could succeed Lord Wolseley. But Lord Roberts' capture of Cronje and the resulting wave of popular enthusiasm and the equally strong conviction that the war office must be reformed again defeated the queen's wishes, and Lord Roberts was made commander in chief.

But the abrupt removal of General Buller by Lord Roberts caused a revolution in feeling, and for the first time in his life the beloved "Bobs" heard hisses mingled with the cheers sent up in his honor whenever he appeared in public.

That was a bitter experience to a man so fond of popularity and is said to be one of the causes of his intention to resign. Another is his discovery that he is quite unable to cut the red tape that is bound so tightly around the war office by its civilian force.

And so at last the Duke of Connaught is to have his long looked for chance. He is a clever, kindly and popular man, who has the reputation of being a really good soldier, quite aside from his royal prestige.

The duke's personality is thought to be great enough to overcome any popular feeling that a more brilliant, energetic and forceful man should be placed at the head of the army.

Brains Make Soldiers.

A discussion recently took place in the smoking room of a Swiss hotel between a German and an American as to the merits of their respective armies. The former believed in discipline and trained troops. The American believed in training, too, but held that a lot depended upon the material trained. "Given," quoth he, "that brains are lacking, no amount of physical training will make up for them. Take the American troops, comparatively untrained, and see how well they fight. It's because of their brains."

"Nonsense," rejoined the aroused German. "Untrained troops can never stand against well drilled ones. Take your country, for example, with practically no drilled army. What would you do"— He paused impressively and then said, "What would you do if Germany landed an army of 250,000 perfectly drilled and perfectly equipped men on your shores?"

"Bury them," was the quiet but complete rejoinder.—Detroit Free Press.

FEED BABY SLOWLY.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTORS IN CHILD REARING.

Reasons Why Food Should Not Be Tumbled Rapidly Into the Little Stomach—Advice Which Applies to Grown Folks as Well as Babes.

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,

V.—Henry David Thoreau.

THOREAU was born in the philosophers' town of old Concord, Mass. By the strictest economies his family helped him through Harvard, where he devoted himself to such studies as pleased him best. After graduation he earned a bare living by surveying, gardening and fence building, contriving always to get half of each day off to search fields and streams and woods for any new or old word which nature had to say to him. In this way he became a practical naturalist without troubling himself with the scientific side of research, as he had always been a lover of nature's common ways, seeing in them a hundred things which he fancied that most men do not observe. In this he was frequently mistaken, as in other things where he supposed himself to be the original observer. However, his own observation was always as good to him as a first class discovery, and he made the most of it. A great part of his charm as a writer is the naive simplicity with which he describes things as new that several other observers were already familiar with. But there are so many who have not observed them and others still who would rather read about them than get their feet wet in finding them that Thoreau will continue to be the best naturalist for readers at home, for as next to going a-fishing is to read Izaak Walton so a pleasanter diversion than to follow in Thoreau's tracks through thick and thin is to read how he made them and to hear him tell what he saw, even if one has seen it himself.

In 1845, at the age of twenty-eight, he built for himself a hut on a piece of woodland owned by Emerson on the edge of Walden pond. There he stayed as alone as his curious friends would permit for two years in order "to live deliberately and to front only the essential facts of life and transact some private business," as he said—that is, to write his book entitled "A Week on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers." Incidentally he also gathered material for "Walden," the other volume which was published in his lifetime. After his death [illegible] collected other writings of his, amounting to nine volumes more, but the first [illegible] readers as having the stamp of his own approval and consent to publish. Of [illegible] "The Week" is an account of such a boating excursion as any boy under fifty might be glad to make with brother or comrade on a stream running past his home.

Equally interesting is the account of his two years and two months' stay in the shanty by the pond, where he also wrote the bulk of "Walden; or, Life In the Woods." The entire book is the protest of a single man against what he considered the unnecessary and self imposed burdens of ordinary life. Even of his plain farmer townsmen he says: "How many a poor immortal soul have I met, well nigh crushed and smothered under its load, creeping down the road of life, pushing before it a barn 75 feet by 40 and 100 acres of land, tillage, mowing, pasture and wood lot! It is a fool's life, as they will find when they get to the end of it, if not before." Accordingly he attempts to show them how to live on 9 cents a day.

Some have not failed to point out that he did this by the direct or indirect assistance of those very fellow men of whom he pretended to be independent. Others have suggested that if a man chooses to live like a woodchuck he runs the risk of becoming like that animal in many respects. Probably the truth is that if he has lived forty years of his life like other men two years of aboriginal existence will not greatly harm him if he can stand it, especially if he has books for evening companions.

After a chapter on economy and shelter he says, "Near the end of March, 1845, I borrowed an ax and went down to the woods by Walden pond and began to cut some white pines for timber." He admits that it is hard to begin life without borrowing, but does not mention that the land on which he built was borrowed as well as the ax and the pine trees. The boards were bought of an Irish laborer who had worked on the railroad and was quitting his shanty. On the Fourth of July, by the assistance of neighbors at a "raising," he is able to declare his independence of society and begin his Robinson Crusoe life fully a mile from town. It was a good and safe place to descant upon the failures and foibles of communities since he could reach the store and the postoffice by an easy walk. For the church he professed to have no need, and it would not have known what to do with him fifty years ago. A chapter on architecture is suggested by his simple efforts in that direction, which had resulted in "a tight shingled and plastered house, ten feet wide and fifteen feet long and eight foot posts, with a garret and a closet, a large window on each side, two trapdoors, one door at the end and a brick fireplace opposite," at a total cost, exclusive of his own labor, of $28.12½. Then follows the account of his daily fare at a cost of 27 cents a week, another study in economics and dietetics which may be commended to persons having strong constitutions and a simple appetite. Rice he could devour in abundance "because he loved so well the philosophy of India," but it must have been a Yankee taste that helped him down "rye and Indian meal without yeast, potatoes, a very little salt pork, molasses, salt and my drink water."

Thoreau.

It is not improbable that the epidemic of transcendentalism, the philosophy of which he had an attack was at the bottom of his hermit life, as it was of the Brook Farm community experiment a few miles away in Roxbury. From a few kindred spirits trying to live in unity it was but a step to a single bachelor's attempt to establish the new kingdom of separation all by himself. It was the logic of the forefathers reduced to the absurd and the triumph of independency for—twenty-six [illegible]. Both experiments were failures, and a return to common sense and the town followed. Thoreau had succeeded in showing that one can camp for over two years not far from a country store and that he himself could meet all the expenses of living by working six weeks in a year, but his greater success was in telling of the incidental advantages and disadvantages. Even his first book did not add to his income, nearly the whole edition being returned unsold. Upon this incident he wrote philosophically, "I have now a library of 900 volumes, 700 of which I wrote myself." But his day of recognition came with the appreciative generation which followed his own. He had taken great pains to say what he knew in a clear and entertaining manner. Much time was at his command. He was industrious and patient. That was a part of one half. The other was the indeterminable quantity of a native talent which does not always go with leisure and diligence and ambition. The chapter on "Reading" in this very book shows what the writer of it thought of absorption and production. In that on "Sounds" another natural gift of observation is revealed, in "Solitude" the capacity to fraternize with nature in all its manifestations. "There can be no very black melancholy to him who lives in the midst of nature and has his senses still. While I enjoy the friendship of the seasons, I trust nothing can make life a burden to me. I find it wholesome to be alone the greater part of the time. To be in company, even with the best, is soon wearisome and dissipating. We are for the most part more lonely when we go abroad among men than when we stay in our chambers. A man thinking or working is always alone, let him be where he will. The really diligent student in one of the crowded hives of Cambridge college is as solitary as a dervish in the desert. We meet at very short intervals, not having had time to acquire any new value for each other. We meet at meals three times a day and give each other a taste of that old musty cheese that we are. Less frequency would suffice for all important and hearty communications."

Apart from his theories of social life, which are half truths, there are views of animal and bird and elemental life which none will dispute and many enjoy. All his books are an education in those things which are near, but not always clear to the unobservant. They are not discerned because always visible. In a double sense the wood is not seen for the trees. It is the unusual tree only that catches the eye. All the rest constitute the uniformity and blur of the forest.

This man's business was to say, "Stop and see what you are stumbling over unheeded." Above all, he calls attention to unsuspected relations between the higher and lower forms of nature, the sand leaves to foliage and the leaf to the palm of the human hand, the hillside to the face. Spring is an unceasing miracle of revival and growth, winter of sleep and rest and all the year a revelation. But in these obvious phenomena he finds unobserved byplay. "I heard the whooping of the ice in the pond, my great bedfellow, as if it were restless and would fain turn over. Sometimes I heard the foxes barking as if struggling for light and to be dogs and run freely in the streets, for may there not be civilization going on among brutes as well as men?" It is this intimacy with the finer and more distant voices of nature which makes him its skilled interpreter. He finds a sign as the Indian discovers a trail by a broken twig. He sees every bird or beast that had gone over the snow in the tracks it left, and they all were on friendly terms with him.

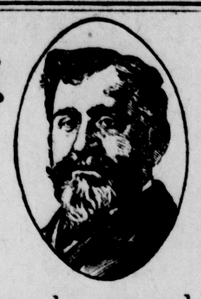

He understood men as well, although not fond of a crowd. Congenial companions were few for a man with truthful words and blunt speech and a certain dominating air of assumed superiority to conventionalities. His friend said, "I like Henry, but I cannot love him, and, as for taking his arm, I would as soon take the branch of an elm tree."

Altogether he has made a better impression, or at least a more pleasing, by his books than by his life, sincere and upright, truthful and in a way religious as it was. Readers will go with him in his "Excursions" who might not have enjoyed his company. He will take them even now as in a guidebook to Cape Cod and to Canada and the Maine woods in the volumes bearing these titles, and in four others named for the seasons he will lead them through unsuspected phases of nature in Massachusetts.

Such a man must be a poet, and this one wrote verse, but his prose poems will be preferred by most readers.

Why One Tax Is a Failure

By EDWARD LAUTERBACH, New York Lawyer

THE facility with which personalty can be removed either to another county or another state renders it a very unsatisfactory subject for taxation.

I AM OPPOSED TO TAXATION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY FOR THE REASON THAT IT ENABLES THE VERY RICH TO EVADE THE PAYMENT OF THEIR JUST SHARE OF THE REVENUE OF THE CITY OR STATE IN WHICH THEY RESIDE, WHILE ESTATES AND LEGATEES AND THE COMPARATIVELY POOR MUST BEAR THE BURDEN.

It is not only an easy matter for great capitalists to convert their holdings of personalty into government or city bonds, even though it be only temporarily, or other nontaxable assets, such as the stock of corporations, but they can with equal facility set up over against the enormous earnings in their business enterprises actual or even contingent debts, which so shrink their holdings as to make them practically untaxable. Or they can swear that their country homes in other states or even in other counties of the state are their actual legal residences and thus evade taxation. Recently in the settlement of a modest estate a widow was given by will a ten thousand dollar mortgage without the power of converting it into money. She has to pay her 2 per cent tax out of the 4½ per cent the money earns, leaving her but a trifle for her interest in the property. This is by no means an isolated case.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

The Battle of Stones Which Marks Beginning of New Year.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxes fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as amiable a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most abject coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year, and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.—New York Tribune.

Wonders In the Equine Foot.

The foot of a horse is one of the most ingenious and unexampled pieces of mechanism in the whole range of animal structure. The outside hoof is made up of a series of thin vertical laminæ of horn, about 500 in number. Into this are fitted about 500 more thin laminæ, which belong to the coffin bone, both sets being elastic and adherent. The edges of a quire of paper inserted leaf by leaf into another quire will furnish a good idea of the arrangement of the laminæ in all the feet, amounting to about 4,000. These are distributed in the most secure manner and in a way that every spring is acted upon in an oblique direction. Verily there is a display of nature's wonder everywhere.

Wintering in Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. Altogether he has made a better impression, or at least a more pleasing, by his books than by his life, sincere and upright, truthful and in a way religious as it was. Readers will go with him in his "Excursions" who might not have enjoyed his company. He will take them even now as in a guidebook to Cape Cod and to Canada and the Maine woods in the volumes bearing these titles, and in four others named for the seasons he will lead them through unsuspected phases of nature in Massachusetts.

Such a man must be a poet, and this one wrote verse, but his prose poems will be preferred by most readers.

THE facility with which personalty can be removed either to another county or another state renders it a very unsatisfactory subject for taxation.

I AM OPPOSED TO TAXATION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY FOR THE REASON THAT IT ENABLES THE VERY RICH TO EVADE THE PAYMENT OF THEIR JUST SHARE OF THE REVENUE OF THE CITY OR STATE IN WHICH THEY RESIDE, WHILE ESTATES AND LEGATEES AND THE COMPARATIVELY POOR MUST BEAR THE BURDEN.

It is not only an easy matter for great capitalists to convert their holdings of personalty into government or city bonds, even though it be only temporarily, or other nontaxable assets, such as the stock of corporations, but they can with equal facility set up over against the enormous earnings in their business enterprises actual or even contingent debts, which so shrink their holdings as to make them practically untaxable. Or they can swear that their country homes in other states or even in other counties of the state are their actual legal residences and thus evade taxation. Recently in the settlement of a modest estate a widow was given by will a ten thousand dollar mortgage without the power of converting it into money. She has to pay her 2 per cent tax out of the 4½ per cent the money earns, leaving her but a trifle for her interest in the property. This is by no means an isolated case.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxes fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as amiable a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most abject coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year, and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.—New York Tribune.

Wonders In the Equine Foot.

The foot of a horse is one of the most ingenious and unexampled pieces of mechanism in the whole range of animal structure. The outside hoof is made up of a series of thin vertical laminæ of horn, about 500 in number. Into this are fitted about 500 more thin laminæ, which belong to the coffin bone, both sets being elastic and adherent. The edges of a quire of paper inserted leaf by leaf into another quire will furnish a good idea of the arrangement of the laminæ in all the feet, amounting to about 4,000. These are distributed in the most secure manner and in a way that every spring is acted upon in an oblique direction. Verily there is a display of nature's wonder everywhere.

Wintering in Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. A THEATRICAL REVIEW

A GOOD PLAY WELL PRESENTED.

Martha Morton's "The Diplomat" Fails to Score—Henrietta Crosman's Success as Rosalind and Her Plans.

At the new Savoy theater, in this city, Robert Edeson is delighting large audiences with his first stellar venture, "Soldiers of Fortune." The play selected gives opportunity for the natural and modest manner of the gentleman Mr. Edeson therefore does not seem to be acting. The book "Soldiers of Fortune" was the work of Richard Harding Davis. It was dramatized by Augustus Thomas. The story is interesting, contains much pretty sentiment and many bright lines and in some instances is strongly dramatic. I regret to add that it is a little incoherent, but if for no other reason it rivets the attention, as it is sufficiently vivid to make one wish to understand what it is all about.

Robert Edeson is a favorite with the New York theater going public, and his many friends must rejoice at his immediate success as a star. There is at all times in his acting the evidence of the true gentleman, and the role of Robert Clay affords him an opportunity to be—himself. Sincerity rings in Edeson's work, and a keen appreciation of the approval of the audience puts him in touch at once with those upon whose opinion so much in the career of a new star depends. So many good leading men and women make the mistake of attempting to star and find too late that the two positions are vastly different. It is therefore gratifying to see success reward some from the first.

Mr. Edeson's company is very good. Gretchen Lyons makes a very attractive Hope Langham and plays with vivacity and feeling. Harry Harwood as MacWilliams was to the life the hearty "old reliable" and added another laurel to those already won. Captain Stuart, as played by Guy Bates Post, was rather a disappointment. The character is a good one, but the actor did not quite rise to its possibilities. The opposite part to Captain Stuart was sustained by Dorothy Donnelly, formerly of the Murray Hill stock. She played Mme. Alvarez, the wife of the president, but she also fell short in her work. She was not convincing. The minor parts were all well carried out, especially one which in justice I must mention. Reginald King was played by an actor unknown to me, Macey Harlam by name. Macey Harlam is a coming actor and from the moment of his entrance seemed to be as perfectly at home on the stage as if he had known no other life.

William Collier has shelved his long successful play "On the Quiet" for a new comedy, "The Diplomat," by Martha Morton. It is now on the stage of the Madison Square theater and opened to a crowded house. I fear the change is not for the better, as there is not enough in it. Barring the intermissions, the entire play runs for only an hour and a quarter. The plot is so thin as almost to be beyond perception, and the situations are neither strong nor funny.

William Collier is a comedian who at once appeals to the sympathies of his audience and causes laughter even when he means to be taken seriously. He plays the role of Nick Sportwick delightfully, leaving nothing to be desired, and has with him an excellent company, but the play is not good. That talented actor Edward Abeles enacts the part of Edwards, the valet of Sportwick, and is every bit as good as the star. He is a gifted player, and Mr. Collier has been wise to so cast his characters that the servant and master strengthen the work of each other. A poor Edwards would have materially marred the effect of the star's own artistic efforts. It is always pleasant to see Edward Abeles' name on a programme, for it is usually a guarantee of good acting. Etienne Girardot was not up to his usual standard of excellence. In "The Diplomat" he does poorer work than I have ever seen from that gentleman, and his success in Mrs. Fiske's company recently only throws the present into sharper contrast. Isabel Urquhart, Nannette Comstock and Louise Allen played the principal female roles, the honors going to the last as Daisy Darling, the "Florodora" chorus girl.

It cannot be denied that Henrietta Crosman's revival of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at the Republic theater, in this city, has resulted in a triumph for that actress. It has been of greater benefit to her than the unqualified success of "Joan o' the Shoals" could possibly have been. This is due to the fact that if Miss Crosman had felt warranted in continuing Mrs. Sutherland's play throughout her engagement at the Republic there would still have been a large section of the theater going public which, while admitting Miss Crosman's ability in ordinary comedy or melodrama, would have treated with disdain her Shakespearean aspirations. So, after all, much real good to the actress has come from the sudden withdrawal of "Joan o' the Shoals."

Having thus, as it were, established herself upon a firmer foundation than she has yet occupied, Miss Crosman will now go back to that class of work which the public appears most to desire. Maurice Campbell, her husband and manager, evidently does not purpose being again caught in an emergency with but one work to rely upon. Accordingly he has secured several plays besides "The Baltimore Marriage," which was written by a priest and in which, rumor has it, the pope is to be a character.

If the present plans are adhered to "The Baltimore Marriage" will not be produced in the near future, as the manifestly necessary changes will consume a good deal of time. Early next month Miss Crosman will set out on a brief tour of the country for the purpose of testing the value of Mrs. W. K. Clifford's play, "Madeleine," and incidentally of capturing a few errant shekels. "Nance Oldfield" will also be given on tour, and if "Madeleine" should appear to contain the essentials of a great success the play written by the priest will probably have to wait until toward the end of next season. If "Madeleine" should fail, it is possible that "The Baltimore Marriage" will be given in September, although Mr. Campbell has still another play, "The Masque of the White Rose," which is shortly to be done in England by Fred Terry and his lovely and talented wife, Julia Neilson. Miss Crosman will thus enjoy the advantage of knowing just how one public at least regards one of her most important acquisitions, and if it should prove to be a striking success "The Masque of the White Rose" may still take precedence over "The Baltimore Marriage."

My Antidote For the Solar Plexus Punch

By JAMES J. JEFFRIES, Champion Pugilist of the World

THE famous shift or solar plexus punch of my next opponent, Bob Fitzsimmons, seems to be the main cause of worry for most of his opponents. At any rate, you will find by the records that "Lanky Bob" has put out many of his men by this blow. Ruhlin, Sharkey and Corbett are only a few that have dropped by the wayside.

DANGEROUS? OF COURSE IT IS IF YOU LET IT LAND. SO IS A HIND LEG OF A MULE IF YOU STICK YOURSELF IN ITS WAY.

My stomach has stood a lot of bad treatment in one way or another, but it would turn into giblets if Fitz's freckled fist landed that blow. I have got good natural protection down there, but I don't pretend to be an armored cruiser.

THE BEST WAY IS NOT TO LET THAT TRIPHAMMER LAND ON YOU. I made a study of Fitzsimmons' style when I won the championship from him and found I was able to protect myself from the blow. My crouching pose was part of the programme and kept my stomach well under cover. WHEN HIS FIST DID ENTER THE DANGER ZONE, I WAS CAREFUL TO CATCH ITS FORCE ON MY GLOVE.

Bar this one blow, and I am not afraid of Fitz's powers. His hard punches in other places I can stand and shoot in a few myself. He will tire himself out, and I will be as fresh as a daisy. I have his strong point coppered, and that's half the fight.

FISTIANA

Bob Fitzsimmons, who has engaged Gus Ruhlin as a sparring partner, makes the statement that he considers Ruhlin an exceedingly clever man and that the Akron giant will yet be heard from in the ring.

Benny Yanger says he will fight no more good men at 126 pounds, a mark that forces him to give away several pounds in weight.

The American and Pyramid Athletic clubs are the only ones in Chicago that are making money. The others have found it hard sledding up to date.

Terry McGovern is to make himself useful in the management of the stable of thoroughbreds of which he is part owner and which run under the name of Sullivan & Harris.

At the present time Jeffries weighs about 240 pounds and Fitzsimmons scales at 175 pounds. Jeffries will reduce to about 220 and Fitzsimmons will try to build up for the fight which takes place in May.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

A COOL RECEPTION.

It Was Not Surprising, Though, In View of the Explanation.

Letters of introduction are not invariably serviceable. For one reason, they may be too frank. Harry Furniss in his "Confessions of a Caricaturist" says that when a brother artist was setting forth on his travels in foreign climes he was provided with a letter of introduction to a certain British consul.

The writer of the letter inclosed it in one to the artist, saying that he would find the consul a most arrant snob, a bumptious, arrogant humbug, a cad to the backbone. Still, he would probably offer some courtesies to any one who had a good social standing and thus compensate the traveler for having to come in contact with such an insufferable vulgarian.

On the return of the artist to England the writer of the letter asked how he had fared with the consul.

"Well, my dear fellow," drawled the artist, "he did not receive me very warmly, and he did not ask me to dinner. In fact, he struck me as being rather cool."

"Well, you do surprise me," rejoined his friend. "He's a cad, as I told you in my letter, but he's very hospitable, and I really can't understand this state of things. You gave him my letter of introduction?"

"Why, I thought so; but, do you know, on my journey home I discovered it in my pocketbook. So I must have handed to him instead your note to me about him!"

The explanation was quite adequate.

On Dying Poor.

The book "Soldiers of Fortune" was the work of Richard Harding Davis. It was dramatized by Augustus Thomas. The story is interesting, contains much pretty sentiment and many bright lines and in some instances is strongly dramatic. I regret to add that it is a little incoherent, but if for no other reason it rivets the attention, as it is sufficiently vivid to make one wish to understand what it is all about.

Robert Edeson is a favorite with the New York theater going public, and his many friends must rejoice at his immediate success as a star. There is at all times in his acting the evidence of the true gentleman, and the role of Robert Clay affords him an opportunity to be—himself. Sincerity rings in Edeson's work, and a keen appreciation of the approval of the audience puts him in touch at once with those upon whose opinion so much in the career of a new star depends. So many good leading men and women make the mistake of attempting to star and find too late that the two positions are vastly different. It is therefore gratifying to see success reward some from the first.

Mr. Edeson's company is very good. Gretchen Lyons makes a very attractive Hope Langham and plays with vivacity and feeling. Harry Harwood as MacWilliams was to the life the hearty "old reliable" and added another laurel to those already won. Captain Stuart, as played by Guy Bates Post, was rather a disappointment. The character is a good one, but the actor did not quite rise to its possibilities. The opposite part to Captain Stuart was sustained by Dorothy Donnelly, formerly of the Murray Hill stock. She played Mme. Alvarez, the wife of the president, but she also fell short in her work. She was not convincing. The minor parts were all well carried out, especially one which in justice I must mention. Reginald King was played by an actor unknown to me, Macey Harlam by name. Macey Harlam is a coming actor and from the moment of his entrance seemed to be as perfectly at home on the stage as if he had known no other life.

the Madison Square theater and opened to a crowded house. I fear the change is not for the better, as there is not enough in it. Barring the intermissions, the entire play runs for only an hour and a quarter. The plot is so thin as almost to be beyond perception, and the situations are neither strong nor funny.

William Collier is a comedian who at once appeals to the sympathies of this audience and causes laughter even when he means to be taken seriously. He plays the role of Nick Sportwick delightfully, leaving nothing to be desired, and has with him an excellent company, but the play is not good. That talented actor Edward Abeles enacts the part of Edwards, the valet of Sportwick, and is every bit as good as the star. He is a gifted player, and Mr. Collier has been wise to so cast his characters that the servant and master strengthen the work of each other. A poor Edwards would have materially marred the effect of the star's own artistic efforts. It is always pleasant to see Edward Abeles' name on a programme, for it is usually a guarantee of good acting. Etienne Girardot was not up to his usual standard of excellence. In "The Diplomat" he does poorer work than I have ever seen from that gentleman, and his success in Mrs. Fiske's company recently only throws the present into sharper contrast. Isabel Urquhart, Nannette Comstock and Louise Allen played the principal female roles, the honors going to the last as Daisy Darling, the "Florodora" chorus girl.

It cannot be denied that Henrietta Crosman's revival of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at the Republic theater, in this city, has resulted in a triumph for that actress. It has been of greater benefit to her than the unqualified success of "Joan o' the Shoals" could possibly have been. This is due to the fact that if Miss Crosman had felt warranted in continuing Mrs. Sutherland's play throughout her engagement at the Republic there would still have been a large section of the theater going public which, while admitting Miss Crosman's ability in ordinary comedy or melodrama, would have treated with disdain her Shakespearean aspirations. So, after all, much real good to the actress has come from the sudden withdrawal of "Joan o' the Shoals."

Having thus, as it were, established herself upon a firmer foundation than she has yet occupied, Miss Crosman will now go back to that class of work which the public appears most to desire. Maurice Campbell, her husband and manager, evidently does not purpose being again caught in an emergency with but one work to rely upon. Accordingly he has secured several plays besides "The Baltimore Marriage," which was written by a priest and in which, rumor has it, the pope is to be a character.

If the present plans are adhered to "The Baltimore Marriage" will not be produced in the near future, as the manifestly necessary changes will consume a good deal of time. Early next month Miss Crosman will set out on a brief tour of the country for the purpose of testing the value of Mrs. W. K. Clifford's play, "Madeleine," and incidentally of capturing a few errant shekels. "Nance Oldfield" will also be given on tour, and if "Madeleine" should appear to contain the essentials of a great success the play written by the priest will probably have to wait until toward the end of next season. If "Madeleine" should fail, it is possible that "The Baltimore Marriage" will be given in September, although Mr. Campbell has still another play, "The Masque of the White Rose," which is shortly to be done in England by Fred Terry and his lovely and talented wife, Julia Neilson. Miss Crosman will thus enjoy the advantage of knowing just how one public at least regards one of her most important acquisitions, and if it should prove to be a striking success "The Masque of the White Rose" may still take precedence over "The Baltimore Marriage."

By JAMES J. JEFFRIES, Champion Pugilist of the World

THE famous shift or solar plexus punch of my next opponent, Bob Fitzsimmons, seems to be the main cause of worry for most of his opponents. At any rate, you will find by the records that "Lanky Bob" has put out many of his men by this blow. Ruhlin, Sharkey and Corbett are only a few that have dropped by the wayside.

DANGEROUS? OF COURSE IT IS IF YOU LET IT LAND. SO IS A HIND LEG OF A MULE IF YOU STICK YOURSELF IN ITS WAY.

My stomach has stood a lot of bad treatment in one way or another, but it would turn into giblets if Fitz's freckled fist landed that blow. I have got good natural protection down there, but I don't pretend to be an armored cruiser.

THE BEST WAY IS NOT TO LET THAT TRIPHAMMER LAND ON YOU. I made a study of Fitzsimmons' style when I won the championship from him and found I was able to protect myself from the blow. My crouching pose was part of the programme and kept my stomach well under cover. WHEN HIS FIST DID ENTER THE DANGER ZONE, I WAS CAREFUL TO CATCH ITS FORCE ON MY GLOVE.

Bar this one blow, and I am not afraid of Fitz's powers. His hard punches in other places I can stand and shoot in a few myself. He will tire himself out, and I will be as fresh as a daisy. I have his strong point coppered, and that's half the fight.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

A COOL RECEPTION.

It Was Not Surprising, Though, In View of the Explanation.

Letters of introduction are not invariably serviceable. For one reason, they may be too frank. Harry Furniss in his "Confessions of a Caricaturist" says that when a brother artist was setting forth on his travels in foreign climes he was provided with a letter of introduction to a certain British consul.

The writer of the letter inclosed it in one to the artist, saying that he would find the consul a most arrant snob, a bumptious, arrogant humbug, a cad to the backbone. Still, he would probably offer some courtesies to any one who had a good social standing and thus compensate the traveler for having to come in contact with such an insufferable vulgarian.

On the return of the artist to England the writer of the letter asked how he had fared with the consul.

"Well, my dear fellow," drawled the artist, "he did not receive me very warmly, and he did not ask me to dinner. In fact, he struck me as being rather cool."

"Well, you do surprise me," rejoined his friend. "He's a cad, as I told you in my letter, but he's very hospitable, and I really can't understand this state of things. You gave him my letter of introduction?"

"Why, I thought so; but, do you know, on my journey home I discovered it in my pocketbook. So I must have handed to him instead your note to me about him!"

The explanation was quite adequate.

OFFICER WATCHED A MINE ENTRANCE

CHAS. LOWTHERS' ARREST

Watching for more than an hour like a cat after a rat, Constable Powell stood at the mouth of a mine in the hillside at the Walker sewer pipe works Saturday afternoon, anxiously awaiting the appearance of Charles Lowthers, a clay miner, who was then at work in the big yawning hole.

Armed with a warrant for Lowthers, which was issued from Justice McCarron's court at the instance of Miss Eva Reese, a blind girl who lives at Walker, and who filed an affidavit against him on a delicate charge, the constable made his way to the clay mine for the purpose of placing Lowthers under arrest.

Friends of the accused man saw the officer coming, and, suspecting his mission, hurried toward the clay mine in order to give Lowthers warning. The constable, not to be outwitted, started on a run and reached the mine ahead of the others. He made no effort to go on the inside, but patiently waited until Lowthers came out.

It was almost an hour and a half until the unsuspecting victim did show himself, and a moment later he was in the constable's grasp. Both boarded a street car and were soon before the magistrate, who is wont to deal out justice.

The plaintiff was presently in court and took a seat beside her traducer. It had been a question in the mind of the 'squire how the girl, owing to her inability to see, could identity Lowthers, but to his astonishment, the young man confessed his guilt.

It was Lowthers' desire to settle the case in the easiest manner possible and the girl also made known that she wanted to adjust matters quietly and amicably. The justice expressed a willingness to allow the couple to compromise and this tickled Lowthers. He dispelled his worried look and smiled in glee as he offered the girl a substantial sum of money to withdraw the charge.

To the extreme distress of the misled young man the girl gave him to understand that money was no inducement to her. Love was what she wanted. "Marry me or go to jail," she screamed defiantly, and Lowthers groaned with remorse.

"Take unto yourself a wife," admonished the court, "or I shall have to send you up sky high. You admit that you took advantage of this innocent girl and you should be made to suffer severely."

"I'll marry her," said Lowthers, and the ceremony was performed without delay.

Four Young Men in the Fight And One Badly Injured.

A fight that resulted seriously to one of the participants occurred in a poker room Saturday night in Diamond alley. No arrests were made, but the police are doing their utmost to learn the names of those who took part.

The trouble occurred as theresult of an argument over a "jack pot." Four young men were in the game and all became involved in the controversy. The argument waxed warm for a time until finally a blow was struck.

A small riot was immediately instituted and for a time it looked as if the poker room would be cleaned out. Spittoons were hurled, beer bottles were sent flying and even pistols were flourished. The proprietor tried every way to restore order, but not until one of the participants in the melee was lying on the floor weltering in his own blood, was the trouble stopped.

After the others had been ushered from the room the injured man was looked after. It was found that his scalp was half torn off and he was in a semi-conscious condition. He was taken to a surgeon's office, where his wounds were dressed, after which he was taken to his home, where he now lies in a serious condition.

Another serious row is said to have taken place last night in a down town saloon. It was a scrap of the free-for-all kind, and it is reported that all of the combatants were badly done up.

SETTLED THE DISPUTE

CLAY HANDS AT LAUGHLIN NO. 2 WILL RESUME.

Material Now on Hand Will Be Worked Up And Better Sought.

President A. S. Hughes, with a committee from Pressers' local No. 4, settled the dispute over the bad condition of the clay at the Laughlin No. 2 this morning.

The committee consisted of President Alex Thompson, of No. 4; John Moore, Thomas Smith and James Stewart. Some time was spent in conference with Manager Harker and Secretary Ed Wells.

It was agreed finally that the men should work up the clay on hand and then an especial effort would be made on the part of the firm to improve the body. The clay hands will return to work tomorrow morning.

This Is Five Cents Less Than the Rate They Asked of the Contractors.

The stone masons of the city have finally succeeded in patching up their difficulties with their employers, and for another year there will be no troubles in this trade.

Conferences were held for several days last week between a committee rpresenting the bosses and one from the ranks of the men. At the last of these, held Saturday afternoon, the men decided to make a concession in the shape of a reduction of five cents on the day from their first stand.

The proposition was accepted by the contractors and the men will in the future receive $3.82½ per day for nine hours, with an eight-hour day on Saturday.

ANTI-SALOON MEN ARE WELL PLEASED

OLD LAWS STRENGTHENED

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, April 7.—The Anti-Saloon League has issued a statement defining the Beal municipal local option law and what it will accomplish. The league declares the new law is satisfactory for the following reasons:

It transfers power to prohibit saloons from the council to the people. It strengthens the weak points in ordinances that might have been passed by councilmen under the present council option law by dealing directly with the selling, furnishing and giving away of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. It effectually reaches the beer wagons or saloons on wheels. The Dow law is amended so that regulative ordinances may be passed by the council in saloon towns, controlling the selling, furnishing and giving away of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The ordinances which they had authority to pass were ineffective. The new law increases the money fine and does away with the jury trial for the first offense. It prohibits the manufacturer from selling, furnishing and giving away intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, except to bona fide retail liquor dealers and in wholesale quantities to persons residing outside of the municipality.

The enforcement of the law is made easier. It places additional restriction upon druggists who sell on prescription, prohibits express business in liquor in dry towns "C. O. D." Unless the sale is entirely completed at an outside point it cannot be sent to a prohibitory town. It does away with club rooms and bottling houses and a score of other speakeasies that were operated under the ordinance. It gives the people a uniform law for municipalities that cannot be tampered with by council.

The affidavit for the arrest of violators is made simple and clear by a special provision under the new law. Under the ordinance it was a technical and very difficult thing to draw, and very many of the affidavits prepared by the mayors were declared insufficient before the case was concluded and the officer was discouraged with

A TRIFLING EXPENDITURE

"I ride on the street cars to Wellsville as little as possible," said a well-known professional man to a News Review reporter. "I cannot divest myself of the feeling that every time I enter a car I am taking my life in my hands. There is no question that the road is a dangerous one. Some day there will be a disaster that will plunge the people of both cities in mourning and compel the railroad managers to take action to prevent its repetition. I think the time to act is now.

"It is well known where the dangerous places are. They could be made safe against casualty by a very slight expenditure. How? Well, the danger lies in the cars getting off the track and plunging over the steep banks. That is admitted. Now, if posts were set on the lower side of the road at these danger spots, and strong wire strung from one post to the other, there would be no possibility of a car rolling over the embankment. Let them use the strong wire, known as guy wire, such as is used to hold telegraph and telephone poles in place. A few strands of such wire properly placed, would be as goo das a bank of earth in holding back a car that should roll against it, provided the posts were placed thickly enough, and the whole properly secured. An expenditure of $300 or $400 along the line would render it impossible for a car to go over the hill. Some of the way trees could be used to tie the wires on. Why, the railroad company is liable to pay more damages for one broken leg than it would cost to provide the necessary means of safety suggested.

"Another thing, the company loses business because of the public knowledge that its road is unsafe. After a recent rain, a large party of East Liverpool people had planned to go to Wellsville to some entertainment. A prominent lady announced to the others of the proposed party almost at the last moment: 'I cannot go. My husband tells me I must not. He has been acquainted with railroads all his life. He tells me the road to Wellsville is unsafe.' The lady did not go, nor did any of the party that had planned the trip to Wellsville. The railroad lost perhaps a hundred fares. That is only one instance.

"If any law could be brought to bear to make the railway company provide greater safety to its patrons, that law should be invoked. But, even without compulsion, it ought for its own interests to take steps to insure safety. The plan I have outlined would cost little and should be given a trial."

VOTERS, DO YOUR DUTY.

The polls will not close until 6:30 P. M. If you have not voted yet, hurry up and do your duty as a citizen. There are important issues involved in this election. No good Republican will stay at home and give the enemy a chance to have something to crow over. The vote is reported light thus far. There is still time to remedy this. East Liverpool is a Republican city and proposes to remain so. Let every Republican show himself alive and alert and determined to work for the good of his city and his party. Vote!

A BOY'S SUICIDE

Lived In Syracuse, O., and Had Relatives Here—No Cause Known.

Gould McBride, an employe at Mrs. A. V. Thompson's grocery, and Lawrence McBride, employed in a local pottery, have received the shocking news of the suicide of their cousin, Dow McBride, at Syracuse, O., which occurred last week.

The suicide was but 17 years of age and no cause for the act can even be conjectured. He had just eaten his breakfast and repaired to an adjoining room, ostensibly to don his new clothes, preparatory to making a visit in a neighboring town, when the report of a revolver was heard by his parents. They rushed into the room and were horrified to find their boy struggling in the throes of death.

A smoking revolver in his hand told the tale. He had placed the deadly weapon against his neck and fired, the bullet penetrating his brain.

Mrs. D. A. Devine will leave this evening for Atlantic City, where she will remain several days for the benefit of her health.

Mrs. George Dunn, of Akron, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks for several days, returned to her home today.

George Hamilton, of Fifth street, who has been spending several months in Florida and other southern states, returned home Saturday evening.

Rev. D. Lloyd and wife, of Cleveland, who have been visiting at the home of Rev. Edwin Weary for several days, returned to their home this morning.

Successful Operation—Mrs. Emerson Bowman, of Calcutta avenue, underwent a surgical operation Saturday afternoon which was a perfect success. From birth she had a growth upon her forehead just at the upper end of the nose which medical men called a dermoid cyst. It had grown and of late had given her considerable trouble. Drs. Hobbs and Bailey removed the growth, and there is no likelihood of it returning.

PRISONER GETS INJURED

With whisky under their belts and money in their pockets several victims were taken into the police fold Saturday night and Sunday. With one exception all paid their assessments this morning and the city's coffers thus enjoyed a substantial replenishment.

Among the unfortunates was Mrs. "Chip" Gamble, who was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen Woods and Bryan. While hilarious from a gigantic load of "canned booze" she raised a disturbance on College street and kept up her boisterous conduct until the officers took charge of her. When placed in a cell the woman raved like a demon and cursed the officers until she fell on her cot from exhaustion. The mayor fined her $3 and costs this morning, which she paid.

John Brighouse was again arrested Saturday night on the charge of disorderly conduct. Officer Saulsberry came upon "Jack" on lower Franklin street and arrested him at the instance of one of the man's sons, who claimed that he had been making threats and acting ugly.

Just as the officer was placing the prisoner in jail an accident happened which resulted in a severe injury to Brighouse. He objected to being searched, and while the policeman was holding his left wrist Brighouse gave a lunge and by so doing broke the wrist bone. Dr. Ogden reduced the fracture and the prisoner was allowed to go home.

Brighouse denied that he was disorderly and declared that he was only following his wife and son to keep them from going to a house of ill-repute.

William Henry was arrested last night for intoxication and taken to jail in the patrol by Woods and Betteridge. He paid $5.60 this morning and was released.

Woody Orr, while laboring under a tremendous load of amber stuff, fell into the hands of Officer Saulsberry, who locked him up. Woody donated $5.60 to the cause of justice.

Patrolmen Woods and Rhue arrested a stranger yesterday afternoon on the charge of vagrancy. He was accused of begging about the streets. Before the mayor this morning the man gave the name of William Daffit. He said his home was at McKeesport and that he was on his way to Mingo, where a situation awaited him. He was released on his promise to get out of the city.

FOUGHT OVER A GIRL

A fight occurred last night on Lincoln avenue between a well known young potter and and a clerk, which is said to have been much on the order of a prize fight and extremely bloody. The clerk was badly worsted, though neither of the combatants was able to work this morning.

The fight was the result of a rivalry, both of the young men being infatuated with the same girl. The clerk took her to church last evening and had just left her at her home when he encountered the potter. The fight began forthwith.

EAST END

SELECTION OF A PASTOR

By the Second U. P. Congregation May Be Made Very Soon.

It may be that a new pastor for the Second U. P. church will be selected sooner than many supposed. At the evening service at this congregation last evening an announcement was made that a meeting of the congregation would be held on the evening of April 16 for the purpose of issuing a call for a permanent pastor. Although a sufficient number of supplies had been looked after to fill the pulpit of this church for several months, it is the general opinion in the East End that it is now time to make a selection, and from those who have preached at the church since Rev. J. R. Greene resigned. It is quite certain that the congregation is now ready to make a selection, but who it will call has not been given out.

At both services yesterday Rev. L. L. Grey, of Knoxville, preached two interesting sermons. It may be that Rev. Mr. Grey will be asked to preach at this church very soon again.

HASTY DEPARTURE

Made By a Young Man Against Whom a Charge Was Entered.

In the court of Justice L. W. Carman a serious charge has been filed by Sallie Rector, aged 22 years, against David S. Gorrell, aged 24 years, formerly of Jackson county, W. Va. A constable went to the East End Saturday afternoon to arrest Gorrell, but he was advised of the charge by his friends and left for West Virginia.

He is supposed to have left for southern parts on a boat Saturday evening and it is said that Miss Rector will go to Jackson county this evening, where Gorrell is now supposed to be located. The parties have been residing in Dixonville.

LOST HIS SKIFF

But Followed Down the River Till He Found And Recovered It.

George McKinnon, of the East End, had a valuable skiff stolen between Friday evening and early Saturday morning by a supposed "river rat." As soon as the theft was discovered McKinnon decided to locate the skiff at all cost.

Saturday afternoon he left for a short trip down the river, and while passing between Mingo and Steubenville the skiff was located. Yesterday it was placed on a boat and brought to this city. Who took the skiff is not known.

Bricklaying Finished.

The bricklayers who have been constructing a brick enclosure about the new boiler at the power house have completed their task and have left for their homes. All the outside conenctions have been made with the boiler and it will not be many days now until steam will be raised for the first time. When the boiler has been found to be in good working order the use of some of the smaller boilers will be discontinued.

Prohibition Alliance Meeting.

A meeting of those interested in the formation of a branch of the Prohibition Alliance in the East End will be held next Thursday evening at the residence of Dr. William M. Calhoun, Virginia avenue. It is thought at this session permanent officers will be elected.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

A social will be given in the Ferguson & Larkins hall tomorrow evening by the Ladies' Aid society of the Erie street M. E. church.

Next Sunday at the Second U. P. church the morning and evening services will be in charge of Rev. R. W. Thompson, of Mays, Ind.

A two-barrel well was brought in last Friday in the vicinity of the Ohioville, which proves there is still oil in that section, which has not been worked extensively of late.

Attachment Proceedings.

ADMITTED TO PROBATE

Was the Will of the Late Jacob Young. Guardian Asked for Alleged Imbecile.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — The will of Jacob B. Young, late of Middleton township, has been admitted to probate and Virginia D. Young appointed executrix under bond of $600. The appraisers are J. C. Billingsley, W. L. Garby and W. H. Huss.

Application has been made for the appointment of a guardian for Uriah B. Royer, of Perry township, an alleged imbecile.

The sale of realty as ordered by John H. Mick, administrator of John Mick, of Madison township, has been approved and confirmed.

J. F. Johnston, guardian of Mary Thomas, of New Waterford, has been ordered to sell his ward's interest in the realty.

THE MAYORALITY FIGHT

Is the Principal One at the Salem Election—Baker the Winner.

Salem, April 7.— (Special) — The main interest in the election here centers on the mayoralty fight, between Al Carlisle, Democrat, and J. B. Baker, Republican. Baker is a justice of the peace. Strenuous efforts have been made by the Democracy to make it appear that he is not a friend of union labor, and voted and worked for Noragon for sheriff.

A committee of trades and labor council investigated the charges and found them baseless, and has published its findings. Baker will be elected.

The quarantine has also been raised at the home of B. R. Larkins, on Erie street, East End, whose child has been suffering from diphtheria. Clarence Gray, of Bradshaw avenue, who has been a icted with the disease, has sufficiently recovered from scarlet fever to permit the quarantine to be lifted at his home. This will leave the city entirely free from contagion.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

Toronto, April 7.—While walking on the C. & P. railroad tracks below the American China company's plant Saturday morning, Alexander Fullen, a laborer, was struck by eastbound passenger train No. 336 and seriously injured.

Fullen's escape from instant death was miraculous, his head being wedged in between the front wheels and pilot of the locomotive. He was placed in the baggage car and brought to the C. & P. station, where doctors temporarily relieved his pain. He was then taken to his home near Costonia.

The injured man's jaw was broken in two places, all his teeth were knocked out and he sustained several cuts about the head. It is also thought he is hurt internally.

KRAENZLEIN TELLS HOW TO BE A HURDLER.

Says a Man Must Be Both a Fast Sprinter and a Heady Jumper.

Since the national championships of the year 1897 A. C. Kraenzlein of the University of Pennsylvania has been the king of the hurdlers. He has won American, Canadian, English, intercollegiate, metropolitan and world's championships and holds the present world's records for both high and low hurdle events over the regulation obstacles.

His record for running 120 yards over ten hurdles 3 feet 6 inches in height is 15 1-5 seconds and for running 220 yards over obstacles 2 feet 6 inches in height 23 3-5 seconds.

After Kraenzlein won his first championship over the sticks he was never beaten in a scratch race and retired, as all champions should retire, an unbeaten man in his specialty. He was also famous as a broad jumper and held the world's record of 24 feet 6½ inches until it was eclipsed by Meyer Prinstein of Syracuse university, who established the present record of 24 feet 7¼ inches.

Kraenzlein speaks as follows on the hurdle art:

"Perhaps my exceptional ability as a hurdler and broad jumper is due to my height, combined with the unusual power in the thighs with which nature has endowed me. Good hurdlers, especially over the high obstacles, are generally tall men. In support of this statement I might mention the former champions, S. Chase and the late F. C. Puffer. So it therefore is apparent that physical conformation has a great deal to do with the success of a hurdler.

"Hurdling undoubtedly requires good eyesight and a little nerve. I fortunately possessed both, and to this fact as much as to my speed and strength I attribute my success.

"It is difficult for a man with poor sight to cut the hurdles close, and an athlete a bit timid in a race is sure to waste time by clearing the obstacles too high. In fact, style counts for a great deal in hurdling.

"As soon as I had learned to run the hurdles properly, through the excellent coaching of Trainer Mike Murphy, I simply knocked seconds off my time. Without the benefit of his thorough teaching I doubt whether I would have ever made the present records. Before I put myself under the tutelage of Trainer Murphy I would clear the bars in any old way.

A. C. KRAENZLEIN HURDLING.

"A first class hurdler is essentially an excellent sprinter and jumper. A man who cannot run the hundred in 10 1-5 seconds will seldom beat 16 seconds for the high hurdles. A hurdler should practice sprinting 'starts' the same as a sprinter, and a little high and broad jumping will develop his spring and make the obstacles easier to clear.

"Running over the hurdles should be practiced until a man takes unconsciously the right number of steps between the obstacles. So long as he has to count the steps he will be handicapped in a race, and he should do no racing at all until he takes the proper number of steps naturally. The slightest uncertainty is liable to cause hesitation and the loss of the race.

"Some athletes can hurdle with either leg, and this is often a big advantage, especially when the path is wet and you slip or trip. I can hurdle with both legs, but I only practice clearing the bars with the left leg. It is only when a man is thrown out of his stride that ability to hurdle with either leg is useful, and its use is generally confined to the low hurdles. Men who can hurdle with but one leg are generally just as successful as the man with the ability of using either leg.

"The start is even more important in hurdling than in sprinting. In both the high and low events the distance to the first obstacle is fifteen yards, and the number of steps taken is invariably nine. Hurdlers get off the mark as fast as sprinters and clear the first obstacle at their greatest possible speed. It is only after the first two obstacles are cleared that style begins to count. A man who can just shave the top of the bars in a neat way will gain at least a foot on an awkward hurdler at each obstacle.

Spiders and Alcohol.

A student of natural history had been in the habit of immersing for preservation his different specimens of spiders and ants in bottles of alcohol. He saw that they struggled for a few minutes, but he thought that sensation was soon extinguished and that they were soon free from suffering.

On one occasion he wished to preserve a large female spider and twenty-four of her young ones that he had captured. He put the mother into a bottle of alcohol and saw that after a few moments she folded up her legs upon her body and was at rest. He then put into the bottle the young ones, who, of course, manifested acute pain.

What was his surprise to see the mother arouse herself from her lethargy, dart around and gather her young ones to her bosom, fold her legs over them, again relapse into insensibility until at last death came to her relief and the limbs, no longer controlled by this maternal instinct, released their grasp and became dead! He has never since repeated the experiment, but has applied chloroform before immersion.

The Parsees.

The Parsees are sun worshipers, and it is an interesting sight to see throngs of them on the shore of the bay as the sun rises, apparently from the sea, performing the simple rites of their religion, the fluttering robes showing their fine figures to the best advantage as the day begins. Their religious practices are simple in the extreme, consisting mainly in strict dietary rules and personal cleanliness.

The rigid observance of sanitary laws produces the natural result of perfect health among the adults—large families of active, healthy children and immense numbers of old men, gray bearded, white haired, but erect and princely in their gait and attitude despite the naturally enervating character of the tropical climate.

Safeguarding Himself.

"Are you a detective?" asked Mr. Meekton.

"I am," answered the man with the turndown collar and the white necktie.

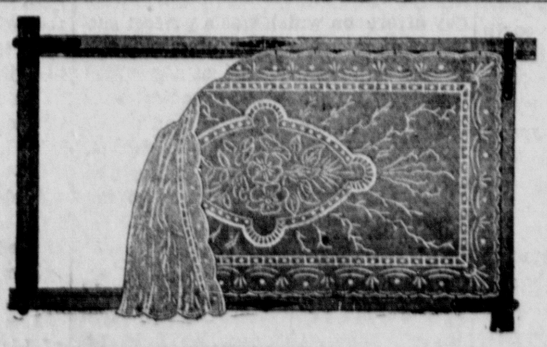

"Well, I want to employ you. I want you to get out your false whiskers and your dark lantern and dog my footsteps night and day. Henrietta's gone out of town to visit some relatives, and I don't want her to be obliged to take my word for anything."—Washington Star.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE

Sentiment as to Re-districting—Legislators Get Letters From Congressmen Opposing Any Change In the Present Districts.

Columbus, April 7.—(Special)—"Out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh." It is no doubt in this that the reason for the earnest protests being filed by members of congress against a change of any character being made in the present congressional districts, can be found. Almost without exception the congressmen have either by person or by letter sent in these protests during the past week and the burden of all has been the same, "don't make any changes, but if you do, don't change me." If a caucus had been held and this sentiment agreed upon it could not have been more unanimous. Now the result of all this has been just what might be expected—a stregthening of the forces in favor of the Patterson bill and against a revision of districts. Last week there seemed no chance of changing any but the Twelfth (Columbus) district, and but little chance of changing that. This week hope of doing anything has slipped away. Unless there be a revulsion of sentiment within the next few days the congressional districts will remain as they are. The friends of a change in the Twelfth still remain unshaken in allegiance to the justice of their demands, however, and under the guidance of Representative Pamita of Wood, are not disposed to hang their harps on a willow tree and cry quits so long as there is a fighting chance. The measure comes up as a special order of business next Wernesday morning and the final vote will undoubtedly be taken on it at that time. When the result is announced the longest and perhaps the bitterest contest of the present session will have ended. It will probably leave its scars behind. Such fights always do. As the last effort of those who favor a change and are against the Patterson bill, a conference was held at the Neil House, and the matter was discussed long and somewhat loud. It was attended by Speaker McKinnon, Representatives Painter, Guerin and others. The matter was gone over in detail and discussed in all its phases past, present and future. As the result of this a petition is now being circulated to which it is hoped signers representing a majority of the house, will have been obtained by next Wednesday pledging themselves to a vote for such changes as may be proposed. This represents the last hope of those who are opposed to leaving things as they are. It is a desperate chance holding out but little of promise. Yet it's worth the taking.

Governor Nash and all those forces known as administrative are urgently pressing upon the legislature the need of a change in the primary election laws of the state and that a change is needed Republicans and Democrats alike agree. The only difference is the method by which the end sought to be attained can best be brought about. Out of the discussion attending the matter a bill has come drafted by Allen W. Thurman and Judge Okey, both of Columbus, which seems to solve the difficulty and staggers one by its simplicity and plainness. In short the bill provides that all nominations for office shall be made by primary system and that conventions except for state offices be done away with. The selection of men to stand as nominees is to be brought as closely to the people as possible. But the bill does more than this. It says that the primaries of the different parties shall be held on the same day and at the same hour, and that none but qualified electors shall be allowed to take part. The natural outcome of this measure. If adopted, will be an abolition of conventions entirely and the nomination of all officials by the primary plan. This is but the first step in the evolution which is certain to bring that about.

Governor Nash is a man much freer from care than he was a week ago. Every one of his tax bills, about which he has talked by day and dreamed at night, has been reported back favorably with minor amendments attached, and on Thursday of next week they will be enacted into laws. There are seven of these measures fitting into one another as neatly as the cogs of a wheel. The first of these is the Willis bill placing a tax of one-tenth of one-per cent. upon the issued and paid up capital stock of domestic corporations. A slight amendment to this excludes from its provisions Ohio corporations that are now out of business but have not surrendered their charters. The next is the second Willis bill, another much discussed measure, putting a tax of one-tenth of one per cent. upon such proportion of the authorized capital stock of foreign corporations as is represented in Ohio. Then comes the Cole bill extending the provisions of the present excise law so as to include telephone, telegraph, express and interurban railway companies and assessing all 1 per cent of their gross earnings. To this a very humble amendment has been added simply making the secretary of state a member of the board to receive the returns from these institutions. The board now consists of the auditor of state, treasurer of state and attorney general. Next in turn is the Harding measure which permits the holders of stock in an Ohio corporation to purchase stock in another state concern providing it is not that of the same character nor in similar kind of business. There are two by Senator Longworth. One removes from the stockholder of an incorporation who sells his holdings the unpleasant thought that he may thereafter be held for debts owed by the concern at the time of his retirement. His liability ceases with his going out. The other Longworth measure makes of the governor and secretary of state a board to remit penalties assessed against foreign corporations for failure to pay the initial fee required before being admitted to do business in the state. They are authorized to hear arguments and decide cases. The last of these is a resolution by Senator Wirt proposing a constitutional amendment classifying all taxable property and assessing a uniform tax upon all property in a certain class These in the main make up the elaborate taxation scheme of the governor. A few minor bills supplementing them are being drafted but they constitute only the stray straws which are needed to make the stack complete. With the passage of the main seven the governor will feel his task done. How they are to work in effect remains to be seen.

Elated by their victory in the house—their rather easy victory in fact—the advocates of canal retention thought to win spurs so easily in the senate. Wherein they were fooled. Immediately after the Seiber bill had been adopted in the lower branch declaring it to be the policy of the state to keep the canals in use the measure was messaged over to the senate. Noses had been counted and it was thought there were sufficient votes to duplicate the action of the house. "But the best laid plans of men oft go wrong and this was an instance. When the measure came up for first reading a motion was made that the rules be suspended and it be given a second reading. This was to be followed by a motion that it be read the third time and put on its immediate passage. The vote on the motion to read the second time was a distinct shock to its supporters. Instead of going through it was defeated and substantially defeated to. Now the backers are wondering whether their carefully laid plans are to be defeated and the senate refuse to concur with the house. While they are kept busy watching this the opponents of the canals are busy working with the finance committee urging that a limited—and a very limited—appropriation be allowed for the maintenance of these waterways. If the canals are maintained and given sufficient money to keep up anything fordering on a respectable appearance they will owe a debt of gratitude which can hardly be repaid.

Much complaint has been received from members of the fire and police departments in those cities where they have pension funds against the manner in which it has been proposed to raise money for the maintenance of these most worthy adjuncts. The first suggestion was that a portion of the Dow tax be converted into the fund, but both the police and firemen strenuously objection to this. In response to that the plan of using of a part of the money coming in from the tax placed upon insurance companies was urged as the proper method. But there was objection to this. An entirely agreeable method has, however, now suggested itself. A bill will be prepared levying a tax of four-tenths mills in all muncipalities where these funds now exist and authorizing such a tax in municipalities where they may later be created. This will raise an amount sufficient to meet every demand and be entirely agreeable to the members of both of these departments.

There was a somewhat unexpected action in the house Thursday when the Harding bill establishing a state board for the study of tuberculosis and the care of afflicted patients was defeated in the house. It was done probably because of a failure of the members to appreciate the gravity of the situation or the importance of the measure. Indeed until one sees the statistics and knows the story it is hard to realize the number of people who yearly die from this disease, and who by proper care and treatment might be saved. The ultimate object of the bill is to establish a state sanitarium, where patients may receive the most proper care. An effort will be made to reconsider the measure, and it will undoubtedly be taken up again and this time passed and made into a law.

The effort to extend the term of Mr. Blackburn, state dairy and food commissioner, for eleven months, which received ready endorsement in the senate, is likely to fail in the house. There is a story undercurrent opposition to it, not because of feeling against the official, but through the dislike to establish a new custom and set the precedent of giving men more office than that for which the people elected them. As a straw to show how the wind blows, the bill came up in the lower branch for its first reading and an effort was made to advance it on the calendar. It failed completely, and went down under a protest of emphatic "noes." This does not, of couse, presage with certainty the ultimate defeat of the bill, but it indicates the sentiment of the members, and shows how out of sympathy they are with such a move.

WILL CONSIDER VITAL TOPICS.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 7.—The meeting of the newly constituted national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America will begin in this city today to consider questions of vital importance to the largest labor organization in the world, and to interests in which millions of dollars are invested. None of the officials or members of the board who arrived yesterday would state what is to be considered.

In a general way it is admitted that the situation in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions and in the bituminous coal fields of Virginia and West Virginia is to be laid before the board. Each of the 23 sub-districts has one representative. The organization is scattered through 24 states.

The powers of the board relating to the affairs of the organization are practically unlimited, although it is subject to the dictation of the national conventions. Nearly all the members of the national executive board are here.

HAIL TWO INCHES DEEP.

Destructive Storm Makes Clean Sweep Over Eight-Mile Tract in Texas.

Paris, Tex., April 7.—A special from Prattville, Tex., says a destructive storm swept over that place last night between 8 and 9 o'clock. For 20 minutes there was a perfect flood of rain and hail. It extended only between Prattville and Pacio, eight miles apart. Along the path of the storm, which resembles a railroad track, not a leaf nor a particle of fruit is left. Hail fully two inches deep is still lying on the ground. The Methodist church at Prattville was blown from its foundation, and a dwelling house was lifted up and carried into an adjacent field. Two stores at Pacio and a farm house were blown down. A store at Pacio was completely wrecked, and the goods scattered for miles.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman, writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD

A new glass factory is to be built at Rochester the coming summer.

Amos Martin, of Lawrence county, Pa., celebrated his 105th bithday anniversary Saturday. He was born in Scotland in 1797.

C. Sperio, an Italian fruit dealer at Beaver Falls, was robbed of $300. While he and his wife were at church his store was broken into and the money taken from his desk.

Forty-three foreigners who were imported from New York to the Morgan works at Alliance, refused to go to work on learning that they were to take the place of strikers.

John Regle, of Titusville, Pa., found his son, Regle, at Akron after a separation of 18 years. The son when a baby was taken away from his parents and all trace of him was lost soon after.

Frank W. Powers, of Youngstown, who was injured last June by a passenger train being derailed at Monaca, has commenced suit against the Pittsburk & Lake Erie railroad for $20,000 damages.

Health Officer Welch, of Steubenville, ordered that several old and filthy houses occupied by Italians be torn down. He claimed the shacks were liable to breed disease. They will be burned.

Prisoners in the New Philadelphia jail made a hole through a stone floor, through which they had hoped to make their escape. Sheriff Wagner discovered the opening in time to prevent a general delivery.

Edward Haurahan and James and William Mooney, small boys of Steubenville, were badly injured by a dynamite exnamite explosion. The lads found a small piece of the dynamite and touched a match to it.

Bodily pain loses its terror if you've a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house. Instant relief in cases of burns, cuts, sprains, accidents of any sort.

SUPPORT THE REPUBLICAN TCIKET. IT IS A GOOD ONE.

Peculiarities of the Opossum.

The American opossum is one of the most curious animals living in the United States. It is the only one that carries its young in a pouch like the kangaroo. It is the only animal that can feign death perfectly. It is remarkable for hanging by its tail like a monkey. It has hands resembling those of a human being. Its snout is like a hog's, while its mouth is liberally furnished with teeth. Its eyes are like a rat's, and it hisses like a snake.

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

The eye and the ear have long been regarded as marvels of mechanism, quite the most wonderful things in the world. But compared with the implements of a present day laboratory the sensitiveness of all human organs seems gross enough. A photographic plate, coupled with a telescope, will reveal the presence of millions of stars whose light does not affect the retina in the least. The microscope, too, with its revelations of the world of the infinitely small, tells us how crude, after all, is this most delicate of the senses. Indeed, we may liken it to a piano where only a single octave, toward the middle, sounds. From the ultra violet to the lowest reaches of the spectrum is a range of some nine octaves of light vibrations, of which, save for our new mechanical senses, we should never have been conscious of but one.

The ear hears little of what is going on around us. By means of a microphone the tread of a fly sounds like the tramp of cavalry. Our heat sense is very vague. We need a variation of at least one-fifth of a degree on a thermometer to realize any difference in temperature. Professor Langley's little bolometer will note the difference of a millionth of a degree. It is two hundred thousand times as sensitive as our skin.—Carl Snyder in Harper's Magazine.

Falling From a Great Height.

It will be remembered that Mr. Whymper, who had a severe succession of falls once in the Alps, without losing his consciousness, declares emphatically that as he bounded from one rock to another he felt absolutely no pain. The same thing happens on the battlefield. The entrance of the bullet into the body is not felt, and it is not till he feels the blood flowing or a limb paralyzed that the soldier knows he is wounded.

Persons who have had several limbs broken by a fall do not know which limb is broken till they try to rise. At the moment of a fall the whole intellectual activity is increased to an extraordinary degree. There is not a trace of anxiety. One considers quickly what will happen. This is by no means the consequence of "presence of mind." It is rather the product of absolute necessity. A solemn composure takes possession of the victim. Death by fall is a beautiful one. Great thoughts fill the victim's soul. They fall painlessly into a great blue sky.

Drugstore Humor.

A Philadelphia druggist has made the following collection of amusing missives that have been sent to him from time to time:

"I have a cute pain in my baby's stummick. Please give bearer something to cure it."

"My little girl has eat up a lot of buttons. Please send a nemetic by the enclosed boy."

"Dear doctor a dog bit my child on the leg please send some cork plaster and cutter eyes."

"Pleas send by bearer one postal card. Also kindly give bearer, my son, some licorice root."

Deer doctor wot is good for tirefoy fever send some quick I got it."

"Let my Johny have a glas of sody watter. I wud come myself but I am washing. P. S. the 5 cents is for the sody watter."

"If you can fill the enclosed prescription for 25 cents do so. If not return by bearer."

Ants That Strike.

Certain kinds of black ants have little yellow ants which do most of their work for them. Once in awhile these little yellow fellows will go on strike, and the "blacks" try to force them back to work by cutting off their food supply. If that does not succeed, they will attack the strikers in force or make a raid and get another gang of "yellows" into the colony. But the newcomers, as a rule, join the strikers. The strike ends by the "yellows" escaping and founding a colony for themselves, or they give in and settle down to work again.

American farm products to the value of $952,000,000 were exported during 1901, an increase of over $100,000,000 compared with 1900. Agricultural imports are falling off. In other words, the American farmers are not only supplying the large and constantly growing home market, but they are doing more and more each year toward supplying the world with food products. The outlook for the agriculturist is steadily growing brighter, and he is deriving benefit from the high prices for provisions which the city people grumble at.

Philadelphia may be slow in some things, but Philadelphia justice does not always travel on leaden heel. A negro brute in that city shot and killed a woman and three children. In less than 90 hours after the crime he was under sentence of death, with the chances in favor of being speedily executed. Swift justice of this sort enforced in the southern states would speedily reduce the number of lynchings if it did not abolish that barbaric practice altogether.

The Democratic Philippine policy has at last been formulated. It is that the Filipinos shall govern themselves and that the United States shall govern their government. Almost as sensible as would be the plan of compelling an engineer to stand by the roadside and shout while an inexperienced hand ran away with his engine.

Fresh vegetables are coming into the market along with abundance of fresh eggs. An eastern paper notes a growing fondness for a vegetable diet and a disposition to bid defiance to the meat trust. Perhaps the most men can be made in time to see the folly of prohibitive prices.

There is good sense and practical wisdom in the suggestions made in an interview presented in another column to the need of making the street railway to Wellsville safer for its thousands of patrons. The time for action is now, before an accident occurs.

At last the population statistics of 1900 census are completed and Uncle Sam figures out that his children, including Filipinos and other adopted sons, exceed 84,000,000. Only three other nations, China, Russia and Great Britain, have a greater total.

The ambition of the Wabash railroad to have a trunk line to the seaboard promises to bear fruit. West Virginia will be greatly benefited, as the main line of the new route will pass directly through the state. East Liverpool will be satisfied to get a branch line.

Another Democratic effort to make something out of nothing has failed. The investigation of the charges of alleged bribery in connection with the Danish islands' sale shows not the slightest foundation for them.

The proposition to make Bryan the Populist candidate for president is most appropriate. Bryan and the Populist party are in the same class—both politically dead.

President Roosevelt will doubtless find on his visit to the south that southern courtesy and southern hospitality have not died out, except in the Tillman family.

The Prince of Wales, it is now reported, proposes to come to America, to see what the kaiser's brother saw. It is all on exhibition all the time and all interesting.

There will be time to vote after you read this paragraph. Don't let it be said that East Liverpool Republicans show no interest in the election.

Every stay-at-home Republican helps the opposition. If you don't want to assist the Democracy, vote!

However Cecil Rhodes' millions were accumulated, he decided to put them to good use.

Yes, election day is quiet. Even the voice of the boastful Democrat is hushed.

Though a few Boers are talking peace, all keep on fighting.

Daniel Yarwood.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — Daniel Yarwood died Saturday at the home of his son, Edward, at Logtown. On Friday an operation was performed, his right leg being amputated. Blood poisoning had developed gangrene, which rendered the operation necessary. About three months ago he came to his son's house from Oregon, where he had been farming. He was 78 years old. The funeral was held this morning.

Martin Skelly.

Lisbon, April 7. — (Special) — Martin Skelly died at the home of his father, John Skelly, in Lisbon, yesterday, of acute meningitis. He was 22 years old and was employed at the tin mill. He has been ill about three weeks.

POTTERY NEWS

The members of local union No. 10 are making strenuous efforts to get out a large vote at their meeting this week. The organization has three resolution under consideration at present, which it is proposed to bring before the next national convention. All of the resolutions are of great importance to that branch of the pottery industry, and it is the desire of the more active members to have an expression from the entire membership of No. 10. When the discussion comes up it is possible other resolutions will be suggested.

The kilndrawing crew at the Edwin M. Knowles China company's plant in Chester are out for a concession in the shape of street car fare in addition to the regular pay for that class of work. The crew finished up the work in hand last Friday, and state they will not return unless the fare is paid. The regular wages for drawing kiln has been $1.50 per day, and the men claim they are, under the present management, making actually but $1.40.

A New York trade paper remarks: The great increase of pottery capacity has made an abnormal demand for pottery operatives, and in any other country than ours it would have been impracticable to have reasonably supplied them. The ready adaptability of Americans to quickly learn has given practically the increased labor desired, but it has required considerable strain to accomplish it. It seems advisable now to go slow in pottery building.

Notices have been received in this city during the past week announcing the fact that a meeting of the American Potteries company would be held at Jersey City next Saturday for the purpose of electing a board of directors, which would be followed by the naming of permanent officers. While it is thought that persons interested in the company in this city will not be present, they will be represented by proxies. These have been forwarded to the officials of the company at Pittsburg.

Mrs. Mary, widow of the late Henry Speeler, died at Trenton after a lingering illness. Mrs. Speeler was born in Germany 63 years ago, but she has been in America and in Trenton since she was about 15 years old. Her late husband was a pottery manufacturer and widely known. One son survives Mrs. Speeler, John F., one of the managers of the Glasglow pottery.

The report was in circulation Saturday afternoon that Robert Hawkins, formerly connected with the Union Potteries company, had disposed of 21 shares of stock in that company at 70. When seen Mr. Hawkins denied the report, and said while he admitted he had an offer of that kind he had not accepted it.

David Crea, slipmaker at Laughlin No. 2, is working day and night to fill the clay cellar, lately enlarged at that place. This plant has a cellar that will hold clay enough to run the clay hands for two months without any new clay being used.

Harry Allison, formerly clay maker at Knowles', left on Saturday for New Castle, where he expects to take charge of the clay making of hat plant. He said that some changes would have to be made in the presses before he would accept the position.

Local No. 6, of Wheeling, elected the following delegates and alternates to the Trenton convention: Fred Golner, Jr., George Hopwood and Frank Hathaways. Alternates, John Schreoder, A. J. Habig and George La Flam.

It is officially announced that the recent dispute of the packers at the Union will be settled before Wednesday. A committee representing the local and representatives of the company will confer probably tomorrow.

It is said that last week was the first for some time that the Chelsea had been able to keep clay enough ahead to let all the jiggermen work steady. Sixteen jiggers are now working at this pottery.

William Swindles, boss packer at Thompson's, who recently returned from Cambridge Springs, where he had been spending several weeks for the benefit of his health, is still unable to be at the factory.

At the last meeting of local No. 51, Canonsburg, delegates to the convention were nominated. The successful ones were Messrs. Elliott and Hays. Alternates, Miller and York.

Oak Edgill, an apprentice at the biscuit end at Vodrey's, has been transferred to the glost end. Gene Carroll, of the glost end, has been transferred to the biscuit end.

At a recent meeting of Clay Workers' local No. 21, Secretary Allison resigned his position. It will be filled at the meeting to be held this week.

Roy Wycoff, a packer at the West End, who has been seriously ill at his home at Chestr for several weeks, is rapidly recovering.

George Mayer, a handler at Harker's, has resigned his position at that plant and hereafter will be located at the Union.

Alfred C. Root, of the Mercer pottery, Trenton, has accepted the foremanship at the John Moses pottery.

B. L. Reddick is working out his notice at the Dresden.

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited.

Few are entirely free from it.

Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." MRS. J. H. JONES, Parker City, Ind.

AT THE THEATER

The "Katzenjammer Kids" have all the latest vaudeville hits. They have combined with it the essence of bright comedy music boiling around with a constant intelligent story which is developed by a company of stars of the first magnitude.

Denman Thompson's "Our New Minister" will be seen in a return engagement at the Grand tomorrow night. There is only one opinion of its merits. It is the best rural drama ever given to the stage, and admitted by press and public alike to the only legitimate successor to Thompson's first effort, "The Old Homestead."

this kind of litigation. It is the first state-wide grip, from a legal standpoint, that the anti-saloon people have been able to get on the liquor traffic in municipalities in Ohio.

English Names For Towns.

Many names of towns in England have been appropriated for a similar use in this country. These names frequently indicate in themselves the origin of the towns. For instance, names ending in "chester" or "cester" or "caster," such as Dorchester, Worcester and Lancaster, undoubtedly apply to sites of old military settlements or camps, and the termination is derived from "castra," the Latin word for camp. If the name of a place ends in "coln," like Lincoln, then it, too, is of Roman origin, because the Latin word for colony is colonia. When the syllable "by" ends the word, like Rugby, we then know that the Danes are responsible for the name, for the Danish word for town is by.

Where Theft Is Not Robbery.

In China theft is so common that nobody notices it. A young Chinaman once slipped three oranges up his sleeve at a party. While making his bow at parting the oranges slipped out and rolled on to the floor. He accounted for the awkward event by saying that his mother was very fond of oranges. His fault was straightway overlooked, and he was afterward held up as an instance of filial piety. There are several proverbs which go to show that the folk think lightly of stealing. One says that "when tailors cease to pilfer cloth their children will have to go without food," and another declares, "When silversmiths do not steal, they will certainly starve."

The Trifling Brother.

"Br'er Jenkins, you so triflin' dat I ve'y believes ef you wuz 'pinted ter be watchman at de pearly gates de fust t'ing you'd do would be ter let down en go fas' asleep."

"Br'er Thomas, you may well say dat, kaze I'd sho' feel so good over de 'p'intment I'd des nachully hatter go ter sleep ter dream ef it wuz true."—Atlanta Constitution.

Discovered.

A story is told of a little girl who asked one morning at the breakfast table, "Mamma, is hash animal or vegetable?"

"Animal, my dear," replied mamma.

"Then," cried the little one triumphantly, holding up a tiny bone, "here's the hash's tooth!"

A Ready Reply.

Foote's ready reply to the caution, "Your handkerchief, sir, is hanging out of your pocket," was of high merit, both from the surprise and for the cordial way in which the caution was accepted—"Thank you, sir; you know the company better than I do."—Gentleman's Magazine.

ST. PETER'S IN ROME.

It Takes Many Visits to Realize Its Vastness and Splendor.

It is curious to watch the faces of people as they enter the great doors of St. Peter's at Rome and push back the heavy leathern curtains that keep out the noise and the air and find themselves in the presence of the most impressive spectacle on earth, as Byron said:

Majesty,
In this eternal ark of worship.

It is easy to detect those who have never been there before and those who have become accustomed to its magnitude and gorgeousness. It requires several visits to adjust the vision and the mind to its colossal proportions and brilliant decorations and enable them to realize the vastness and the beauty of the scene. The more frequently you visit St. Peter's cathedral the greater and the more beautiful it becomes, and after a time you are enabled to drink in with complete satisfaction the fullness of its area, its altitude and its magnificence.

The cost of the building up to date has been more than $55,000,000, and the annual expense of maintaining it is about $35,000. An architect and a gang of workmen are always employed.—Rome Letter in Chicago Record-Herald.

Hard to Get an Opinion.

I have always wanted to know what disorder the medical world considers most painful, so I asked a prominent physician in Fourteenth street about it.

"Without doubt," said he, "an abscess of the ear inflicts the most excruciating agony a human being is ever compelled to endure."

I went over to Thirteenth street and asked a physician there the same question, telling him what the Fourteenth street man had said. Two other doctors happened to be in the room. The Thirteenth street man grinned.

"Did Dr. G. say that?" said he. "Well, I dare say he thinks he's right. I remember he had an abscess in his own ear once. From experience in my own practice, however, I should say that, while other things may last longer, the most intense pain any one ever endures is caused by an attack of acute indigestion."

He looked at the other medical men for confirmation of his opinion. One of them leaned forward earnestly.

"What did you take for it?" he asked, and the Thirteenth street man merely blushed.—Washington Post.

WELLSVILLE

Three Thirteen-Hour Days Instead of Four Per Week the New Rule.

The strike in the boiler department of the C. & P. shops has at last been settled. The matter has also been settled in the machine shop, the employes of which were about to go out, demanding a 10 hour day. Master Mechanic Bishop returned from Philadelphia Saturday and held a conference with a committee from both departments and decided that the men must continue to work for 13 hours, but that they should work only three days in the week instead of four, as heretofore.

The men were satisfied with this and returned to work under this agreement.

HOMES FOR ORPHANS

Field Secretary Rev. E. H. Caylor of the Children's Home Society of Ohio, with headquarters at Columbus, made the announcement in several of the city churches Sunday that the society was about to begin the work of finding suitable homes for orphan and dependent children in Wellsville.

The society is supported by the donations of the people and has the remarkable record of having placed over 15,000 children in good families during the past 17 years.

President William McKinley was elected president of the society at the time when he was governor of Ohio and has held the office from that time until his recent death.

Mr. Caylor expects to spend at least two weeks in this city with the work and wishes the general public to help him as much as possible.

A GRAND SUCCESS

Was the Ball Given Saturday Evening By Loyal Union No. 24, N. B. of O. P.

Regardless of the fact that the second annual ball of local union No. 24, N. B. of O. P., which was to have been given on last Tuesday evening in the city hall, had to be postponed until Saturday evening on account of the electric lights having given out, the affair proved a grand success in both a social and financial way. Over 300 were present, most of whom were from East Liverpool.

Members of the committee on arrangements state that a ball will be held on the Monday night following Easter Sunday each year hereafter.

A very quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Auginbaugh, on Seventh street. The contracting parties were Charles Carpenter and Miss Hannah Aughinbaugh, of this city. Rev. W. M. Glasgow, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, performed the wedding ceremony.

Miss Aughinbaugh recently resigned from a position as operator in the Bell telephone office, and is very well known throughout the city. The groom holds the responsible position of manager in the Pittsburg office of the American Sheet Steel company, and is also well known in the city, having formerly lived here.

F. W. Dennis, who resides just west of the city, was arrested on Saturday afternoon by Officer Thorne on a warrant sworn out by his wife for non-support of the children. Dennis says that he does support the children and expects to continue to do so until they are of age.

The case will begiven a hearing before 'Squire MacKenzie on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Dennis was released upon his promise to appear at that time.

Dr. Manchester Preached.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Manchester, the presiding elder of the Steubenville district of the M. E. conference, took charge of all of the services in the First church here Sunday. The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed at the morning service. Dr. Manchester also conducted a communion service at the Fourteenth street chapel in the afternoon.

Two Promotions.

Frank Fox, who recently was promoted from the position of foreman of the machine shop at the C. & P. shops, to a similar position in the Allegheny shops, left Saturday to take up his new duties. Charles Hall, who has been the assistant foreman here, has been promoted to the position vacated by Mr. Fox.

Sermon to Colored K. of P.

The annual sermon to the colored lodge, K. of P., was given on Sunday afternoon in the city hall by Rev. Mr. Upshaw, pastor of the A. M. E. church, of this city. A large delegation of colored people from East Liverpool and Steubenville were present.

To Aid Church Fund.

A "high' social will be held on Tuesday evening at the Fourteenth street mission, the proceeds of which will go into a general fund toward the erection of a new church building.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY

A communication was received this morning by Mayor Davidson from Mayor Robertson at Canton and telephoned to O. O. Allison in Chester, stating that John Lewis, alias Harry Phillips, has been arrested in Canton, charged with forging the name of George D. Evans to a check amounting to $22.50. The man is identified as the one who recently passed a check on Mr. Allison, of the same amount, having forged the name of William Banfield, superintendent of the tin mill.

Phillips, it is said, has also forged checks in Scottdale and Monessen, Pa., and from all appearances is an old one in the business.

He was given a hearing before the mayor in Canton and plead guilty. He was bound over to the grand jury.

After his case has been disposed of at Canton he will be brought to Chester.

Verdi and His Admirer.

Verdi was once traveling in the same railway carriage with General Tournon, commander of the Ravenna district. They got into conversation, which soon turned on the subject of music, and the general, who did not know his companion, expressed a most enthusiastic preference for that of Italy. "I can hardly go so far with you," replied the other. "For me, art has no frontiers, and I give German music the preference over Italian."

"Indeed, sir," said the general testily. "For my part, I would give all the German operas in the world for one act of 'Rigoletto.'"

"You really must excuse me from following you any further on this ground," replied the composer, blushing a little. "I am Verdi."

Hardcase (interposing)—Excuse me, gentlemen, but I had a little different experience. I didn't owe him anything, and he gave me seven years.—Boston Courier.

The Chief Sense.

All the great families of living things have a dominant sense. We lead our life by sight and make artificial lights to render darkness tolerable. But the creature whom next to ourselves we prefer, the dog, lives in a very different universe. His dominant sense, like that of many other quadrupeds, is the very one we most neglect, the sense of smell. The dog will track his master, never lifting up his head to search the distance; often with hair falling over his eyes he follows on, not troubling himself to shake it aside.

She caused great excitement by saying that the Irish could put up a better fight against England than have even the Boers. She appealed to the ancient Irish-French families and asked them to join a Franco-Irish brigade.

Hard to Classify.

A local wit was one day discussing the mental incapacity of editors with the late H. C. Bunner.

"Now," said he, "what do you think of this: I used to write serious and comic matter for a certain daily, which paid me $20 a column for the humorous stuff and $10 for the serious. One day the editor asked me to mark my comic things 'C' and my serious stories 'S' with a blue pencil, that he might tell them apart. Wasn't that pretty rough on him?"

"No," replied Bunner, with a smile and a twinkle in his eye, "but it was pretty rough on you."—New York Times.

Recognized.

"You had a piece in the paper this mornin'," said the excited woman, "about my husband keepin' a savage dog. It ain't so."

"Madam," replied the editor, "we didn't mention anybody by name in that item. We said 'a certain man in the west part of town.'"

"That fits him to a T. You might just as well have mentioned his name. Everybody knows he's the certainest man in that part of town, and he's the most contrary."—Chicago Tribune.

The Indigestible Banana.

"Next to pork," says a physician, "bananas are the most indigestible thing a person can eat, and if you will notice you will see them touched very sparingly by people with weak stomachs. If you can digest them, however, and don't mind the offensive odor, they are very nourishing, and one can make a meal on them that is in every way equal to a substantial lunch of bread and meat."

OLD LANCASTER

Lancaster, April 7.—(Special)—Lancaster, the birthplace of William Tecumseh Sherman, will entertain May 5, 6, 7, and 8, the thirty-sixth department encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the old town is working early and late to give the old veterans a royal and pleasant reception.

The town, of the old historic character, is particularly fitted for an event of this kind and has much to offer the visitors in the way interesting and entertaining sights. The boys' industrial school of Ohio is located on a beautiful farm six miles south of the city, which is reached by a traction line. Here are quartered and schooled over eight hundred wards of the state.

Lansaster is a city of over eight thousand inhabitants, with miles of paved streets and owning its own water works system and natural gas plant. While the hotel facilities are excellent for a town of this size, the citizens have agreed to open their houses. Already the town has commenced to decorate for the vent.

SURVEYORS AT WORK

Much Interest Aroused By Their Operations About Franklin Square.

Salem, April 7.—The work of a party of railroad surveyors in Franklin Square and vicinity is causing much speculation here. The party, six in number, struck out from Franklin Square toward Hart's Church. They refuse to tell their purpose. The line which they are pursuing would take them to Winona.

It is said to be the object of the surveyors to pass through North Georgetown and then reach Alliance. It may be possible that the road will strike and run a branch to Hanoverton. Some think that a branch will be run to Salem, as the line as it is surveyed at present will come within three miles of this city.

It will be remembered that some time ago there was talk of a steam railroad crossing the county and that it would pass through Winona and then to Alliance. The Baltimore & Ohio was behind the project at the time.

Saloon Keeper Declares That Others Confessed the Murder to Him.

John Mooney and Frank Friday, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of James Hervey, near Wheeling, in 1901, have presented sensational evidence before the pardon board, substantiating their prayer for unconditional pardon.

Owen Friday, a saloon keeper of Martin's Ferry, swore that he was told by Richard Shanley that he (Shanley) and James Sweeney went to the Hervey home to commit robbery, and that in a scuffle with old Hervey, Sweeney fired a bullet through the aged landowner's breast. Shanley has left the state and Sweeney has been missing from his home for many months.

BURNED TO DEATH

Steubenville, April 7.—Mrs. Fannie Abrams, wife of Albert Sherman Abrams, of this city, was fatally burned Friday evening. The accident occurred while the woman was alone in the house and her dead and charred body was found by the horrified husband when he returned home for supper. Beside the woman lay her six-weeks-old baby asleep in a crib and partly covered by a blanket.

Mrs. Abrams had been ironing and it is thought her dress caught fire from an open grate. She was 26 years of age and had only been married one year.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Funeral services over the body of the late Lieutenant Commander William H. Schueteze, U. S. N., were held at St. John's church, Washington, D. C., yesterday afternoon. The remains were taken to St. Louis for interment.

Carriage Makers' union No. 72, of Washington, D. C., will go on strike today for an eight-hour workday at a minimum scale of $2.50 per day. About 160 men will be affected. Three of the 39 employing firms have granted the men's demands.

Fire yesterday at Le Mars, Ia., destroyed the grocery and dry goods stores of Baron Bros., the building and printing plant of the Le Mars Post and the furniture store of the Grand Rapids Furniture Company. Loss, $50,000, with $31,000 insurance.

Among the postmasters confirmed by the senate on Saturday were the following: Ohio—J. O. Converse, Chardon; C. M. Crane, Garrettsville; F. Fortune, Jefferson; C. A. L. Purmort, Van Wert. Pennsylvania—D. P. Higgins, Lewisburg; G. W. Schoch, Mifflinburg; F. C. Burns, Reynoldsville.

Sensational charges are made by the St. Louis grand jury, which has been investigating bribery and official corruption in the municipal assembly. The following indictments were returned: Bribery—Robert N. Snyder; attempted bribery, Edward Butler, John H. Becker, George J. Kebusch.

LEO'S SILVER JUBILEE

TWO CARDINALS WERE PRESENT

Baltimore, April 7.—The silver jubilee of Pope Leo XIII. was observed with solemn and unusually elaborate services at the Cathedral yesterday. The ceremony was marked by the presence of two cardinals. Cardinal Martinelli, the apostolic delegate, who came over from Washington to take part in the services, pontificated, and Cardinal Gibbons preached the sermon.

At the conclusion of the pontifical mass, Rev. Father O'Donovan of Cardinal Gibbons' household read a papal brief extending special plenary indulgences to all Catholics of the archdiocese who attended the triduum.

In his sermon Cardinal Gibbons referred to the good accomplished by Pope Leo through his important encyclicals, especially those relating to "Christian Marriage," the "Condition of the Workmen" and the "Constitution of Christian States." Reminiscentically, he also adverted modestly but affectionately to the personal honors paid him by the pope.

Washington, April 7.—The Catholic university was the scene yesterday of a particularly brilliant ceremony in honor of the jubilee of his holiness, Pope Leo XIII. Pope Leo is the founder of the university. The right reverend rector, Bishop Conaty, officiated in a pontifical mass. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. Edmund T. Shanahan, dean of the faculty of theology. The sermon was an analysis of the contributions of Leo XIII. to the solution of the great intellectual, moral, social, domestic, industrial and religious problems of the past century. The students of Georgetown college adopted resolutions of joy on the event celebrated by Catholics yesterday, and sent a congratulatory message to the pope.

CANADIANS FOUGHT VALIANTLY.

Klerksdorp, Transvaal Colony, April 7.—Details received of the battle at Doornbalt farm, March 31, in which the British had 3 officers and 24 men killed and 16 officers and 131 men wounded, while the Boers had 137 men killed or wounded, show that quite 2,000 Boers opened a strong attack from different points with three guns and a pompom.

The Canadians' front was attacked in strong numbers, but they gallantly repelled every attempt made by the Boers to break through. One party of the Canadians fought until all were killed or wounded, and the last man of this party, although mortally wounded, emptied two bandoliers of cartridges at the enemy and then broke his rifle.

The fighting was severe and general for fully three hours, but after the British had entrenched, and the guns got into action, the forces repelled numerous and determined attacks made under the personal exhortations of the Boer leaders.

Hounds Lost Bandits' Trail.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 7.—The Ruskin (Neb.) bank robbers, four in number, who secured $15,000 Saturday morning, were chased yesterday by a posse of farmers for 30 miles, until the robbers crossed into Kansas and separated near Belleville. A running fire was kept up for several miles. Bloodhounds were put on the trail of the bandits, but lost it near Scandia.

Ohio Municipal Elections Today.

Cincinnati, April 7.—Municipal and township elections will be held throughout Ohio today. In this city the contest between W. H. Jackson, Democrat, and Howard Ferris, Republican, for the superior judgeship is the only issue. In other cities of this section the election is for mayor and other city offices, as well as the usual local positions.

Four Persons Burned to Death.

Boyne City, Mich., April 7.—The frame dwelling of Dr. Boyne, occupied by two families, was totally destroyed last evening and four persons were burned to death. The dead are Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. Frank Littlefield, 6-year-old girl and 8-year-old boy. At the time the fire broke out all the persons in the house were up stairs asleep.

Voted Against Impeachment.

Lexington, Ky., April 7.—The body of former United States Senator Joseph Fowler, who died in Washington, aged 82 years, was buried here yesterday. In the famous impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson, Senator Fowler voted against impeachment, and for this he was afterward received with some disfavor by his party.

FIND A DOG IN THE PICTURE.

Foreign Governments May Not Be Creditably Represented.

Chicago, April 7.—John Barrett commissioner general to Asia for the Louisiana Purchase exposition, made the following significant statement last night:

"The world's fair management in St. Louis has been bending every energy to have the exposition open promptly in 1903, but nearly all of the foreign governments have unofficially notified the United States government or the world's fair management that it is a physical impossibility for them to be creditably represented at St. Louis in 1903. They have informally intimated that if the exposition shall be postponed they will endeavor to surpass even what they did at Chicago and Paris. As the success of the world's fair must depend largely on foreign participation, it can be seen that this is a most serious consideration which neither congress nor the exposition officials can overlook."

Kaiser's Comment on Rhodes' Will.

Berlin, April 7.—"This bequest shows the wide reach of Cecil Rhodes' mind and his vision of the future," said Emperor William, alluding to the will of Mr. Rhodes. The bequests of Mr. Rhodes are regarded at court as constituting an enduring impulse to good feeling between Germany, Great Britain and the United States and the colonies of these countries, and as giving more substance to the grouping of the Teutonic powers. "Why have not I such a minister?" Emperor William is said to have exclaimed after an interview with Cecil Rhodes in 1889. This remark is now widely reproduced, and it enables the opposition paragraphists to revile the present ministry.

Illinois Money for Boer Sufferers.

Chicago, April 7.—Peter Van Vlissingen, secretary of the Illinois committee appointed by Gov. Yates to raise funds for the relief of Boer women and children in the South African concentration camps, has received from Secretary of State Hay acknowledgment of the receipt of a $5,000 check forwarded to President Roosevelt by the committee to be transmitted to South Africa. Secretary Hay says the money has been forwarded to the United States consul general at Cape Town, to be distributed in the manner intended by the donors. The committee now will undertake the collection of a larger sum.

President Goes to Charleston.

Washington, April 7.—This afternoon at 3 o'clock the president and a party of friends will leave Washington for a visit to the Charleston exposition, going via the Southern railway. The personnel of the party is as follows: The President, Mrs. Roosevelt, Attorney General and Mrs. Knox, Secretary Wilson, Secretary Cortelyou, Assistant Secretary Loeb and Mrs. Loeb, Commander W. S. Cowles of the navy and Mrs. Cowles.

Couple Attacked by Dog.

Switch Was Tampered With.

Lansing, Mich., April 7.—A coach and Pullman sleeper on the Grand Trunk line were thrown from the track seven miles west of here yesterday. Abbe Brunstine, of Chicago, was killed. C. Minnehan, of Providence, R. I., sustained a compound fracture of the skull and a fractured leg; Rev. M. J. Ozshoski, of Chicago, a Jesuit priest, two bad scalp wounds; J. L. Gordon, of Rochester, N. Y.; Frank Thomas, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., and J. L. Zeigler, of Detroit, brakeman, were badly bruised. It is said the switch had been tampered with.

OVERCROWDED STAND GAVE WAY

Police Charged and Drove Back the People, Who Were Then Piled in Heaps—Two Hundred and Fifty Injured.

Glasgow, April 7.—The casualty lists of the Ibrox park disaster, when a number of persons were killed or injured by the collapsing of a spectators' stand during the international football match Saturday afternoon between England and Scotland, were completed yesterday.

The disaster has resulted in the death of 21 persons and the injury of 250. Nearly 200 of the latter were so seriously hurt that they were taken to infirmaries for operations and treatment. One hundred and fifty of them still remain in the infirmaries. A large proportion of the injured had limbs broken, bodies crushed and mangled, and heads and faces gashed. Several more deaths undoubtedly will result from the most critical cases of fractured skulls.

Yesterday the infirmaries were besieged by friends and relatives of the victims of the disaster, and heart-rending scenes were witnessed when the names of those who died were posted outside the buildings.

The action of the authorities at Ibrox park in averting a more general panic by permitting the game to proceed while they encouraged the impression of the crowd within the enclosure that the accident was not so direful, is generally commended. The incongruity of the yells of applause mingling with the groans of the struggling sufferers will never be forgotten by those who witnessed the scene.

There were fully 70,000 spectators at the game, while an immense crowd outside clamored for admittance. Being unable to obtain this, the crowd broke some of the barriers and swarmed upon the field, whereupon the police charged and drove the intruders back upon the terraces and seats, with the result that the railings dividing the crowds were broken and the people were thrown over each other.

In the frantic struggle toward the exits the pressure toward the upper portion of the westerly terrace was so great that 100 feet of the highest part of the structure collapsed under the weight of the crowd driven upon it, precipitating the mass of people to the ground 60 feet below. The injured were piled in heaps, wedged in with broken wood. A few persons were thrown down and trampled upon in trying to escape from the crush when the police charged, but most of the victims sustained their injuries in the fall of the terrace.

Traveling Men Organize.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—The organization of the National Commercial Travelers' association was completed at the traveling men's convention yesterday. The association eventually will embrace the entire country. The objects of the association are the securing of better railroad rates hotel accommodations and other conveniences for traveling men.

Church People Fight Burlesque Show.

Washington, Pa., April 7.—As the result of the intention of Manager F. B. Hallam, of the Lyric theater here, to present a burlesque company to a Washington audience tonight, the clergymen and church people of Washington have been thrown into a state of excitement. Rev. J. H. Snowden, of the Second Presbyterian church, sought to have Burgess Frank Judson revoke the license for the show, but the burgess declined to take this action. The church people say they will ask court today to grant an injunction against the show.

Coal Land Deal Closed.

Steubenville, O., April 7.—C. J. Davis, of Steubenville, has closed out 1,000 acres of coal land situated midway between Bergholz and Amsterdam to the Ohio and Pennsylvania Coal Company. This property is penetrated by the Lake Erie, Alliance & Western railway, which will reach the Ohio river by July.

CHEMISTRY OF TEARS.

Tears have their functional duty to accomplish, like every other fluid of the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion, says an exchange.

The chemical properties of tears consist of phosphate of lime and soda, making them very salty, but never bitter. Their action on the eye is very beneficial, and here consists their prescribed duty of the body, washing thoroughly that sensitive organ, which allows no foreign fluid to do the same work. Nothing cleanses the eye like a good salty shower bath, and medical art has followed nature's law in this respect, advocating the invigorating solution for any distressed condition of the optics.

Tears do not weaken the sight, but improve it. They act as a tonic on the muscular vision, keeping the eye soft and limpid, and it will be noticed that women in whose eyes sympathetic tears gather quickly have brighter, tenderer orbs than others. When the pupils are hard and cold, the world attributes it to one's disposition, which is a mere figure of speech, implying the lack of balmy tears that are to the cornea what salve is to the skin or nourishment to the blood.

Savage Legends.

The savage islanders of the south Pacific believe that the world is a cocoanut shell of enormous dimensions, at the top of which is a single aperture communicating with the upper air, where human beings dwell. At the very bottom of this imaginary shell is a stem gradually tapering to a point which represents the beginning of all things. This point is a spirit or demon without human form, whose name is Root of All Existence. By him the entire fabric of creation is sustained.

In the interior of the cocoanut shell, at its very bottom, lives a female demon. So narrow is the space into which she is crowded that she is obliged to sit forever with knee and chin touching. Her name is The Very Beginning, and from her are sprung numerous spirits. They inhabit five different floors, into which the great cocoanut is divided. From certain of these spirits mankind is descended. The islanders, regarding themselves as the only real men and women, were formerly accustomed to regard strangers as evil spirits in the guise of humanity, whom they killed when they could, offering them as sacrifices.

The Growth of Seaweed.

Seaweeds vary surprisingly in their habits of life. Some species grow altogether beneath the water, attaching themselves below the lowest tide level, other frequent heights where they are left dry at every retreating tide, while others yet are found in situations where they are scarcely ever covered by water. Whereas most of them attach themselves to rocks or solid bottom, keeping to the shallows, there are exceptions to the rule, among which the most remarkable is the sargasso or gulf weed, which floats on the surface of the ocean. Immense fields of it are seen by the navigator, extending as far as the eye can reach. It is sometimes so abundant as seriously to interfere with the progress of ships, and it was this which so alarmed the crew of Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.

Wrath Disarmed.

A little Cambridge girl was discovered whispering in school, and the teacher asked:

"What were you saying to the girl next to you when I caught you whispering?"

The little culprit hung her head for a moment and then replied:

"Well, that—yes—I know—but we must— The class in spelling will please stand up."—Christian Register.

A Skinning Process.

"This," said the fond father to the dermatological expert, "seems to be a pretty big bill for the treatment you have given my daughter."

"It was a difficult treatment," explained the skin doctor. "You see, we had to remove all the cuticle from her cheeks and graft a new epidermis upon them."

"Well," said the father, reaching for his checkbook, "I don't know which one of us you skinned the most."—Baltimore American.

The Only Chances They Have.

"All Joshua wants," said Farmer Corntossel's wife, "is a chance to show what he can do."

"Yes," said the farmer; "I s'pose so. Josh is one of those people who never seem to get a chance to do anything except something they can't do."—Washington Star.

Afraid.

"I would marry that girl but for one thing."

"What's that—afraid to pop the question?"

"No; afraid to question pop."—New York Herald.

Could Fill the Paper With Them.

This paper might be filled with items like the following and every one is the absolute truth: I had rheumatism for years and tried almost everything, but got no permanent relief until I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, three bottle of which cured me. It is the best medicine I ever used.—Philip E. Rhoads, Pennville, Mo. Pain Balm is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

In reply to inquiries we have pleasure in announcing that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is like the solid preparation of that admirable remedy in that it cleanses and heals membranes affected by nasal catarrh. There is no drying or sneezing. The Liquid Cream Balm is adapted to use of patients who have trouble in inhaling through the nose and prefer spraying. The price, including spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

NEGRO'S DEADLY FIRE

HELD CROWD OF 1,000 AT BAY.

Dynamite Thrown Into Desperado's Refuge, but He Continued to Slay and Wound Until Riddled by the Militiamen.

Tuscumbia, Ala., April 7.—Three men are dead, three mortally wounded and four seriously wounded as the result of Sheriff Charles Gassaway's attempting yesterday to arrest Will Reynolds, a desperate negro.

The dead are: Hugh Jones, shot through the head; Bob Wallace and Will Reynolds. The fatally wounded are Sheriff Charles Gassaway, shot through the arm and abdomen; Will Gassaway, shot through the abdomen, and P. A. Prout, shot through the stomach. Those seriously wounded are ——— Payne, shot through the chest; Jim Finney, shot through the right shoulder; Robert Patterson, shot through the leg, and Jesse Davis, shot through the jaw.

All the foregoing casualties, except the death of Reynolds himself, are the result of the deadly fire of Reynolds with a 45-caliber Winchester. The negro was in his turn riddled and thrown into a fire.

Sheriff Gassaway went to a negro settlement, "Knardtown," to arrest Will Reynolds for obtaining goods under false pretense. The officer was met by the negro, who opened fire with his rifle, wounding the sheriff and immediately firing upon the deputy, Will Gassaway, who was some 300 yards away, mortally wounding him.

As soon as possible every man in town who could procure a gun was in the neighborhood, but owing to the location none dared to venture within the open space. Dynamite was procured, and the house in which the negro was barricaded was fired upon, but to no effect. At 1 o'clock Captain Simpson, of the Wheeler Rifles, arrived with 12 guns and 1,000 cartridges, which were distributed among 12 picked men. This company was stationed around the house and riddled it, but the negro had taken refuge in the cellar and returned the fire, killing Jones and wounding Finney. Coal oil was then procured, and after four hours of hard work the house adjoining that in which the negro was located was fired. About 8 o'clock the house in which the negro was located was fired by the Wheeler Rifles, who had arrived on the scene. The negro took refuge in a shed and opened fire, killing Wallace and wounding Davis, but the people and some militiamen riddled the negro, and the crowd, numbering 1,000, grabbed the body and threw it into the burning building. Wallace, who was killed, was closing in on the negro, who shot him through the body. His body fell into the burning debris, but was recovered. Davis and Wallace were the men who fired the building.

Relic-seekers cut off the negro's fingers and such parts of the body as could be procured.

Last night it was reported that the sheriff and his brother have no chance to live. So deadly was the negro's aim that it was possibly an hour before the body of Prout could be recovered. Fully 2,000 people from Florence and Sheffield were here, and every surgeon in the two towns was pressed into service.

INCENDIARIES AT COLUMBUS.

Two Lumber Yards Destroyed, and Men Discovered Firing a Plaster Plant—Suspects Arrested.

Columbus, O., April 7.—Fire last evening caused a loss of $20,000 at the lumber yard of Smith & Sowers, on the West Side. A few hours later fire destroyed $15,000 worth of lumber at Conee & Menefee's yard, in the same vicinity. The fires were of incendiary origin. While the fire was in progress at the latter place Secretary Bingham, of the Columbus Rock Plaster Company, discovered two men setting fire to a shed at the company's plant, which is but a short distance from the lumber yard. Mr. Bingham struck one of the men, but was promptly knocked down, and the incendiaries escaped. Later five men, suspected of being incendiaries, were placed under arrest.

Peru Seeks Reciprocity.

Lima, Peru, April 7.—Senor Garland, in a recently published article, advocates strenuous efforts on the part of Peru to secure a reciprocity treaty with the United States similar to the one projected between the United States and Cuba, in order to save the sugar industry of Peru.

It will do you more good to acknowledge your faults than it will do your enemies.—Atchison Globe.

CUBAN RECIPROCITY BATTLE.

Struggle Over This Measure Will Be Transferred to Floor of the House This Week.

Washington, April 7.—The great battle over Cuban reciprocity, which created such a protracted struggle among the Republicans, both in caucus and in the committee on ways and means, will be fought out on the floor of the house this week. The ultimate passage of the Payne bill, providing for a 20 per cent reduction on the products of Cuba after the negotiation of a reciprocity treaty and the enactment of our immigration laws by the republic of Cuba, is regarded as a foregone conclusion, but the situation is a complicated one owing to the divisions among the Democrats as well as the Republicans. The bill will be brought up on Tuesday as a revenue bill. The leaders on both sides estimate that not more than three days will be consumed in general debate.

The Chinese exclusion bill, which will come to a final vote today, will command practically every vote in the house.

The expectations of the friends of the Chinese exclusion bill is that its consideration by the senate will be concluded by the middle of the present week, if not before. The Philippine government bill will be taken up immediately afterward. The Democratic members of the committee on the Philippines charge that the bill's purpose is to permit the granting of franchises. They also object to the continuance of the administration of affairs of the archipelago without making any provision looking to a form of self-government for the Philippine people.

The Sun Is Seldom on Time.

The sun does not keep good time. He is almost always too fast or too slow. Once about the middle of April he is just on time, then not again before the middle of June. At the beginning of September he joins the clock a third time, and lastly once more late in December. Now, it would seem as if he were startled at the way he had neglected us. In February he fell back until he was fifteen minutes late. By the beginning of March he had made up five minutes of his loss, and before the month is over he will have caught up to within five minutes of the schedule. Meanwhile the days have been growing longer very rapidly. We begin March with our nights longer than our days. We end it with our days longer than our nights. In the one month we have added to the length of our day an hour and twenty minutes, a bigger gain than any other month can show.—Professor S. C. Schmucker in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Going to Theater Face.

Will some one please explain the "going to the theater face" of the average New Yorker? The question is suggested by a long experience in lobbies while the auditors are passing into the houses for the evening performances. The writer stood for nearly an hour engaged in the seemingly hopeless task of discovering "the cheerful theater goer." But in they poured, men and women, each and every one with firm set jaw, gloomy brow and the look of despair. Perhaps it is because the long distances traveled on crowded cars and the thought of an equally uncomfortable homegoing make a night at the theater seem just a bit like work to the residents of this narrow isle.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Turnip.

The seed of the globe turnip is about the twentieth part of an inch in diameter, and yet in the course of a few months this seed will be enlarged by the soil and the air into 27,000,000 times its original bulk, and this in addition to a bunch of leaves. It has been found by experiment that a turnip seed will under fair conditions increase its own weight fifteen times in a minute. Turnips growing in peat ground have been found to increase more than 15,000 times the weight of their seeds in a day.

Alcohol and Tobacco.

According to the London Lancet, when evil effects ensue from smoking tobacco they are very much intensified by indulgence in alcohol. Pyridine, the chief poisonous constituent of tobacco smoke, is not so easily soluble in water as in alcohol. Pyridine bases can be easily traced in the mouth of an immoderate smoker and especially the smoker of cigars. An alcoholic drink is, therefore, calculated quickly to wash out this poisonous oil and to carry it into the stomach.

There Is a Difference.

City Editor—Why do you say, "He ran into the police station puffing and blowing?" "Puffing" and "blowing" are synonymous.

Reporter—Not at all. There's a vast difference, for instance, between puffing a man up and blowing him up.—Catholic Standard and Times.

An Intense Adaptation.

"Thinnerton represented an Indian brave at the masked ball."

"Oh, was that it? I have been laboring under the impression that he went as a feather duster."—Washington Times.

LIQUOR MEN TOOK NO CHANCES.

New York, April 7.—The police and the liquor dealers gave Greater New York a "dry" Sunday yesterday. The day had no equal in the suspension of the liquor traffic since five years ago, when Superintendent Thomas F. Byrnes tightly closed the saloons one memorable Sunday. Few liquor dealers yesterday had the temerity to keep open and serve drinks alone, and of those who did the majority were invited to visit the nearest police station, there to remain until bondsmen appeared.

In the "Tenderloin," now known as the "White Light" district, liquor was sold, but only under conditions which proved drawbacks to many of the thirsty. In many of the saloons the shades were drawn in the bar-rooms, but it is said improvised bars were established in upstairs rooms. In a few places the proprietors are alleged to have established what is known as the "Kansas speak-easy," or "blind pig," consisting of a circular opening in a wooden partition, into which was fitted a round board arranged so as to swing about. On each side of the round door was a shelf, on which the bartender could serve drinks to the waiter without being seen, and even if the police had succeeded in getting in they could not have arrested the bartender, as no one could see him.

Drinks were served all day in the dining rooms of the big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels, and although they were sold within the proscribed hours, no attempt at interference was made. No one, however, was permitted to sit down and order a drink, even though he ordered a sandwich at the same time. The hotel folk insisted that something akin to a substantial meal at least be ordered.

For the first time in many years the saloons in the residence section in upper Harlem were all closed. Despite the excise excitement in the city from time to time, the liquor dealers in that section have kept open. On the Bowery it was exceedingly hard to get a drink. The saloonkeepers were not ready to take chances of arrest, and for the most part kept their doors locked.

The police also compelled the small shopkeepers throughout the city to close, except that the grocers and delicatessen shops were permitted to keep open until 10 o'clock, as provided by law.

Seventy-nine arrests for violations of the excise law were made in Manhattan and the Bronx between the hours of midnight Saturday and 11 o'clock last night. There were in these two boroughs 14 arrests for violations of other Sunday closing laws. In Brooklyn the police reported 27 arrests for violation of the excise laws; there was one in Richmond and none in Queens. This is a total of 121, as against 64 on Sunday, March 30.

Fairmont Had a Dry Sunday.

Fairmont, W. Va., April 7.—"Nothing doing today," was the sign displayed in front of all of the saloons here yesterday. It was the first Sunday since the new mayor went into office, and the sign signifies that dry Sundays are to be observed.

LAWLESS ACTION EXPECTED.

Negroes Ordered From an Oklahoma Town and Threaten Resistance.

Guthrie, Okla, April 7.—April 6, the last day set for negroes to remain in Lawton, Okla., passed with no direct attacks on the colored people, but today is awaited with ominous silence. Many of the negroes have left, stating that they will not receive protection. Others, however, are determined to remain. The county officials have organized matters as well as possible to preserve order. One hundred deputies have been sworn in. The governor stated yesterday that if necessary he will use extreme means to thwart any lawless action, and he has the proffered assistance of the federal authorities.

Three Millionaires in Race.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 7.—The opening gun will be fired this week in the forthcoming fight between three millionaires in this state for a seat in the United States senate. The term of Senator Nathan B. Scott will expire in 1905, and the state senators elected this year will vote for his successor. Senator Scott will be opposed by Henry Schmulbach, a millionaire brewer of Wheeling, and James L. Caldwell, of Huntington, a millionaire barker.

SCRANTON'S STRIKE IS ENDED.

Scranton, Pa., April 7.—Scranton's six months' street car strike is at an end, and the men returned to work this morning. An agreement, secured through the work of various intermediaries, was signed last night by General Manager Silliman and the executive board of the strikers.

All the men are to be taken back at the small advance in wages recently announced by the company. Any man for whom the company cannot find a place immediately will be given a bonus equal to one-half the difference between $32.50 (a common laborer's pay) and the amount he was earning at the time of the strike. Many of the strikers have secured other employment temporarily. The idea is to have these continue at their temporary work, and allow the idle ones to have the places the company can immediately provide.

The barn men are given a flat increase of 7 per cent. The new schedule of the car men changes the minimum from 14 to 17 cents an hour, the maximum from 19 to 19½ cents an hour, and makes three years instead of five years the period in which the maximum rate can be earned.

Altoona, Pa., April 7.—The strike situation in this region remains unsettled, but the probability is a satisfactory decision may be reached today. All the unions in the field where the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal and Iron Company is interested held meetings yesterday, and delegates, one from each mine, were elected to act as a committee to meet Manager L. W. Robinson this afternoon at Punxsutawney.

A Funny Language.

The native dictionary of Samoa is interesting in the light it casts upon the Samoan character. I find "an impossibility, such as an old man getting a young wife." Another word means "to beg deliriously for fishhooks." "Unwelcome" is given, "such as a visiting party that is accompanied by neither a handsome man nor a pretty maid." The definition of "widow" or "widower" is synonymous with detached shellfish.

There are also definitions that show considerable thought and irony. "Meanness," for instance, can go no further than "to climb out on your own breadfruit tree to steal your neighbor's breadfruit." Faapuatama, like a trumpet blown by wild lads, blown anyhow and all times; so conduct without consideration. Popoga, to look owl eyed, as a person staring when food or property is being divided. "Good brown earth" describes an honest, unpretending man. To show how difficult the language is for the stranger I may say that the little word ta means I, we two, to beat with a stick, to play on a musical instrument, to reprove, to tattoo, to open a vein, to bail a cannon, to wash clothing by beating and to turn a somersault.—Century.

Her Vanity.

Some years ago a marble sculptor had his place of business on Penn avenue near Ninth street. A business man lost his wife, and he ordered a tombstone for her grave from the sculptor. It was to be a life size study of her. The figure was finished in due time and placed in the cemetery.

Several years passed, and the figure had not been paid for. The sculptor was a man of business, not given to sentiment, and he took the figure out of the cemetery, placing it on exhibition in a window at his place of business. It naturally attracted a good deal of attention, and one day a woman in passing stopped to look at it. She recognized the figure, but to make certain went in and asked the sculptor and found that she was correct.

The woman shook her head and said sadly, "Ah, Mary Jane was always a vain critter, but I never though she would go this far."—Pittsburg Press.

Mournful.

Toward the end of the mince pie stage Willie put down his spoon and pushed away his unfinished trifle.

"Why, Willie," said his father, "what's the matter? You look quite mournful!"

"Yes," replied Willie, "that's just it. I'm more'n full." And the innocent child wondered why everybody laughed.—London Globe.

Poor, Tired Papa.

"Johnnie," said his mother threateningly to the incorrigible, "I am going to have your father whip you when he comes home tonight."

"Please don't, mamma," replied Johnnie penitently. "Paw is allus so tired when he comes home."—Boston Post.

Official Ignorance.

The London Chronicle quotes a naval officer as saying that during the war of 1812 the British admiralty sent out to Kingston, Canada, where the British fleet was then stationed, a large number of water casks in the belief that Lake Ontario was a salt water lake.

Pity to Punish Both.

Spring's advent brings more sadness than joy to the quaint old Massachusetts town of Gloucester. It is then that the havoc wrought by wintry seas must be reckoned, and it is always great. While much of the wealth of the old fishing town is drawn from the ocean, it pays heavy toll. Out of a population of less than 30,000 more than a hundred men are drowned every year on the fishing banks—more than two a week.

Rudyard Kipling in his story "Captains Courageous" describes a curious custom of the old fishing town. It is an annual memorial service for the fishermen lost at sea. Early in spring a day is set for this sad ceremony. Families and friends of the lost ones and many leading citizens assemble to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of the dead. The services are simple—a prayer, a hymn, perhaps an appropriate poem is read; then, saddest of all, comes the calling the roll of the dead. Each name is read out, the silence broken only by the voice of the reader and the sobs of the bereft. So the dread record of the year is chronicled, month by month, the date and manner of each disaster detailed, so far as known. Thus Gloucester remembers its dead "toilers of the sea."

Although great improvements have been made in the last forty years in vessels and gear, the death rate has not been reduced. The vessels carry larger crews, make longer voyages, and the men take greater chances.

The Georges banks take the heaviest tribute. After them follow the banks of Newfoundland. But Gloucester's dead lie in the cold seas of many other places. The fisheries of Greenland, Labrador, and even Ireland and Norway have exacted toll from Gloucester's hardy fishermen.

captain and cook, according to the size of the craft. On the deck of the vessel abaft the mainmast are the dories. These typical New England deep sea fishing boats look clumsy, but are light to pull and excellent in a sea way. They have flaring bows and sterns and are sharp at each end.

In trawl fishing, which is the method most commonly employed, hand lines being too slow and tedious, the dories are used for laying and taking up the trawl lines. These run from 1,500 to 3,000 feet in length, with hooks tied a few feet apart. These lines are kept coiled in a tub and are paid out as the dory is rowed along. One end is fastened to a keg to serve as a buoy, so that it may be found again. An anchor is also attached that it may not drift away.

When the trawls are to be lifted, two men attend to them. The line is hauled over the side by one and the fish taken off. The other rebaits the hooks and drops them over again. In a rough sea this operation becomes very dangerous, for the weight of the sagging line is great, and many dories have been drawn completely under as a big swell struck them.

Every dory carries a tin horn for the purpose of signaling in case of fog. The banks are directly in the steamer track, and when the fog shuts down some one must keep constantly at the horn. Too often they are unheard by the men on the steamships, and the towering prow smashes a fishing schooner or dory to bits and continues on its way, while the passengers on board are not conscious that anything has happened.

One of the first smacks to be cut down by a steamship was the Gloucester schooner Sevo. It was run into by the steamer Huntress in 1839 and sank at once. All were lost except the captain and a boy. Since then there has been an appalling record of similar catastrophes.

The worst disaster that has happened to the Gloucester fishing fleet in recent years was caused by the great gale of Aug. 24, 1873, when nine vessels and 128 men were lost.

A Christian Nation Must Imitate Christ

I HAVE no sympathy with the Boxer movement. I have no sympathy with ignorance of any kind. But THE BOXER MOVEMENT IN CHINA IS NO WORSE THAN THOSE MOVEMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES WHERE IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE MAKE LOWER THE MORAL STATUS OF THOSE WHO COME FROM DISTANT LANDS. The United States is not free from oppression, as you undoubtedly know if you have read of recent occurrences.

The exclusion act which bars my countrymen from coming to your shores is as barbarous a measure as one could conceive of and totally at variance with your ideals and, above all, your Christianity. What is Christianity if it does not Christianize?

I HAVE BEEN TAUGHT TO BELIEVE THAT THIS IS A CHRISTIAN NATION, AND I HOPE IT'S SO, BUT THE CHRISTIAN ELEMENT IN THIS COUNTRY IN ORDER TO SHOW CHINA THAT IT NEEDS CHRISTIANITY MUST FIRST OF ALL BE ITS EXPONENT AND LIVE UP TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GREAT MASTER.

RISTORI AS A DIPLOMAT.

Ristori was charged with the mission of bringing round Prince Gortchakof to the side of Italian unity when she went in 1860 to a play at St. Petersburg. As the court was in mourning she was commanded to come and recite "Maria Stuarda" at the Winter palace. Mme. Ristori recited her great part and electrified the court. The czar shed tears.

After she retired from the room where the imperial party was to a salon filled with courtiers, the czarowitz brought up Prince Gortchakof and presented him. He had something to say about the emotional character of Ristori's recitation. He wondered how she could have been so deeply stirred by the sufferings of one who had perished so many centuries ago.

"I was not thinking of her," cried Ristori. "I was thinking of a living and discrowned martyr, supposed to be dead, but living. I was thinking of my beloved Italy. I wanted, under the image of Maria Stuarda, to represent to the minds of their imperial majesties the cause of Italian independence and unity, and I think they vibrated in unison with my patriotic efforts. I now want to convert you, prince, for I am afraid you think that Italy must not be resuscitated, though she has risen as if from the dead and is full of life, energy, hope."

Gortchakof answered in diplomatic commonplaces. At length he appeared moved by Ristori's eloquence and said: "I promise to refer the matter to his imperial majesty. You have not pleaded in vain."

Ralph Waldo Emerson's Spree.

There is an old tradition that tells how Ralph Waldo Emerson, the Sage of Concord, once went on a wild, reckless spree. Weary of Marcus Aurelius, Alcott and the serene heights of Concord, he resolved to make a plunge into the vortex of crime and folly in a great city to see vice and the vicious at close range and thus learn by experience of the underworld.

He went straight to the saloon of one Brigham in Boston, in those days farfamed among Harvard students as the aboriginal inventor of more "fancy drinks" than any one since the days of Father Bacchus. Bewildered by the festive scene and the endless list of beverages he had never heard of, he asked Brigham which one of the whole bibulous catalogue might be relied on to impart the largest sum total of experience in the shortest possible time, to which devout inquiry genial Brigham, who at once took in the situation, is said to have replied, "Oh, I guess a glass of lemonade would be the right thing for you!"—Boston Herald.

Supplied the Want.

A certain writer while in San Francisco visited the new house of an old friend, a gentleman of Irish extraction. The hostess evidently took great pride in the house, the furnishings of which were new and beautiful and gave every evidence of taste and refinement. The writer, who has an eye for the beautiful, gave unstinted praise to everything he saw.

"But," he said, "I am sorry to see that your house, beautiful as it is, lacks one ornament which no Irish house should be without."

"What is that?" she asked unsuspiciously.

The hostess' eyes sparkled.

"It did," she said indignantly, "but you have supplied the want."—New York Times.

Goldfish.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of goldfish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about and go round and round until fairly worn out.

LORD ROBERTS' SUCCESSOR

King Edward's Brother to Become Head of the British Army.

Queen Victoria's long cherished wish that her son be made commander in chief of the British army is about to be fulfilled, although she was unable to bring it about during her lifetime. For some time there have been rumors that Lord Roberts wished to retire. Now it is announced that the rumor is correct and that the hero of Kandahar is to retire in April and that he will be succeeded by the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's only remaining brother.

Cambridge, the late Queen Victoria was anxious that her son, the Duke of Connaught, should succeed to the command of the army. When her plans were defeated and the appointment of Lord Wolseley became necessary, she contented herself with the thought that at least her son could succeed Lord Wolseley. But Lord Roberts' capture of Cronje and the resulting wave of popular enthusiasm and the equally strong conviction that the war office must be reformed again defeated the queen's wishes, and Lord Roberts was made commander in chief.

But the abrupt removal of General Buller by Lord Roberts caused a revolution in feeling, and for the first time in his life the beloved "Bobs" heard hisses mingled with the cheers sent up in his honor whenever he appeared in public.

That was a bitter experience to a man so fond of popularity and is said to be one of the causes of his intention to resign. Another is his discovery that he is quite unable to cut the red tape that is bound so tightly around the war office by its civilian force.

And so at last the Duke of Connaught is to have his long looked for chance. He is a clever, kindly and popular man, who has the reputation of being a really good soldier, quite aside from his royal prestige.

The duke's personality is thought to be great enough to overcome any popular feeling that a more brilliant, energetic and forceful man should be placed at the head of the army.

Brains Make Soldiers.

A discussion recently took place in the smoking room of a Swiss hotel between a German and an American as to the merits of their respective armies. The former believed in discipline and trained troops. The American believed in training, too, but held that a lot depended upon the material trained. "Given," quoth he, "that brains are lacking, no amount of physical training will make up for them. Take the American troops, comparatively untrained, and see how well they fight. It's because of their brains."

"Nonsense," rejoined the aroused German. "Untrained troops can never stand against well drilled ones. Take your country, for example, with practically no drilled army. What would you do"— He paused impressively and then said, "What would you do if Germany landed an army of 250,000 perfectly drilled and perfectly equipped men on your shores?"

"Bury them," was the quiet but complete rejoinder.—Detroit Free Press.

FEED BABY SLOWLY.

Reasons Why Food Should Not Be Tumbled Rapidly Into the Little Stomach—Advice Which Applies to Grown Folks as Well as Babes.

Every groom knows and observes the rule in the care of a horse that rapid eating is fatal to digestion. There are all sorts of patent mangers to prevent the horse swallowing his oats too quickly. The man who has no patent manger knows enough, when necessary, to put a stone in the manger, scattering the oats around it, so that the horse may be compelled to eat slowly. If the horse's inclination is to gulp down water too fast, the careful man will put a big sponge in the water, compelling slow drinking.

A child's appetite, when he is allowed to eat rapidly, is always in excess of his actual needs unless the child is in bad health. The reason for this is extremely simple. The child craves food because his body requires to manufacture new tissue. He is growing, and he must not only replace the used up tissues that his daily life destroys, but he must make new flesh, new muscles, new bone and new blood every day, adding weight and size.

The sensation of hunger is not the craving of an empty stomach, satisfied as soon as the stomach is filled; it is a craving that is felt by the nerves all over the body. This craving cannot possibly be satisfied until the stomach has begun the work of transforming the food into blood, flesh, muscles, etc.; consequently the sensation which we call hunger persists long after the child or grown person has rapidly absorbed as much food as it really needs.

A million foolish parents urge their children to eat a great deal and always let them eat as much as they want to. Yet all of these know that a famished man taken off a wreck will eat himself to death if allowed to do so. The very hungry child goes to the same excess, only in a lesser degree. The great safeguard against that excess in eating, which kills 90 per cent of men before their time and which accounts for 99 per cent of children's diseases, is slow eating.

Nearly all children eat too rapidly. They do so by nature. Slow eating is a matter of education. But too often the mother or the nurse teaches the child the habit of eating fast. When the baby is little, it is fed one spoonful at a time. Before it has time to half chew or even gulp down the first teaspoonful of food another is held to its lips. Of course it swallows what it has in its mouth and seizes upon the next mouthful. The habit thus inculcated by foolish adults often ruins the child permanently.

Four factors count in the healthy assimilation of food, factors which parents and nurses should remember. Assuming the food to be properly prepared, thoroughly cooked and wisely selected, there comes, first, the work of the teeth, which prepare the food for easy digestion; second, the action of the saliva; with which the food must be thoroughly mixed in order to minimize the necessary work of the gastric juices in the stomach; third, the work of the stomach itself; fourth, and most important, a proper supply of blood and of heat.

Force your child to chew slowly and thoroughly every mouthful. If nothing else will do, compel him at frequent intervals to lay down his knife and fork that the importance of prolonged chewing may be impressed upon him. Don't allow your child to gulp down water or any other liquid with his solid food. If you allow him to drink while he eats, the salivary glands will not act. They will not need to act, for he will be able to swallow his food easily when it is made moist by water.

You can't do anything to help along the unconscious process which goes on in the stomach, but you can do everything to help that process by attending to the fourth necessity, which demands blood and the heat of the blood in the stomach. Allow no child after eating to take violent exercise, to study or even to read an exciting book. The brain has first call upon the service of the heart, and as soon as the brain is excited the blood leaves the stomach and goes to the head. The muscles also when too violently exerted draw the blood away from the stomach.

It is absolutely impossible for a child or a grown person to digest properly or to get strength and vitality from what he eats unless for at least a half hour after eating the stomach be allowed to monopolize the blood supply.

Children should be kept quiet in some way, especially very young children, after they have eaten. In the case of very young babies nature attends to this mercifully by making them go to sleep as soon as they have absorbed their milk. Older children ought not to go to sleep directly after eating for physiological reasons which may be explained at some other time; but they ought to be quiet and calm. Tens of thousands of children in homes where this newspaper is read are ruined in health by studying right after meals. The public school system which gives children too short a resting period in the middle of the day is responsible partly for this, and the home studies at night are also responsible.

Every word that is said here applies to grownup people, of whom not one in a hundred has ever been taught to apply to himself such common sense care as is bestowed on a second class horse.—New York Journal.

SCHOOL BOND ISSUE NOTICE

Notice is hereby given by the Board of Education of East Liverpool City School District that:

Whereas, The Board of Education of the City of East Liverpool, city district of the first class, has determined that it is necessary for the proper accommodation of the schools of said district to erect an eight room school building on lots numbers 3141, 3142 and 3143 in Bradshaw's addition to the city of East Liverpool, and

Whereas, The erecting and furnishing of said school building will require a greater tax upon the property of said district than the Board is authorized to levy, and

Whereas, In order to provide means therefor, it will be necessary to issue bonds; and

Whereas, The Board has estimated that the probable cost of erecting and furnishing said school building will be $20,000.00;

Now therefore, at the general election to be held in the city of East Liverpool on the 7th day of April, 1902, the following questions shall be submitted to the electors of the said school district:

QUESTION ONE.

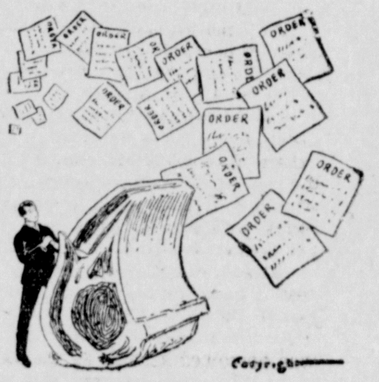

Shall taxes be levied for the purpose of erecting and furnishing a school house upon lots numbers 3141, 3142 and 3143, Bradshaw's addition to the city of East Liverpool, the probable cost thereof being $20,000.00?

QUESTION TWO.

Shall bonds be issued and a levy be made from year to year, after eight years from the date of the bonds sufficient to provide for the payment of $1,000 per year of the principal thereof?

V.—Henry David Thoreau.

THOREAU was born in the philosophers' town of old Concord, Mass. By the strictest economies his family helped him through Harvard, where he devoted himself to such studies as pleased him best. After graduation he earned a bare living by surveying, gardening and fence building, contriving always to get half of each day off to search fields and streams and woods for any new or old word which nature had to say to him. In this way he became a practical naturalist without troubling himself with the scientific side of research, as he had always been a lover of nature's common ways, seeing in them a hundred things which he fancied that most men do not observe. In this he was frequently mistaken, as in other things where he supposed himself to be the original observer. However, his own observation was always as good to him as a first class discovery, and he made the most of it. A great part of his charm as a writer is the naive simplicity with which he describes things as new that several other observers were already familiar with. But there are so many who have not observed them and others still who would rather read about them than get their feet wet in finding them that Thoreau will continue to be the best naturalist for readers at home, for as next to going a-fishing is to read Izaak Walton so a pleasanter diversion than to follow in Thoreau's tracks through thick and thin is to read how he made them and to hear him tell what he saw, even if one has seen it himself.

In 1845, at the age of twenty-eight, he built for himself a hut on a piece of woodland owned by Emerson on the edge of Walden pond. There he stayed as alone as his curious friends would permit for two years in order "to live deliberately and to front only the essential facts of life and transact some private business," as he said—that is, to write his book entitled "A Week on the Concord and Merrimac Rivers." Incidentally he also gathered material for "Walden," the other volume which was published in his lifetime. After his death [illegible] collected other writings of his, amounting to nine volumes more, but the first [illegible] readers as having the stamp of his own approval and consent to publish. Of [illegible] "The Week" is an account of such a boating excursion as any boy under fifty might be glad to make with brother or comrade on a stream running past his home.

Equally interesting is the account of his two years and two months' stay in the shanty by the pond, where he also wrote the bulk of "Walden; or, Life In the Woods." The entire book is the protest of a single man against what he considered the unnecessary and self imposed burdens of ordinary life. Even of his plain farmer townsmen he says: "How many a poor immortal soul have I met, well nigh crushed and smothered under its load, creeping down the road of life, pushing before it a barn 75 feet by 40 and 100 acres of land, tillage, mowing, pasture and wood lot! It is a fool's life, as they will find when they get to the end of it, if not before." Accordingly he attempts to show them how to live on 9 cents a day.

Some have not failed to point out that he did this by the direct or indirect assistance of those very fellow men of whom he pretended to be independent. Others have suggested that if a man chooses to live like a woodchuck he runs the risk of becoming like that animal in many respects. Probably the truth is that if he has lived forty years of his life like other men two years of aboriginal existence will not greatly harm him if he can stand it, especially if he has books for evening companions.

After a chapter on economy and shelter he says, "Near the end of March, 1845, I borrowed an ax and went down to the woods by Walden pond and began to cut some white pines for timber." He admits that it is hard to begin life without borrowing, but does not mention that the land on which he built was borrowed as well as the ax and the pine trees. The boards were bought of an Irish laborer who had worked on the railroad and was quitting his shanty. On the Fourth of July, by the assistance of neighbors at a "raising," he is able to declare his independence of society and begin his Robinson Crusoe life fully a mile from town. It was a good and safe place to descant upon the failures and foibles of communities since he could reach the store and the postoffice by an easy walk. For the church he professed to have no need, and it would not have known what to do with him fifty years ago. A chapter on architecture is suggested by his simple efforts in that direction, which had resulted in "a tight shingled and plastered house, ten feet wide and fifteen feet long and eight foot posts, with a garret and a closet, a large window on each side, two trapdoors, one door at the end and a brick fireplace opposite," at a total cost, exclusive of his own labor, of $28.12½. Then follows the account of his daily fare at a cost of 27 cents a week, another study in economics and dietetics which may be commended to persons having strong constitutions and a simple appetite. Rice he could devour in abundance "because he loved so well the philosophy of India," but it must have been a Yankee taste that helped him down "rye and Indian meal without yeast, potatoes, a very little salt pork, molasses, salt and my drink water."

Thoreau.

It is not [illegible] probable that the epidemic of transcendental [illegible]osophy of which he had an attack was at the bottom of his hermit life, as it was of the Brook Farm community experiment a few miles away in Roxbury. From a few kindred spirits trying to live in unity it was but a step to a single bachelor's attempt to establish the new kingdom of separation all by himself. It was the logic of the forefathers reduced to the absurd and the triumph of independency for—twenty-six [illegible]. Both experiments were failures, and a return to common sense and the town followed. Thoreau had succeeded in showing that one can camp for over two years not far from a country store and that he himself could meet all the expenses of living by working six weeks in a year, but his greater success was in telling of the incidental advantages and disadvantages. Even his first book did not add to his income, nearly the whole edition being returned unsold. Upon this incident he wrote philosophically, "I have now a library of 900 volumes, 700 of which I wrote myself." But his day of recognition came with the appreciative generation which followed his own. He had taken great pains to say what he knew in a clear and entertaining manner. Much time was at his command. He was industrious and patient. That was a part of one half. The other was the indeterminable quantity of a native talent which does not always go with leisure and diligence and ambition. The chapter on "Reading" in this very book shows what the writer of it thought of absorption and production. In that on "Sounds" another natural gift of observation is revealed, in "Solitude" the capacity to fraternize with nature in all its manifestations. "There can be no very black melancholy to him who lives in the midst of nature and has his senses still. While I enjoy the friendship of the seasons, I trust nothing can make life a burden to me. I find it wholesome to be alone the greater part of the time. To be in company, even with the best, is soon wearisome and dissipating. We are for the most part more lonely when we go abroad among men than when we stay in our chambers. A man thinking or working is always alone, let him be where he will. The really diligent student in one of the crowded hives of Cambridge college is as solitary as a dervish in the desert. We meet at very short intervals, not having had time to acquire any new value for each other. We meet at meals three times a day and give each other a taste of that old musty cheese that we are. Less frequency would suffice for all important and hearty communications."

Apart from his theories of social life, which are half truths, there are views of animal and bird and elemental life which none will dispute and many enjoy. All his books are an education in those things which are near, but not always clear to the unobservant. They are not discerned because always visible. In a double sense the wood is not seen for the trees. It is the unusual tree only that catches the eye. All the rest constitute the uniformity and blur of the forest.

This man's business was to say, "Stop and see what you are stumbling over unheeded." Above all, he calls attention to unsuspected relations between the higher and lower forms of nature, the sand leaves to foliage and the leaf to the palm of the human hand, the hillside to the face. Spring is an unceasing miracle of revival and growth, winter of sleep and rest and all the year a revelation. But in these obvious phenomena he finds unobserved byplay. "I heard the whooping of the ice in the pond, my great bedfellow, as if it were restless and would fain turn over. Sometimes I heard the foxes barking as if struggling for light and to be dogs and run freely in the streets, for may there not be civilization going on among brutes as well as men?" It is this intimacy with the finer and more distant voices of nature which makes him its skilled interpreter. He finds a sign as the Indian discovers a trail by a broken twig. He sees every bird or beast that had gone over the snow in the tracks it left, and they all were on friendly terms with him.

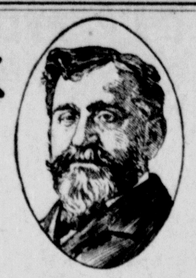

He understood men as well, although not fond of a crowd. Congenial companions were few for a man with truthful words and blunt speech and a certain dominating air of assumed superiority to conventionalities. His friend said, "I like Henry, but I cannot love him, and, as for taking his arm, I would as soon take the branch of an elm tree."

Altogether he has made a better impression, or at least a more pleasing, by his books than by his life, sincere and upright, truthful and in a way religious as it was. Readers will go with him in his "Excursions" who might not have enjoyed his company. He will take them even now as in a guidebook to Cape Cod and to Canada and the Maine woods in the volumes bearing these titles, and in four others named for the seasons he will lead them through unsuspected phases of nature in Massachusetts.

Such a man must be a poet, and this one wrote verse, but his prose poems will be preferred by most readers.

THE facility with which personalty can be removed either to another county or another state renders it a very unsatisfactory subject for taxation.

I AM OPPOSED TO TAXATION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY FOR THE REASON THAT IT ENABLES THE VERY RICH TO EVADE THE PAYMENT OF THEIR JUST SHARE OF THE REVENUE OF THE CITY OR STATE IN WHICH THEY RESIDE, WHILE ESTATES AND LEGATEES AND THE COMPARATIVELY POOR MUST BEAR THE BURDEN.

It is not only an easy matter for great capitalists to convert their holdings of personalty into government or city bonds, even though it be only temporarily, or other nontaxable assets, such as the stock of corporations, but they can with equal facility set up over against the enormous earnings in their business enterprises actual or even contingent debts, which so shrink their holdings as to make them practically untaxable. Or they can swear that their country homes in other states or even in other counties of the state are their actual legal residences and thus evade taxation. Recently in the settlement of a modest estate a widow was given by will a ten thousand dollar mortgage without the power of converting it into money. She has to pay her 2 per cent tax out of the 4½ per cent the money earns, leaving her but a trifle for her interest in the property. This is by no means an isolated case.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses of or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxes fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as amiable a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most abject coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year, and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.—New York Tribune.

Wonders In the Equine Foot.

The foot of a horse is one of the most ingenious and unexampled pieces of mechanism in the whole range of animal structure. The outside hoof is made up of a series of thin vertical laminæ of horn, about 500 in number. Into this are fitted about 500 more thin laminæ, which belong to the coffin bone, both sets being elastic and adherent. The edges of a quire of paper inserted leaf by leaf into another quire will furnish a good idea of the arrangement of the laminæ in all the feet, amounting to about 4,000. These are distributed in the most secure manner and in a way that every spring is acted upon in an oblique direction. Verily there is a display of nature's wonder everywhere.

Wintering in Colorado And Utah.

The climate of Colorado and Utah has long been world famous, but it is only within recent years that attention has been given to the delightful winter climate of these states. Today physicians all over the United States send their patients to Colorado and Utah to escape the rigors of eastern winters and to benefit by her invigorating atmosphere and health-giving sunshine.

It is not necessary to add an elaborate argument—the conclusion is self-evident and inevitable. The winter climate of Colorado and Utah on the whole presents advantages for the invalid and the pleasure-seeker that cannot fail to command attention.

An erroneous impression prevails that because the Rocky mountains have a high elevation the mercury in the thermometer drops down below zero in the winter season and stops there, and that the snow mounts up with the altitude. The fact is that the average precipitation of moisture in the lowlands of the mountain region during the entire year is only 14.15 inches. With such average precipitation there is practically no danger of snow blockades on the railroads, save at a few points exposed to drifts and these points have been amply protected. This is especially true of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western between Denver and Ogden at all seasons of the year. Facts speak for themselves, and the fact is that travel over "The Scenic Line of the World" has gone on with less interruption from snow blockades during the last ten winters than it has upon the majority of railroads in other localities which are popularly supposed to be more free from such delays than the mountain systems. A THEATRICAL REVIEW

A GOOD PLAY WELL PRESENTED.

Martha Morton's "The Diplomat" Fails to Score—Henrietta Crosman's Success as Rosalind and Her Plans.

At the new Savoy theater, in this city, Robert Edeson is delighting large audiences with his first stellar venture, "Soldiers of Fortune." The play selected gives opportunity for the natural and modest manner of the gentleman Mr. Edeson therefore does not seem to be acting. The book "Soldiers of Fortune" was the work of Richard Harding Davis. It was dramatized by Augustus Thomas. The story is interesting, contains much pretty sentiment and many bright lines and in some instances is strongly dramatic. I regret to add that it is a little incoherent, but if for no other reason it rivets the attention, as it is sufficiently vivid to make one wish to understand what it is all about.

Robert Edeson is a favorite with the New York theater going public, and his many friends must rejoice at his immediate success as a star. There is at all times in his acting the evidence of the true gentleman, and the role of Robert Clay affords him an opportunity to be—himself. Sincerity rings in Edeson's work, and a keen appreciation of the approval of the audience puts him in touch at once with those upon whose opinion so much in the career of a new star depends. So many good leading men and women make the mistake of attempting to star and find too late that the two positions are vastly different. It is therefore gratifying to see success reward some from the first.

Mr. Edeson's company is very good. Gretchen Lyons makes a very attractive Hope Langham and plays with vivacity and feeling. Harry Harwood as MacWilliams was to the life the hearty "old reliable" and added another laurel to those already won. Captain Stuart, as played by Guy Bates Post, was rather a disappointment. The character is a good one, but the actor did not quite rise to its possibilities. The opposite part to Captain Stuart was sustained by Dorothy Donnelly, formerly of the Murray Hill stock. She played Mme. Alvarez, the wife of the president, but she also fell short in her work. She was not convincing. The minor parts were all well carried out, especially one which in justice I must mention. Reginald King was played by an actor unknown to me, Macey Harlam by name. Macey Harlam is a coming actor and from the moment of his entrance seemed to be as perfectly at home on the stage as if he had known no other life.

the Madison Square theater and opened to a crowded house. I fear the change is not for the better, as there is not enough in it. Barring the intermissions, the entire play runs for only an hour and a quarter. The plot is so thin as almost to be beyond perception, and the situations are neither strong nor funny.

William Collier is a comedian who at once appeals to the sympathies of his audience and causes laughter even when he means to be taken seriously. He plays the role of Nick Sportwick delightfully, leaving nothing to be desired, and has with him an excellent company, but the play is not good. That talented actor Edward Abeles enacts the part of Edwards, the valet of Sportwick, and is every bit as good as the star. He is a gifted player, and Mr. Collier has been wise to so cast his characters that the servant and master strengthen the work of each other. A poor Edwards would have materially marred the effect of the star's own artistic efforts. It is always pleasant to see Edward Abeles' name on a programme, for it is usually a guarantee of good acting. Etienne Girardot was not up to his usual standard of excellence. In "The Diplomat" he does poorer work than I have ever seen from that gentleman, and his success in Mrs. Fiske's company recently only throws the present into sharper contrast. Isabel Urquhart, Nannette Comstock and Louise Allen played the principal female roles, the honors going to the last as Daisy Darling, the "Florodora" chorus girl.

It cannot be denied that Henrietta Crosman's revival of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at the Republic theater, in this city, has resulted in a triumph for that actress. It has been of greater benefit to her than the unqualified success of "Joan o' the Shoals" could possibly have been. This is due to the fact that if Miss Crosman had felt warranted in continuing Mrs. Sutherland's play throughout her engagement at the Republic there would still have been a large section of the theater going public which, while admitting Miss Crosman's ability in ordinary comedy or melodrama, would have treated with disdain her Shakespearean aspirations. So, after all, much real good to the actress has come from the sudden withdrawal of "Joan o' the Shoals."

Having thus, as it were, established herself upon a firmer foundation than she has yet occupied, Miss Crosman will now go back to that class of work which the public appears most to desire. Maurice Campbell, her husband and manager, evidently does not purpose being again caught in an emergency with but one work to rely upon. Accordingly he has secured several plays besides "The Baltimore Marriage," which was written by a priest and in which, rumor has it, the pope is to be a character.

If the present plans are adhered to "The Baltimore Marriage" will not be produced in the near future, as the manifestly necessary changes will consume a good deal of time. Early next month Miss Crosman will set out on a brief tour of the country for the purpose of testing the value of Mrs. W. K. Clifford's play, "Madeleine," and incidentally of capturing a few errant shekels. "Nance Oldfield" will also be given on tour, and if "Madeleine" should appear to contain the essentials of a great success the play written by the priest will probably have to wait until toward the end of next season. If "Madeleine" should fail, it is possible that "The Baltimore Marriage" will be given in September, although Mr. Campbell has still another play, "The Masque of the White Rose," which is shortly to be done in England by Fred Terry and his lovely and talented wife, Julia Neilson. Miss Crosman will thus enjoy the advantage of knowing just how one public at least regards one of her most important acquisitions, and if it should prove to be a striking success "The Masque of the White Rose" may still take precedence over "The Baltimore Marriage."

By JAMES J. JEFFRIES, Champion Pugilist of the World

THE famous shift or solar plexus punch of my next opponent, Bob Fitzsimmons, seems to be the main cause of worry for most of his opponents. At any rate, you will find by the records that "Lanky Bob" has put out many of his men by this blow. Ruhlin, Sharkey and Corbett are only a few that have dropped by the wayside.

DANGEROUS? OF COURSE IT IS IF YOU LET IT LAND. SO IS A HIND LEG OF A MULE IF YOU STICK YOURSELF IN ITS WAY.

My stomach has stood a lot of bad treatment in one way or another, but it would turn into giblets if Fitz's freckled fist landed that blow. I have got good natural protection down there, but I don't pretend to be an armored cruiser.

THE BEST WAY IS NOT TO LET THAT TRIPHAMMER LAND ON YOU. I made a study of Fitzsimmons' style when I won the championship from him and found I was able to protect myself from the blow. My crouching pose was part of the programme and kept my stomach well under cover. WHEN HIS FIST DID ENTER THE DANGER ZONE, I WAS CAREFUL TO CATCH ITS FORCE ON MY GLOVE.

Bar this one blow, and I am not afraid of Fitz's powers. His hard punches in other places I can stand and shoot in a few myself. He will tire himself out, and I will be as fresh as a daisy. I have his strong point coppered, and that's half the fight.

FISTIANA

Bob Fitzsimmons, who has engaged Gus Ruhlin as a sparring partner, makes the statement that he considers Ruhlin an exceedingly clever man and that the Akron giant will yet be heard from in the ring.

Benny Yanger says he will fight no more good men at 126 pounds, a mark that forces him to give away several pounds in weight.

The American and Pyramid Athletic clubs are the only ones in Chicago that are making money. The others have found it hard sledding up to date.

Terry McGovern is to make himself useful in the management of the stable of thoroughbreds of which he is part owner and which run under the name of Sullivan & Harris.

At the present time Jeffries weighs about 240 pounds and Fitzsimmons scales at 175 pounds. Jeffries will reduce to about 220 and Fitzsimmons will try to build up for the fight which takes place in May.

Kid McCoy is spending the winter at Monte Carlo. He is accompanied by Charley Mitchell. The bank is still running.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

The Retort Judicial.

When Judge Barnard was on the bench and holding court in Poughkeepsie, a lawyer who did not like him chanced to see a one cent coin lying on the floor. Picking it up and holding it forth in ostentatious display, he said:

"I imagine, your honor, from the value of this coin, that it must belong to the court."

"And I imagine," replied Judge Barnard, "that if it was not such a small coin the court never would have seen it."—New York Times.

Too Attractive.

"Now, here," said the salesman, "is a very fine umbrella. The handle, you will observe, is especially attractive."

"That's just what I want to avoid. Every umbrella I ever owned has been entirely too attractive."—San Francisco Post.

A COOL RECEPTION.

It Was Not Surprising, Though, In View of the Explanation.

Letters of introduction are not invariably serviceable. For one reason, they may be too frank. Harry Furniss in his "Confessions of a Caricaturist" says that when a brother artist was setting forth on his travels in foreign climes he was provided with a letter of introduction to a certain British consul.

The writer of the letter inclosed it in one to the artist, saying that he would find the consul a most arrant snob, a bumptious, arrogant humbug, a cad to the backbone. Still, he would probably offer some courtesies to any one who had a good social standing and thus compensate the traveler for having to come in contact with such an insufferable vulgarian.

On the return of the artist to England the writer of the letter asked how he had fared with the consul.

"Well, my dear fellow," drawled the artist, "he did not receive me very warmly, and he did not ask me to dinner. In fact, he struck me as being rather cool."

"Well, you do surprise me," rejoined his friend. "He's a cad, as I told you in my letter, but he's very hospitable, and I really can't understand this state of things. You gave him my letter of introduction?"

"Why, I thought so; but, do you know, on my journey home I discovered it in my pocketbook. So I must have handed to him instead your note to me about him!"

On Dying Poor.

Slowly but surely our great millionaires are following Mr. Carnegie's example. Odd that a man should spend two-thirds of his life trying to get rich and the remainder in trying to die poor.—Atlanta Constitution.

Hospitality.

"Mrs. Jones is a lavish entertainer."

"Yes, I'm told she has no regard for expense."

"None whatever. She even goes so far as to play a square game of bridge."—Life.
